HYMNS RESOUND AS 40,000 JOIN BAPTIST RALLY

Atlanta, Ga., July 22.—[U. P.]—Baptists from all parts of the earth sang and prayed on a baseball field here today as the sixth congress of the Baptist World alliance opened amid the settings of an oversized, old time camp meeting.

Dr. George W. Truett, President of Baptist Alliance.

More than 40,000 messengers [delegates] overflowed Ponce de Leon baseball park in what was described as one of the largest religious assemblies ever held.

The gathering had more the aspects of a mammoth revival than an international assembly of church leaders.

"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," sang the perspiring, sun-baked thousands after marching through the streets, to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers" on their way to the baseball field, only available meeting place large enough to accommodate such a crowd.

Color Line Disappears.

Foreign messengers in strange, native costumes stood arm in arm with their American brethren as their accents blended in the old revival hymns.

The customary southern color line virtually disappeared as Negroes and whites thronged the assembly field together. The Rev. Dr. C. D. Hubert, prominent Negro pastor here, spoke for all Baptists of Georgia in welcoming the messengers. The Rev. Dr. Lacey K. Williams, Negro clergyman of Chicago, responded for the National Baptist convention.

The crowd cheered when Dr. Williams asserted: "We gather here today, many races and nations, but under the cohesive principle, 'One Lord, one faith and one baptism, one God and Father of all.'"

The congress was opened officially by the alliance president, the Rev. Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Tex. Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke of London, England, secretary of the alliance, presented the messages from President Roosevelt and David Lloyd George, former British prime minister, a leading Baptist layman.

Refers to Roger Williams.

The President urged the Baptists to defend "many of the cherished institutions of free government" from challenges of irreligious elements in wide areas of the earth.

"The members of the Great Baptist communion have a peculiar heritage of devotion to the principle of religious freedom," the President wrote. "As inheritors of the noble tradition of Roger Williams [founder of the First Baptist church in America] their place must ever be among those who uphold freedom of conscience."

Lloyd George called on his fellow communicants to "recall mankind to the great spiritual verities" now challenged, he said, by men and barbaric forms of paganism.

Senator George Gives Welcome.

An official welcome to the messengers was extended at the opening session by Senator Walter F. George [D., Ga.], Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgia and Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta. Lieut. Gov. Albert Matthews of Ontario, Canada, treasurer of the world alliance, responded for the foreign delegations.

Atlanta bulged at the seams under the load of visiting Baptists. Hotels, apartment houses, and numerous college dormitories in this section were overflowing. The brethren from lands across the seas were provided free lodging in Atlanta private homes.

Street car and automobile trafic in the business district was halted for several hours by crowds gathered to watch the religious procession.

Tomorrow Dr. Truett will present his presidential address in which he is expected to attack foreign states for their suppression of religious minorities.

[A story on the participation of Baptists of the Chicago area in the Atlanta congress will be found in part 3, the metropolitan section.]

SPEND AND LEND PROGRAM GOES ON FOR 7 YEARS

New Deal Insists It's Way to Prosperity.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—More than 15 billion dollars has been expended or loaned by the federal government to aid farmers in the last seven years.

This vast outpouring of government money in rural America has been made and is being continued in pursuance of the economic theory that inasmuch as the United States is preponderantly an agricultural nation the corner stone of its prosperity is a prosperous farming community. Enable the farmers to buy the products of industry and you will enable working men to buy farm products, thus bringing prosperity to all, according to this theory.

Millions Still Jobless.

With 10 million persons still out of work the soundness of the theory has been called in question and many are the explanations that are being heard these days in official Washington. The majority opinion seems to be that the theory is still sound and that the reason for its failure to achieve the desired results is that not enough government money has been invested in the farming industry to make it really prosperous. Congress is giving heed to the remedy of this supposed shortcoming.

Of the 15 billion dollars laid out on agriculture 3 billion comprise subsidies paid to farmers for crop curtailment and 7 billion represent loans. The soil conservation and other subsidies, which touched 700 million in the fiscal year ended last June 30, will approximate 1 billion dollars in the current fiscal year.

Classification of Aid.

During the fiscal years 1933 to 1939, inclusive, the federal government's expenditures and loans in aid of farmers are classified as follows:

Department of agriculture expenditure [1933-'39]	$ 4,870,000,000
Farm Credit administration [loans]	5,500,000,000
Commodity Credit corporation [loans]	1,300,000,900
Bureau of reclamation expenditures	336,000,000
Work Progress administration expenditures [rural roads and appurtenances]	*2,000,000,000
Rural Electrification administration [loans]	229,698,330
Civilian Conservation corps projects to aid agriculture	*800,000,000
Funds sent home by rural CCC enrollees	*250,000,000
Total	$15,285,698,330

*Estimate.

In an analysis of department of agriculture expenditures for the seven years presented in the next table it will be noted that the largest items are 3 billion for the subsidies of the agricultural adjustment program and 700 million for the resettlement of farmers under the program of the farm security administration. The total department expenditures rose from 55 millions in 1933 to more than 1 billion in 1939.

Distribution of Expenditures.

Distribution of the agriculture expenditures for the 1933-'39 period, compiled chiefly from the annual reports of the secretary of the treasury, with 1939 figures estimated, follows:

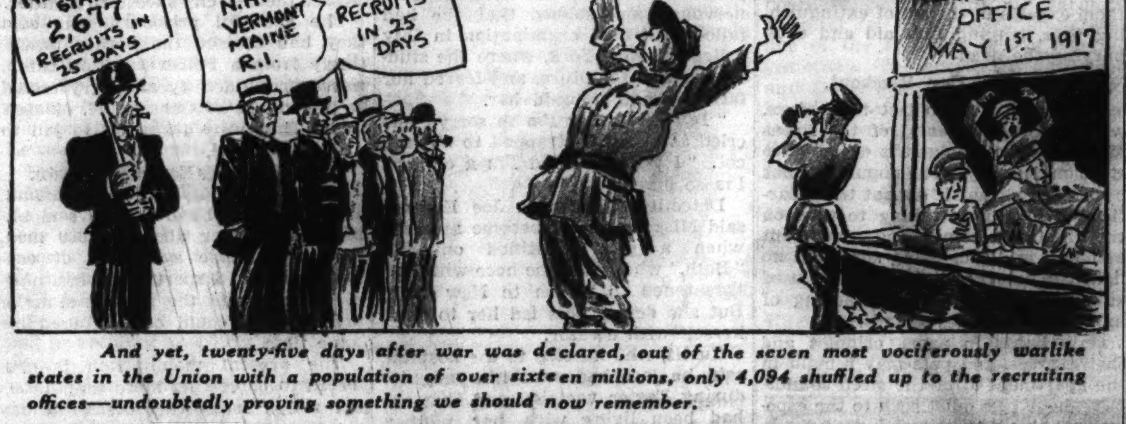
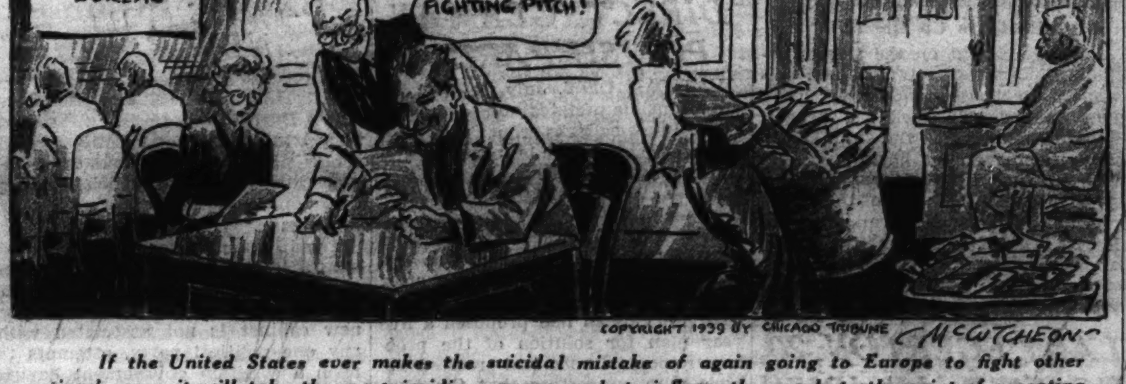
Indiana Girl Slain; Seize Suspect

U. S. RECRUITING IN THE WORLD WAR AND IN THE NEXT

In 1917 there was so much belligerent war talk in certain eastern states that we were led to believe those states were united as a man in the desire to enlist the instant war was declared.



And yet, twenty-five days after war was declared, out of the seven most vociferously warlike states in the Union with a population of over sixteen millions, only 4,094 shuffled up to the recruiting offices—undoubtedly proving something we should now remember.



If the United States ever makes the suicidal mistake of again going to Europe to fight other nations' wars, it will take the most insidious propaganda to inflame the people to the point of accepting the drastic conscription measures that will be necessary.

Lie Test Given to Worker at Country Club

BULLETIN.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 23 (Sunday).—Thomas Boyce was given a lie detector test at state police headquarters here at 3 a. m. The results were not given out, but police said they expected to question Boyce the rest of the morning. Dr. Cleo Harger of the Indiana university medical school was examining certain articles of clothing belonging to Boyce to determine whether they showed human blood stains.

Attica, Ind., July 22.—[Special.]—Tom Boyce, young groundskeeper at the Harrison Hills Country club, was taken into technical custody late tonight for questioning in connection with the murder of Elizabeth De Bruicker, 11 years old, member of the sixth grade at Logan Township school.

Arrow points to scene of crime.

Her body was found this afternoon, after an overnight search, in a shallow washout on a hillside adjoining green No. 4 of the country club. She had been attacked and strangled. The girl was last seen at 1:30 p. m. yesterday when she left a meeting of a 4-H club at Attica to meet her sister, Loretta, 13, at the club for a swim in the pool.

Two Hitch-Hikers Suspected.

Since the finding of the body suspicion had been directed at and search was being made for two hitch-hikers who were seen washing at a watering trough on the farm of George Stafford, on whose property Elizabeth's body was found. Then suddenly Indiana state police and Police Chief Jesse Cooper took Boyce into custody. He is 25 years old, married, and has one child. Several years ago he was arrested in connection with molestation of a 9 year old girl.

News that a man was in custody attracted a crowd of 300 townspeople to the city jail. Although the crowd was not threatening, the authorities removed Boyce through a side door and spirited him to Indianapolis. It was announced he would be given a lie detector test.

Find Mud Stained Shirt.

Police said they found one of Boyce's shirts, which appeared to be blood stained and mud stained. They also found a shovel in his house whose marks closely match the shovel marks at the girl's hastily dug grave. Another circumstance that interested police, they said, was that Boyce admitted working near where the body was found yesterday, when, presumably, the murder was committed.

In addition Boyce made several remarks that need clarification, according to police. He said he saw searchers remove Elizabeth's body from the grave. None of the searchers remembers seeing Boyce at the time. Also Boyce said the girl wore stockings of a certain color when her body was removed. Police declared she did have on such stockings, but that spectators could not have seen them when the body was found because it immediately was covered with a sheet.

The victim was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter De Bruicker. They were not immediately alarmed over her absence, believing she had gone to visit friends. Finally they asked O. L. Stewart, former sherif of Warren county, to organize a search.

BRITAIN'S PACT WITH JAPS SEEN AS 'NEW MUNICH'

Called Move to Win Tokio's Friendship.

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, July 23 [Sunday].—Great Britain was believed here today to have made a complete about face in its far eastern policy. Well informed observers expected that this ultimately would cause Japan to return to its traditional stand of close friendship with England.

Seen in this light, the memorandum signed Friday night by Sir Robert Craigie, the British ambassador, and Hachiro Arita, Japanese foreign minister, may be regarded as more significant to the far east than the Munich agreement to carve up Czecho-Slovakia was to Europe.

Seen as Clever British Move.

The agreement, under which Britain recognizes that abnormal relations exist between Japan and China and promises to check such acts as may be to China's advantage and Japan's disadvantage, also undoubtedly will have far reaching significance on the European situation.

It definitly removes the possibility of Japan taking sides in European affairs, some claimed. These observers, therefore, interpreted the agreement as a clever diplomatic move by Britain and attributed this brilliant diplomacy to Ambassador Craigie.

[In London a British foreign office spokesman said Tokio reports concerning Britain's attitude in negotiations with Japan on China policies should be accepted with caution. The spokesman referred to statements by Japanese officials hailing as a "great victory" for Japan the result of negotiations between Ambassador Craigie and Foreign Minister Arita. Specifically, the spokesman declared that "there is no foundation for the belief that Britain will withdraw support from Chinese currency."]

Negotiations to Continue.

Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, Foreign Minister Arita and other statesmen warned the people not to feel reassured, since the negotiations with England have not yet been concluded. Premier Hiranuma said the agreement was reached only on principles and that the most difficult task [that of solving specific problems] lies ahead. This will have to be worked out by experts, he said.

The premier said that the Japanese government's policy is to respect foreign rights and interests in China. So far as investments were concerned, he said, Japan is not taking the policy it adopted after the Russian-Japanese war, when foreign economic penetration of Manchuria was rejected. [Japan turned down the offer of the late E. H. Harriman at that time to buy the railways.]

American Slain in Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, July 22.—[U. P.]—A sudden outbreak of terrorism in which an American was killed in Shanghai, a widespread surge of anti-British activity, and reports of new soviet war threats in Manchukuo marked intensification tonight of Japan's drive to establish a new order in East Asia.

Four persons were killed when police battled terrorists who raided a plant housing anti-Japanese publications. About fifteen Chinese were wounded and one was arrested.

While Japanese in twelve Chinese cities increased their pressure against Great Britain, a band of ten or fifteen Chinese terrorists, who police said were pro-Japanese, raided the plant of the Chinese-American Daily News, which has been strongly opposed to Japan.

American Sailors Periled.

In the ensuing turmoil, international settlement police shot and wounded six of the terrorists as they fled toward the Japanese area of Shanghai in taxicabs.

Albert F. Wilson of Philadelphia, a bartender popular among American sailors of the Asiatic fleet, was fatally wounded by a stray bullet fired by the terrorists. He died after an operation. Twenty American sailors narrowly escaped the flying bullets. A Russian cabaret girl was killed by a stray bullet.

One Chinese printer was killed and

Two Sisters Stake a Claim to Postoffice

Rockville, Md., July 22.—(AP)—Rockville dedicated its new $77,000 postoffice today after police routed two elderly sisters who hammered no trespassing signs into the lawn and ordered everybody to "get off our property."

The sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Wimsatt and Mrs. Genevieve Tschiffely of Washington, said they were among eight heirs of the former owner of the site and had received nothing from the government. The land was condemned last year.

They Swing a Hatchet.

The sisters drove up to the white limestone structure an hour before the dedicatory service was to begin.

Alighting from the car with an armful of "no trespassing" signs and followed by a chauffeur with a hatchet, Mrs. Wimsatt warned workmen:

"Take to your heels, this is our property."

She and her sister then went to the left of the building. With a sign poised over the turf, Mrs. Wimsatt turned to the chauffeur, "Perkins, bring me the hatchet."

"Get off the grass!" he said, and seized the sign to pull it up. Bam! The hatchet hit his thumb.

Routed by Police.

Chief of Police Charles M. Orme finally threatened to arrest them and the sisters got off the property.

As they were leaving, Mrs. Tschiffely saw that a workman had replaced a "no trespassing" sign with one reading "keep off the grass." She snatched the placard from its post and yelled to Wroe: "There, skinny face!"

While the dedicatory address was delivered by Smith W. Purdum, fourth assistant postmaster general, the sisters wrote down the names of all those they saw on the property and said they would prosecute for trespassing.

The list included Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe, Maryland Democrats.

HARVESTS TOMATOES FROM POTATOES HE PLANTED IN GARDEN

Portland, Ore., July 22.—(AP)—William Kennard planted some potatoes last spring. Tomatoes came up.

Puzzled, Kennard pulled up the plants and looked at the roots. There were potatoes on them.

How the two vegetables could be growing on the same stalks mystified Kennard. Botanists said the tomato and potato are closely related in plant life, but despite the relationship, they thought the mixture very strange.

25,000 GALLONS OF WHISKY MIXED IN ONE HIGHBALL

Baltimore, Md., July 22.—(AP)—A highball big enough to float a battleship was mixed here today—the recipe was 25,000 gallons of imported whisky stirred into Chesapeake bay.

Customs officials supervised the mixing when an importer decided it was cheaper to jettison the cargo than to pay heavy import duties.

The dumped whisky, at per pint prices, was estimated as worth $200,000.

Only 155 Days More—This Town Shops Early

Bloomington, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—Lexington, 15 miles north of here, is doing its Christmas shopping early. A Christmas tree with colored lights and tinsel shines in the Presbyterian church. Underneath it today were hundreds of gifts. The church's mission circle thus draws attention to the need to get Christmas gifts ready now for children in foreign missionary schools. Miss Eunice Blackburn will leave next month for Merida, Yucatan, and on Christmas day, 155 days from tomorrow, will distribute the gifts to Merida's children.

Two Fingers Above Water Bring Dad to Son's Rescue

Bloomsburg, Pa., July 22.—(AP)—When young Billy Laufman, who can't swim, fell into a creek beyond his depth, he held his breath and reached up as far as he could. His father saw two fingers sticking above the water and pulled him out.

Planes to Join Hunt for Pastor Held by Arabs

JERUSALEM, July 22.—(AP)—British troops, war planes, and police prepared tonight to seek the Rev. Gerould R. Goldner, kidnaped Ohio pastor, as failure to contact his Arab abductors diminished hope for ransoming of the American.

American Consul General George Wadsworth said action was being taken to launch the search probably tomorrow in the Moab hills, where the 29 year old Mogadore, O., preacher has been held since Tuesday for $5,000 ransom.

The latest disappointment came tonight when a search of the Bethlehem countryside, touched off by an anonymous telephone call from Bethlehem, proved fruitless.

Fail to Find Captive.

The message from Bethlehem said the Arabs were ready to release the American, but Bedouin tribesmen were unable either to trace the call or to find any clew to the whereabouts of the kidnap band.

The pastor's father, Dr. Jacob Goldner, Cleveland, O., minister, who was captured at the same time but released to obtain the ransom payment, collapsed under the strain and was ordered to bed. He had been preparing to seek the kidnap band himself.

The elder Goldner, who was conducting his son through the biblical Holy Land, which he visited alone thirty-five years before, said he was confident the young minister was safe.

Wife Sends Message.

A message from young Goldner's wife in Cleveland was received saying she was praying constantly for her husband's safe return. The message concluded:

"Tell Gerould baby cut another tooth."

[It was announced in Cleveland that members of the Euclid Christian church, the elder Goldner's home church, had cabled an offer of $5,000 to pay the ransom.]

two were wounded in the newspaper plant, which also houses the American owned China Press and one British owned Chinese newspaper.

A Chinese street car driver was killed and another wounded by the explosion of a hand grenade.

Police Seize Explosives.

Municipal police later found two hired cars used by the terrorists abandoned near the so-called bad lands of the Japanese occupied area. They also arrested two armed Chinese after wounding one of them believed to be connected with the terrorists.

The chauffeurs of two of three cars used in the raid were picked up by police. They said they had been forced to drive the cars.

Police seized two rifles, one pistol, several hand grenades, and other explosives after exchanging more than 100 shots with the terrorists.

The shooting coincided with two other developments:

1. A series of anti-British meetings in many Chinese cities which, according to Japanese dispatches, protested British discrimination against Japan. The most important meeting appeared to have been at Peking, where the mayor of the provisional government announced adoption of sixteen anti-British measures and warned the British residents to move into safety zones and not to visit scenic spots. The statement also included a warning to British to be cautious in walking in the streets because it had been decided to boycott them and to refuse coöperation with any British enterprises.

New Soviet Threat Reported.

2. Reports from Japanese sources of renewed soviet military threats against Manchukuo. Soviet artillery fire on the Mongolian-Manchukuan border and Russian airplanes penetrating deeply into Japanese controled territory were reported by Domei [Japanese] news agency.

[Dispatches from Moscow reported that Mongol-soviet army headquarters had issued a communique saying Japanese-Manchukuan troops were repulsed in several attacks in the Lake Bor region of Mongolia. The communique said the attacks were continuing. Fourteen of a squadron of 120 Japanese planes were downed and two pilots captured in an aerial battle over soviet Mongolian soil, the communique said. It added that the soviets lost three planes.]

The Japanese admiralty in Tokio announced that Japanese destroyers were cruising in the waters of Sakhalin Island, where Japan has been in controversy with Russia over oil supplies from the Russian half of the island. Only small vessels are suitable for operation in those waters, officials said.

The American consulate at Hankow, meantime, protested to Japan against an incident at Chenglingki, where Japanese occupied the Socony-Vacuum Oil installation above the Hankow junction of the Yanktze and Shan rivers. The Chinese staff was evicted and the American flag was lowered and destroyed.

FRANCE OFFERS PREMIUMS FOR LARGE FAMILIES

PARIS, July 22.—(AP)—A legal code to encourage larger families was completed today on behalf of the government and will be submitted to the cabinet next week for approval. The code, effective immediately after formal approval, contains the following main provisions subject to change:

A cash premium for the first child; all families, regardless of class, eligible; smaller premiums for each succeeding birth.

A tax on bachelors and childless couples to help finance the program, which also will be aided by the national budget.

A "family vote." By this system a father would have a vote for each of his children in addition to his own.

Stricter punishment for abortion.

Tightened restrictions on white slavery and a ban on display or sale of obscene publications.

Heavier punishment for trafic in narcotics and new restrictions to discourage alcoholism.

URGES CABINET JOBS BE GIVEN TO CHURCHILL, EDEN

AYR, Scotland, July 22.—[U. P.]—Inclusion of Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden in the British cabinet was urged today in a speech by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader.

"Prime Minister Chamberlain, because of the distrust which his foreign policy has inspired and by refusing to admit to his cabinet any of the well known advocates of collective security, is at this moment the greatest single obstacle to national unity," Sinclair said.

BRITAIN DISOWNS ANY CONNECTION WITH PEACE PLAN

But Talk of Negotiations Goes On, Anyway.

LONDON, July 22.—(AP)—The British government disowned today any connection with widely reported appeasement discussions with Germany. At the same time some political quarters said they sensed dangerous implications in Nazi predictions of a peaceful Danzig settlement.

A foreign office spokesman called fantastic reports published here and abroad that preliminary negotiations already were in progress looking to a general European settlement, such as Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain has talked about.

Yet there were strong indications that whether or not they had attained official status or reached the negotiating state, discussions were going on in important political quarters on possible terms of a long range agreement to satisfy Germany.

Aware of Discussions.

Some members of the government, including Chamberlain, were understood to be aware of the discussions but held this was not a favorable time to put an official stamp on them. Indignant official denials that any appeasement overtures had been made or were contemplated in the near future were based largely on the fear that Germany might interpret the reports as a sign of weakening in the British position.

Some observers saw indications of such a German interpretation in a Berlin foreign office spokesman's confident forecast yesterday that the Danzig dispute would not lead to war and that Britain would bring pressure on Poland eventually to let the free city rejoin Germany. Britain has pledged assistance to Poland should Poland consider its interests in Danzig periled by Germany.

Fear Effect on Soviet Talks.

Government quarters also stressed the possible harmful effects on British-French negotiations with soviet Russia for a mutual assistance pact as the result of any indication Britain was trying secretly again to appease Germany.

Menacing features also were found in the German statement by some political and diplomatic observers who attached great importance to the reference to "the possibility of a non-peaceful solution" of the Danzig problem.

The Yorkshire Post, for instance, declared that "while the pronouncement is launched as a trial balloon to test public opinion in this and other countries, so far from having a pacific character it will be seen to involve exactly the same menace of force as was employed so successfully last September to secure the surrender of Czecho-Slovakia without a blow."

Desire to Shift Blame.

Others voiced the opinion that the German aim was to shift the responsibility to Poland for any difficulties which might arise over Danzig.

Among the reported schemes for a general settlement was one to grant Germany a loan of $4,680,000,000 and internationalize colonies in return for general disarmament and supervision of Germany's arms industry.

Talk about a huge loan being granted to Germany centered around the visit here of Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, German economic expert, who returned to Berlin today and denied any such negotiations. Wohlthat's announced mission in London was to attend a conference on whaling.

Nazis Take a Week-end of Rest.

BERLIN, July 22.—(AP)—German officialdom closed office doors for the week-end today, expressing the conviction that no move was in the offing to cause anxiety for anybody. Surprise was still professed over international repercussions to an official spokesman's reiteration yesterday of German confidence that Danzig will be regained soon without bloodshed and on Germany's terms.

Officials watched foreign speculation about possible loans to the reich, international programs for appeasement and reductions in German armaments.

"Nobody in England need assume, said the newspaper Nachtausgabe, "that Germany will consider seriously a 'plan' that contemplates compelling Germany to disarm and submit to international control at the same time that English and French armaments remain and that the encirclement policy continues."

Lokalanzeiger, evidently reflecting official opinion, said:

"Germany never again will be willing to sell her freedom of action as regards armaments for a mess of pottage."

BERLIN TO FIGHT FANCIED FOE IN A 3 DAY BLACKOUT

Million Civilian Experts to Direct Crowds.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 22.—The German capital was preparing today for the biggest blackout of its history. The blackout will reveal how thoroughly the Nazis have made their anti-air raid preparations.

These preparations unquestionably have been very meticulous, even though in recent weeks Berliners have taken pains to tell tourists that "we Germans are not thinking of war, we are not even organizing air raid precautions the way England is."

Close to a million Berliners are in the Nazi air raid organization. They have completed courses which make them experts in the art of extinguishing fires, lending first aid and even burying the dead.

A Three Day Blackout.

The blackout is to last three days, with general rehearsal of the sirens Monday. The blackout is expected to start on Tuesday. The population has been warned that it cannot truly participate by simply failing to turn on the lights in homes and apartment buildings and thus being sure that no light can emerge—lights must be used as usual until the siren warning of approaching planes sounds.

Only babes in arms, cripples and their nurses, and pets may remain in the apartment after the siren sounds. Everybody else must rush to the especially prepared cellars and shelters. The air protection guard responsible for each house will issue orders and those who refuse to obey his orders face police punishment.

Must Tie Up Horses.

Anybody caught on the streets, including bicyclists, motorists, and passengers in busses and street cars, must immediately seek the nearest air raid shelter when the siren starts. Only the drivers of horse carriages may remain with their animals, but they must take them out of the traces and tie them to any available solid object. This is to prevent the horses from running wild when the sham battles start above the German capital.

LADY EGERTON, 20, TO WED AN IRISH JOCKEY, AGED 32

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 22.—The secret engagement of Lady Alexandra Egerton, sister of the earl of Wilton, to Pat Beasley, a red haired Irish jockey, was disclosed today. She is 20 years of age and he is 32.

Lady Egerton herself made the announcement. She said she had been engaged to the jockey for a year. They met at Newmarket, a famous center of sport. She said it was love at first sight.

Lady Egerton is a ward in chancery—which means that control of her fortune is in the hands of a court. She has received the court's permission to wed, it was said.

Flight Record Set

FELIXSTOWF, England, July 22. -- [Special.] — The 15 ton patrol bomber that was delivered to the British royal air force from America last week set a record in that it was the first military airplane ever to be delivered by air across the Atlantic ocean. The flying boat flew all the way from the plant of the Consolidated Aircraft company in San Diego, Cal. It made the overwater hop in 16 hours.

FILM DIRECTOR'S DAUGHTER CUTS ARM WITH RAZOR

Hollywood, Cal., July 22.—(AP)—Katharina Curtiz, 24 years old, daughter of Film Director Michael Curtiz, was treated at a hospital today for slashed wrists and arms.

A member of the police psychopathic detail said she was "highly nervous" and sobbed that she had failed in a final examination in City college of New York, where she studied art and sculpture, and feared her father would upbraid her.

"Tell my father I'm so sorry," she cried as she was strapped to an iron cot. "I was rash and I'm a coward. I'm so lonely."

Detective Lieutenant Joe Everson said Miss Curtiz had become incensed when a girl, identified only as "Beth," who had come here with her, threatened to return to New York. But she denied this led her to slash herself with a razor.

Curtiz, who hurried to the hospital, said he last had seen his daughter during Easter vacation and that she had been living with her mother, from whom he was divorced in 1923.

HEAR POPE SEEKS DIRECT GERMAN, POLISH PARLEYS

VATICAN CITY, July 22.—[U. P.]—Responsible prelates said today that Pope Pius believes that European peace efforts should be concentrated on encouraging direct negotiations between Germany and Poland for solution of the Danzig problem. The pope's attitude toward possible solution of the Danzig conflict was disclosed in authoritative sources after church officials had denied reports that the Vatican had proposed a five year plan for solution of the problem. Reports abroad had credited the pope with suggesting that the Free City continue in its present status for five years so that tension might be eliminated before a final solution is attempted.

Prelates said that it is contrary to traditions of the holy see for the pope to make any concrete proposals of a political nature.

DANZIGERS GROW MORE CONFIDENT OF ESCAPING WAR

Look to Certain Reunion with Germany.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, July 22.—(AP)—A feeling of confidence that the Danzig problem would be solved fairly soon—and solved without war—grew perceptibly today in the Nazi dominated free city.

All but a few shared the belief that Danzig would be regained by Germany peacefully, but it was impossible to find a tangible reason for the new expectancy, which was apparent everywhere from the Danzig senate down to the docks where men said "it's coming soon."

This optimism seemed to have been inspired by a hint from Berlin, but no one in official circles would admit that was the case.

Peace Note in Newspaper.

Confidence of officials that the change would be accomplished peacefully was emphasized by the newspaper Vorposten, which said "the word war never has been injected into the Danzig question by Germany.

"The German demand that Danzig must be restored to the reich without war is a firm political reality. There can be no change of attitude on this question."

Some bayonets were seen on Danzig streets and a few pieces of small artillery, but citizens displayed increased assurance they would not be used to deliver the city to the reich.

Other Cause Than Danzig.

"If there is war it will not be primarily over Danzig," one official said.

Danzig authorities today asserted ten armed Polish youths had been arrested last night when they crossed the free city's western frontier.

The youthful prisoners, who said they had crossed the border unwittingly from a Polish vacation camp, were surrounded by an angry crowd at the village of Ochsendorf, officials said. They were taken off to jail to prevent trouble.

Poland Shows Economic Strain.

WARSAW, July 22.—(AP)—Poland, after four months of extensive mobilization involving about 750,000 men, is showing some symptoms of economic strain. Expert observers, however, today said the present state of preparedness could be continued for some time.

The present mobilization is estimated to be costing more than 1,000,000 zlotys [roughly $200,000] a day above normal military expenditure.

SOLVES DUTCH CRISIS; FORMS NEW CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands, July 22.—A Dutch cabinet crisis was solved today when Dr. Hendrik Colijn formed a new "business government" to replace his own cabinet which resigned on June 30 following differences over finances.

The prime minister said he would announce the new cabinet personnel after he had submitted their names to Queen Wilhelmina on Monday. The new cabinet is not associated with any one political party, attempts to form a coalition government having failed. Dr. J. A. N. Patijn, foreign minister, and Dr. J. J. C. van Dijk, minister of defense, will be included in the new cabinet, it was said.

Colijn's refusal to borrow for public works and defense, a step advocated by Catholic cabinet members, brought about the resignation of the cabinet.

TOUCHES POWER LINE; KILLED.

John Cronkhite, 31 years old, 3540 South Mozart street, a steamfitter, was killed yesterday when he touched a high power electric wire while on a movable crane in the yards of the Crane company, 4100 South Kedzie avenue.

REPORT BRITAIN YIELDS TO POLES ON LOAN TERMS

Hear War Goods May Be Bought Abroad.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 22.—Faced with disintegration of the so-called peace bloc of Europe unless something is done soon about extending financial aid to needy allies, the British government was reported tonight to have made concessions to Poland to help remove the deadlock in the Anglo-Polish military-economic discussions.

With the Polish mission headed by Col. Adam Koc threatening to return home, the British government, according to sources close to Whitehall, has ordered its treasury experts to yield on some of the demands raised by the Poles in the negotiations, which now have dragged on for more than a month.

Back Down on Restriction.

In search of a compromise, the British were reported to be prepared to withdraw their objection against Poland using a $25,000,000 loan from Britain to buy war materials outside this country, chiefly from America. The French government, which is advancing $17,500,000 to Poland, was said to be willing to concur in this.

In return, the Poles, it was believed, will agree that Britain and France may retain a measure of control over the way the money is spent—that is, the lenders will have a big say in steering the expenditures through the channels they desire.

The concession allowing the Poles to purchase arms and equipment outside of Britain, however, apparently does not extend to the 40 million dollar export credit offered to the Poles. Every cent of this still must be spent in Britain to assist this country's foreign trade.

Another Snag Exists.

Although part of the Anglo-Polish deadlock appears likely to be removed, a snag still exists over the form in which the loans should be granted.

The Poles want gold rather than sterling and francs, on the grounds that gold is needed to bolster up the country's financial position. This has been strained by the cost of a large scale mobilization and a shortage of silver coin, which is attributed to extensive hoarding.

ALL READY, MARS; NOW TURN LOOSE THOSE SIGNALS

Doubtful Astronomers Set to See the Sights.

Cambridge, Mass., July 22.—(AP)—Men of Mars, if they exist, would have to devise a beacon with a diameter of twenty-five miles to flash any signal on July 27, when the planet will be 36,000,000 miles from the earth.

Two Harvard astronomers said today that the Martians, if they do that, may register a flicker on the world's largest telescopes, such as those at the Mount Wilson, Lick and Lowell observatories. The telescopes will be trained on the planet during the time it will be closer to earth than it has been for fifteen years or will be for seventeen years to come.

"And one light wouldn't mean much," said Dr. Bart J. Bok as his colleague, Dr. Fletcher Watson, nodded. "If a string of great forest fires were set on Mars, observers on earth might see something resembling a string of lanterns."

Best Seats in Southern Worlds.

The scientists said the best seats from which to view the planet visit will be in South Africa and South America.

"It's too bad," one added, "that the best views will be had south of the equator, because astronomy's most powerful equipment is in the northern hemisphere."

Earl C. Slipher, the Martian expert from Lowell observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., is in South Africa watching the red star's close approach. He more than any other man has looked at the markings on Mars, and two days ago he reported from South Africa that he sees strong evidence of the existence of plant life on the planet.

Slipher is making his observations in Africa at the Bloemfontein Lamont-Hussey observatory of the University of Michigan.

Hold Life May Exist.

Dr. Bok and Dr. Watson were not reluctant here to conjecture on the possibilities of life on Mars. They said scientific data tend to preclude such a possibility but that no one has proved there is no life there.

That life does exist has been considered plausible by at least one astronomer of world-wide reputation. Percival Lowell, founder of Lowell observatory, interpreted as artificial waterways the strange streaks on Mars' surface discovered by Schiaparelli in 1877 and named by him Canali.

JAIL WPA HELPER AS KILLER IN ROW OVER YOUNG WIFE

New Castle, Ind., July 22.—(AP)—A worker on the Baker Park WPA project shot another worker dead today in what onlookers said was a quarrel over the former's red-headed 19 year old wife.

Roy Ray, 30 years old, was slain by a charge from a single barreled shotgun. After the shooting Clayton Booher, 20, and his young wife walked into the police station, where Booher said: "I've just shot a guy."

Fellow workers said Mrs. Booher was waiting at the project for her husband to quit work when Ray came up. She was annoyed and told her husband. The two men quarreled. Booher went to his house three blocks away. He came back soon after and the shooting followed. Booher was locked up.

DUBLIN WOMAN MAYOR REMOVES PORTRAIT OF QUEEN VICTORIA

DUBLIN, July 22.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Tom Clarke, newly elected woman lord mayor of Dublin, today removed a large portrait of Queen Victoria from the hall of the mansion house. She explained that the late queen "hated Ireland with a deep hatred."

Mrs. Tom Clarke.

"It is a beautiful painting and I have put it in a safe place," Mrs. Clarke, the first woman lord mayor, said. "It shows the queen as a young woman dressed in white crinoline with a red sash and jewels. It was painted in 1849."

Mrs. Clarke said she would not wear the usual robes of office, which "are red rags from the British period." Her husband was executed in the 1916 rebellion.

WOMAN SWIMS MILE FOR AID; 4 SAVED FROM SEA

Southold, N. Y., July 22.—[Special.]—Four persons who had clung to the bottom of an overturned catboat a mile off shore until they had given up hope of being sighted by rescuers were saved from the waters of Peconic bay this evening after one—Mrs. Elizabeth Mason of Washington, D. C.—swam through a choppy sea and summoned aid.

Mrs. Mason struggled to within 300 yards of Nassau Point before she became exhausted. Rescuers sighted her there and reached her side in time to hear her gasp before she collapsed: "There are three others out there."

Rowboats put out and rescued Mrs. Robert M. Daley, 52 years old, wife of the medical director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company; Mrs. Margaret Sammis, 34 years old, and her husband, Edward Sammis, 37 years old, both of New York City. Sammis is director of magazine publicity for the Columbia Broadcasting system.

CALLS TOWNSHIP HEADS TO PARLEY ON RELIEF PROBE

Leo M. Lyons, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, yesterday asked the executive committee of the Illinois Township Supervisors' association to meet with him in Chicago Wednesday to discuss plans for an investigation of the 190,000 relief cases in the state.

The state-wide investigation, announced Friday by Lyons, is to be started Aug. 1. Under present plans reliefers will be notified when they receive their next relief checks that they are then removed from the relief rolls. It will be necessary for them to reapply and be investigated to get back on the rolls.

L. H. Jacobson, deputy state administrator for the Work Projects administration, said yesterday that 208 more Chicago WPA strikers had been dismissed for failure to report to their projects for five consecutive days. A total of 2,702 strikers have been dismissed thus far. WPA officials said the strikes downstate had practically stopped and little increase is expected in Chicago.

SLEEPY SAILOR NAPS; 2 TRAINS PASS OVER HIM

New York, July 22.—(AP)—First Class Seaman Paul W. Worshau, 22 years old, of the U. S. S. Seattle, got tired of waiting for a subway train after an evening in Brooklyn, so he lowered himself carefully from the station platform and strode off down the track. Soon he tired of walking and lay down in a depression between the rails to take a nap.

At least two subway trains zipped over the sleeping tar, invisible in the gloom. Then Station Agent James Kinney, riding a train to work, saw a figure between the rails. The train jolted to a stop. Seaman Worshau opened a sleepy eye and said: "Good morning. How are you?"

He was slightly scratched.

NOW N. Y. LEARNS THAT DIXIE DAVIS WORE $12 SHORTS

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Three dollars each for handkerchiefs, $18 each for shirts with 30 cents extra for monograms, and $12.50 for shorts, to say nothing of hose at $5.25 a pair—that's the way J. Richard or Dixie Davis used to dress before the law caught up with him. It came out today that A. Sulka & Co., Fifth avenue haberdashers, had obtained a judgment against Davis, once lawyer for the Dutch Schultz gang, citing the above prices.

POLITICIANS' KIN REAP CITY JOBS, SURVEY SHOWS

Six in Former Alderman's Family on Pay Rolls.

A survey of the city and county pay roll records yesterday disclosed that scores of political leaders have immediate relatives in tax supported jobs. This does not include the nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, cousins, and in-laws to whom the taxpayers are paying salaries and pensions.

An example of double payrollers is found in the family of ex-Alderman Terence F. Moran, 5641 Loomis street. Moran, a member of the city council for twenty years, was defeated for reelection last April by Alderman John S. Boyle [16th].

Still Controls Jobs.

But Ald. Boyle supported State's Attorney Courtney in the latter's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic mayoralty nomination. Hence he has not been recognized by Mayor Kelly's regular Democratic organization. Moran, as the elected ward committeeman of the 16th, still controls the patronage—dealing out of jobs.

His eldest son, John Moran, 5508 South Carpenter street, is on the city pay roll at $458.33 per month, or $5,500 per year. His civil service rating is field assessor in charge for the water pipe extension department.

Matthew Moran, another son, also is on the city pay roll as director in charge of maintenance for the city bureau of parks and recreation. He receives $270 per month, which amounts to $3,240 per year. He is under civil service.

Third Son Master in Chancery.

A third son, Francis Moran, is a master in chancery for Superior Judge John C. Lewe. His fees depend upon the number and length of cases assigned to him for hearings. He gave up a $4,500 per year job as attorney for the securities division of the secretary of state to accept Judge Lewe's appointment.

Francis Moran was appointed a master Oct. 26, 1937, to fill a vacancy. He was reappointed Dec. 6, 1937, records show, in his own right. But records also show that he continued to collect salary from the state job after becoming a master.

For all of 1937 he was paid $4,500 and he received $2,000 for part of last year.

Mrs. Ann Moran Ryan, a married daughter of the former alderman, holds a temporary appointment as a policewoman with a yearly salary of $2,140. Her star number is 4771. She was appointed Sept. 14, 1935, a few months after her father was reëlected to the council for the last time.

Brother Also on Pay Roll.

Pay roll records show that Mrs. Ryan and her brothers, Francis and Matthew, live at 5641 Loomis street, which also is the elder Moran's address.

John A. Moran, 5544 Carpenter street, a brother of the ex-alderman, is now working for the city. He is also drawing a pension from the county. He is 77 years old and not married. His present job is a non-civil service post as sewer and water assessor at $275 a month.

For twenty-eight years he served as a deputy clerk in the county clerk's office, retiring in December of last year on a $55 per month pension. This, plus his city pay, gives him a yearly income of $3,960 from the taxpayers.

"I paid my money into the county pension fund and I consider the pension as coming to me," he asserted. "During my time with the county I worked hard and faithfully for everything I got. I'm earning my pay from the city, too."

Another Holds Public Job.

Anna Moran, also of 5544 Carpenter street, sister of both John and Terence Moran, is another member of the family holding a public job. She has a civil service rating of junior stenographer and cashier in the Cook county welfare department. She has worked there since April 28, 1916. Her pay is $2,280 per year.

"I was in civil service before my brother went into politics," she said last evening. "I've held my job because I worked hard at it—put in long hours. If you don't believe it, just ask the officials of the welfare department."

Attempts to reach ex-Ald. Moran yesterday and last night were futile.

The Inquiring Reporter

The Questions.

Should a reliefer do work for government aid? If so, how many hours should be work a week?

Where Answered.

On northwest side streets.

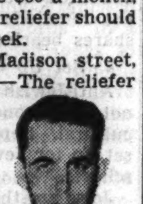
The Answers.

Leo Nessel, 2407 North Meade avenue, tavern owner—The government certainly shouldn't give any money to a reliefer who won't work. But if he is willing to work, he should be given enough to retain his self respect. I believe that $100 a month would be a proper figure. For that amount, the reliefer should put in forty hours a week.

Mrs. Minnie Petersen, 7857 North Neenah avenue, housewife—I believe a reliefer should receive money from the government only on the condition that he works for it, and works diligently. It seems to me that $55 a month would be a fair amount for the small family—man, wife, and child—and this amount should be raised slightly if the family is larger. The proper working hours are forty a week.

Edward Gustavson, 5048 Drummond place, refrigerating salesman—Under no circumstances should a relief applicant be given government money unless he is willing to work—and I mean really work. If he will work, he shouldn't get more than $55 a month, and for that he should put in forty hours a week.

Mrs. Estelle LeFebvre, 6034 Grand avenue, housewife—What right has a person to demand relief funds from the government if he won't work for the money? He certainly should give labor in return. A fair figure would be $60 a month, and the reliefer should work forty hours a week.



Donald Moore, 5128 Madison street, mail order house clerk—The reliefer should get government assistance only if he is willing to work for his support. Why should the taxpayer have to support loafers? I believe the maximum pay should be $60 a month in return for a work week of thirty hours.

DEMAND POLICE SHIFT IN GARBAGE DUMP FLAREUP

Property Owners Renew Their Protests.

More than a hundred property owners and housewives from the neighborhood of the city dump at Narragansett and Grand avenues met yesterday to register another protest against use of the dump for smelly garbage. They signed a petition demanding the transfer of Capt. Albert Mikes of the Cragin police, whom they accused of according rough treatment to a woman in the picket line at the dump on Friday.

The meeting, under auspices of the Riis Park Civic association, was held in the park fieldhouse at Fullerton and Narragansett avenues. The petition condemning Capt. Mikes will be circulated among other residents of the vicinity for additional signatures and will be presented to Police Commissioner Allman. It recites that Mikes' conduct "was unbecoming a police officer" and that he used obscene language.

Kicked Captain in Pants.

The woman allegedly assaulted is Mrs. Cervyina Oratowski, 2629 North Merrimac avenue. She said Capt. Mikes struck her in the eye and dragged her to the patrol wagon. Other housewives added that in protest she kicked the captain in the pants.

Capt. Mikes has denied that he or any other police officer used strong arm methods on Mrs. Oratowski or that she was injured by them. He said she was asked politely to allow one of the city trucks to proceed to the dump and that she became abusive and kicked him in the shin.

Hospital Governor Protests.

Will H. Wade, chairman of the board of governors of the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, was one of the speakers at the meeting yesterday. The hospital is at Belden and Oak Park avenues, four blocks southwest of the dump. He asserted that patients, nurses, and doctors have been affected by noxious odors from the pit.

The trouble at the dump began last Monday when fifty women and children formed a picket line and prevented city truck drivers from depositing loads in the pit. A recent Circuit court injunction permits only dry rubbish to be dumped there, but the nearby residents say wet and smelly garbage is also being unloaded.

FRANCE ARRESTS FOE OF JEWS FOR STIRRING UP HATE

Also Probes Link Between Reds and Moscow.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 22.—The French government's campaign against foreign influence in high political circles widened out dramatically tonight.

Charges were filed against one of the country's leading anti-Semitic propagandists. It was also reported that Premier Edouard Daladier, while continuing his investigation of suspected pro-Nazis, also has turned his attention to the extreme left and begun compiling a dossier on the financial and social relations between French Reds and Moscow.

Jew Baiter to Be Tried.

Following a conference yesterday afternoon between Daladier and Paul Marchandeau, minister of justice, it was announced that Darquier de Pellepoix, editor of the Jew baiting weekly, La France Enchainee, would be brought to trial.

A charge of "inciting to hatred against citizens or inhabitants of the French republic" was lodged against de Pellepoix. Conviction involves severe penalties under the terms of a recent decree law issued to stop the deluge of racial propaganda which has been flowing from the rightist press.

Informed observers connect the judicial action against de Pellepoix with the visit which Count Johannes von Welczeck, the German ambassador, paid to Daladier on Thursday. The envoy is supposed to have protested against the out and out anti-Nazi character of the French anti-espionage drive and the hostile tone of the French press in reporting it.

Seen as Rebuke to Nazis.

By arresting one of the most prominent local retailers of the chief Nazi export to France, anti-Semitism, Daladier appears to be rejecting the German protest in terms of unmistakable bluntness.

De Pellepoix is not accused of espionage and will be tried by the civil rather than the military authorities. He is a world war hero, a member of the Paris municipal council, and has powerful social and political connections.

So far as is known the police drive against possible foreign agents in left wing circles has not yet gone beyond the stage of searches of homes and examination of suspects. Should any further arrests be made, it is quite possible that they will not be made public for some time. The press has taken to heart Daladier's stern warning against divulging details of the anti-spy drive.

KNIFING VICTIM IDENTIFIED.

A man who was stabbed to death early yesterday in a brawl was identified last night as Arthur McAleenan, 45 years old, 2242 Lincoln avenue, a popcorn vendor at the White Sox and Cubs baseball parks.

Beans Bandit

Mrs. Evelyn Harpster shows how she threw bean pot at holdup man.

Hamburger Henry [at least police think it was he], got some hot baked beans last night to go with his hamburgers.

Henry, who specializes in holding up hamburger restaurants, visited the sandwich shop at 5753 Clark street. He had a hamburger sandwich. Then he displayed a revolver and a paper bag, the latter the trademark of his style of robbery.

"Put your money in the bag," he told Mrs. Evelyn Harpster, 1657 North Central Park avenue, who was behind the counter.

Mrs. Harpster put $12.50 in the bag. Then, as Henry turned to go, she picked up a crock of hot beans and smashed it over Henry's head. Henry bolted through the door, beans pouring over him, and left a trail that Policemen Edward Garrity and George Bilbrandt later followed for a block.

Henry, however, is still a missing quantity.

Rush Subway Fire Repairs; Resume Tunneling Tonight

Repair work on the North State street subway tunnel, necessitated by a fire Friday that burned for more than fourteen hours, will be completed so that when next week's shift starts work at midnight tonight normal progress can be resumed. Ralph Burke, chief engineer of the city department of subways and traction, made this announcement yesterday. He said that the construction delay beneath Erie and State streets amounted to about forty-eight hours.

France to Count Refugees; May Use Them in Army

PARIS, July 22.—(AP)—France, where there are 150,000 Spanish refugees of military age and numerous Czechs, Germans, and Italians, took steps today to make possible their use in the army. A provisional census of all foreigners 20 to 48 years of age who are without nationality or are political refugees has been ordered. They must present themselves to public authorities within twenty days.

HUNGARY GIVES 400,000 JEWS 5 YEARS TO LEAVE

New Law Limits Activity in National Life.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, July 22.—(AP)—Hungary, once the refuge for Jews unwanted elsewhere, now offers 400,000 Jews five years to get out.

The Jewish legislation, adopted last May, was written under the influence, if not the suggestion, of Nazi Germany.

Anti-Semitism was the strongest plank in the platform of a rapidly growing Hungarian Nazi party. The government stole the Nazis' thunder by rushing through a Jewish bill of its own.

It envisages, by slow but sure economic processes, the elimination from business of the majority of Hungary's 700,000 Jews. Where they may find havens is a question neither the government nor the Jews can answer.

5,000 Wander in Europe.

Five thousand in recent months have gone wandering through Europe hunting for a country where they could start life anew. Each emigrant was permitted to take out $14. All personal jewelry, silver, gold, and art treasures had to be left behind, though household furniture was permitted to cross the frontier. Tickets for transportation had to be bought from German or Italian companies.

Hungary's Jews approximate 6 per cent of the total population. For generations, however, their vital activity has far exceeded the importance of their relatively small numbers.

The "curse" of the Jews, in the eyes of anti-Semitic Hungarians, is that they have been "too successful."

The new law, through forced dismissals every six months, aims to reduce Jewish representation in all economic lines to 6 per cent at the end of five years. Jewish wealth and income also are to be reduced to 6 per cent of the national total.

Jews Dominate National Life.

Before the legislation went into effect Jews controled 46 per cent of industry and 45 per cent of commerce. Eight out of ten bank directors were Jews; every third doctor or editor was a Jew; half of Hungary's lawyers were Jewish. Jews enjoyed 29 per cent of the national income.

Under the terms of the law 135,000 Jewish workers face loss of their livelihood. It is estimated that they have 270,000 persons dependent upon them. In round numbers, thus, 400,000 are confronted with a blank future. So far nothing has been attempted either in the way of training them for different occupations or setting up new homes for them abroad.

Jews are not a farming class, but they own 500,000 acres of land. These holdings are first on the list for distribution to landless peasants if the government embarks on a long delayed "land reform." Under present plans Jews would be paid in cash one-third of the value of their estates, the remainder being in the form of shares bearing 1 per cent interest.

Set Up Ghettos in Schools.

Anti-Jewish measures, however, are not only economic but also social and cultural. Separate classes are being set up for Jewish pupils in Budapest schools.

Jews are thankful, though, that the campaign against them has fallen short of organized violence, such as swept through Germany. When Budapest's largest synagogue was bombed last February, killing one Jew and injuring twenty-two, the police rounded up five suspects, and punishment ranged up to life imprisonment.

Conservative Hungarians are not unanimous in approving the restrictions upon Jews and the consequent revolutionary overhauling of the nation's economic life. It is, some say, playing Nazi Germany's game at the expense of independence. They feel that the nation cannot replace its Jewish executives and technicians, certainly not in so short a period as five years.

HEARST PAPERS IN SYRACUSE QUIT; RIVAL GETS NAME

Syracuse, N. Y., July 22.—(AP)—The Syracuse Journal and Sunday American tonight announced immediate suspension of publication and sale of the name, good will and syndicated features to the rival Syracuse Herald.

The announcement was made in a brief unsigned box on the American's front page. The Herald management said it would absorb some of the Journal's 500 employés. The consolidation leaves Syracuse with one afternoon and one morning newspaper, each independently owned. The Morning Post Standard, like the Evening Herald, publishes a Sunday edition.

The Journal, 100 years old, was acquired by Hearst interests twelve years ago. Its sale is another of a series of disposals of Hearst publications that began in 1937, including the merger of the New York American with the New York Evening Journal and tabloid Mirror, the sale of the Omaha Bee-News to the Omaha World-Herald, withdrawal of Hearst from Rochester, disposal of the Milwaukee Sentinel, transfer of the Washington Herald and Times to Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, and consolidation of the Hearst wire services, International News and Universal.

Try This on Your Child if You've Forgotten His Age

MANILA, P. I., July 22.—[U. P.]—If a child can reach his left ear with his right hand by passing it directly over the crown of his head, he is at least 7 years old and may be admitted to the first grade. This practical method was prescribed by the principal of the government elementary school in Osas, Albay, to do away with birth certificates for determining the ages of children beginning school.

NEW YORK PARKS BURNING UP FOR WANT OF RAINS

Report Heavy Crop Losses in Wide Eastern Area.

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Drouth, which has skipped the often damaged midwestern area, rolled up new losses in the northeastern states and the far west tonight from seared crops and forest fires.

Dr. James H. Kimball, chief meteorologist of the weather bureau in New York, said the drouth in this vicinity was beyond record proportions. He predicted no rain soon.

Parks Face Heavy Losses.

"If we don't get rain soon," said John F. Walsh, head gardener of New York City, "it's going to cost the city hundreds of thousands of dollars for reseeding park lawns and replacing trees."

Upstate New York, New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware joined in reporting growing crop losses and low water tables that dried up wells and streams.

Fires in Scattered Areas.

CCC crews and fire wardens brought under control a four day ground fire on Snake mountain, in the Adirondacks.

There were other fires in Washington county, Massachusetts, near Crystal lake, water source for Poultney, Vt.; near Round lake, in Saratoga county, N. Y.; in the Catskills near Kingston, and in New Jersey.

Agriculture Commissioner William Casey of Massachusetts predicted milk price increases because of a ruined hay crop. He said corn is wilting, onions one-third off, and potatoes in danger. There were similar reports from other New England states. Vermont has had the driest July in twenty-three years.

Corn, lima beans, lettuce, and other garden crops were off 20 to 70 per cent in New Jersey, agricultural extension agents said.

Switchman Shot to Death as Watchman Tests Gun

David Lee, a switchman, was accidentally shot and killed last night when a watchman fired his gun to test it. The shooting occurred in the yards of the Manhattan Brewing company, 3901 Emerald avenue. The watchman, John Kleutsch, 63 years old, 5953 South Laflin street, employed by the company, fired his gun at a barrel. The bullet ricocheted and struck Lee, who was standing on the rear car of a freight train pulling out of the yards. Lee was 43 years old and lived at 8506 South Ada street. He was employed by the Chicago Junction railway.

SPANISH TROOPS HUNT REBELS IN ASTURIAS HILLS

Thousands of Bandits Roam Wild Country.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, France, July 22.—Fifteen thousand Spanish Nationalist troops are busy putting down diehard republicans and Reds in the rugged mountains of the Asturias region in Northern Spain, from which THE TRIBUNE correspondent returned today after a tour of investigation.

The coal mining district of the Asturias for years has been one of the most active Red centers of Spain. It was the center of a Red uprising in 1934.

Spanish Nationalists in the Asturias say frankly that there still is a strong Red feeling there which they have not yet succeeded in stamping out despite the military victory in the civil war.

Thousands Hide in Hills.

When the organized resistance of the Asturias was wiped out by the Nationalists in October, 1937, thousands of Asturians took to the hills with small arms and machine guns. They have been there ever since.

They still have rifles, pistols, machine guns and ammunition. With dynamite they took with them or stole from the mines they can make grenades, which made the Asturians famous in the civil war as "dinamiteros."

The local parish priest of one mining town confirmed what other informants had said in other towns, that a large part of the local population still was Red and still had sympathy for the fugitives hiding in the mountains. The people help the fugitives get food and clothing. Armed bands also come down from the hills in the night to hold up automobiles or raid isolated farms for food and clothing. Hence they are generally called bandoleros—bandits.

Area Is Wild and Rugged.

The present campaign is intended to put an end to both of these practices. It is hoped that hunger and cold weather, as winter approaches, will drive the fugitives down into the hands of waiting troops and civil guards.

The Asturias contains some of the wildest country in Spain. There are few roads and they are narrow, hemmed in by rugged mountains. For miles roads wind through narrow gorges shut in by perpendicular cliffs of solid rock, winding along edges of mountain streams—the only place where a road could be cut.

Many of them are practically inaccessible to any artillery except mule borne mountain guns. It is astonishing to observers that the Nationalists ever were able to take the area. A single machine gun nest can hold an entire road. It is impossible to attack in force, as the narrow, winding gorges make it suicidal.

Positions Taken by Strategy.

In most cases such positions were captured by taking the valleys opening out at each end of a gorge after arduous climbs over peaks to flank the defenders. The defenders then fled to join the bands of marauders now living a hunted existence in mountain caves and dugouts.

An officer just mustered out of the army and returned to his home town in the Asturias explained to me the methods being used to subdue the fugitives. Patrols are placed at every little town. "Controls"—armed guards to check the identity and destination of all passersby—close all roads of the region.

They play a waiting game. With soldiers in each village it is impossible for the villagers to continue to help the fugitives and equally impossible for the fugitives to raid the villages. As bitter winter weather sets in it is expected that the men gradually will be forced either to surrender or make desperate and futile attempts at raids.

"So they cannot last," said the former officer. "As they are captured they are shot. Without aid, they cannot last another winter. Until now the troops have been busy elsewhere, but now they can sit here and wait and this winter will see the end of the bandoleros."

ALFONSO PUTS IN BID TO RETURN TO SPANISH THRONE

PARIS, July 22.—[U. P.]—Former King Alfonso XIII. of Spain has refused to abdicate the throne and is holding himself in readiness to return to Spain. This was learned tonight following a secret meeting of Spanish monarchists at Lausanne, Switzerland.

Alfonso's refusal was on a proposal that he step aside in favor of his second son, Don Juan. He reiterated his claim to the throne, stating that he never had abdicated when he fled in 1931 following the proclamation of the republic.

Alfonso, who is 63 years old, promised pacification as a major rôle of the monarchy. He maintained his own candidacy to offset a renewed campaign in favor of Prince Xavier de Bourbon-Parme, brother of the former Empress Zita of Austria, who is a Carlist pretender.

ITALY APPLIES AN ARYAN RACIAL CODE TO ETHIOPIA

ROME, July 22.—[U. P.]—Italy's racial laws, borrowed from Germany to be applied against Jews, were applied to Aryans in Ethiopia today to maintain "the prestige of the white race."

The official gazette published drastic new laws, prescribing penalties for all sorts of crimes committed by "Aryan whites" which "damaged prestige." Jews were excluded from the classification and hence were not subject to the penalties.

SPANIARDS ANGRY OVER OUSTER OF GEN. DE LLANO

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

GIBRALTAR, July 22.—Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, who was dismissed from his commanding posts yesterday by Generalissimo Francisco Franco for "important words" in a recent speech, was reported today to be fleeing to Lisbon, Portugal. Simultaneously Spaniards arriving here from neighboring towns brought reports of considerable ill feeling and unrest in Spain.

Gen. De Llane was commander in chief of the 2d military region, embracing Andalusia, and an inspector general of carabineer forces. Several protest meetings are said to have been held in Andalusia, where Gen. De Llano was popular. Andalusians generally affirm that "it was Queipo who won the civil war." Many assert that Gen. Franco's action was the result of jealousy.

Reports from Algeciras say that a petition urging Gen. De Llano's reinstatement has been freely signed. A demand for the resignation of Gen. Franco and Manuel Serrano Suner, his brother-in-law and minister of interior, is reported to have been voiced by many prominent Andalusians.

50,000 WILL SEE 104 COUPLES WED EN MASSE TODAY

Ceremony Aimed to Offset Divorce Publicity.

MONTREAL, July 22.—[Canadian Press.]—A mass marriage of 104 couples will take place in Montreal's baseball stadium tomorrow in a ceremony designed to offset what is described as the unfavorable publicity marriage is getting from the world's divorce courts.

For the last year the young men and women, most of them residents of Montreal but some from as far as 400 miles down the St. Lawrence river, have been taking a marriage preparation course organized by the Rev. Henri Roy, director of the Jeunesse Ouvriere Catholique, a young Catholic worker movement.

At one time the number reached 122 couples, but some withdrew and today's official count was 104.

Expect 50,000 Witnesses.

The stadium seats 22,500, but some predictions of the attendance were as high as 50,000 since there is plenty of standing room.

The average bride is 23 years of age and the average groom 26. Some of the brides were teachers, factory workers, and nurses. The grooms range from locomotive engineers to cooks and earn an average of $25 a week.

Dressed in blue suits, the grooms are to meet their white clad mates in St. James cathedral for mass and holy communion, go to a wedding breakfast in a nearby hotel, and then to the stadium in an automobile procession.

At first it was planned to have the ceremony in old Notre Dame church, but it was changed to the stadium after the size of the crowd became apparent.

Pope Blesses Wedding Gifts.

A priest and two witnesses were assigned to each couple for the wedding ceremony. Msgr. Georges Gauthier, archbishop co-adjutor of Montreal, will present a rosary to each bride and a crucifix to each groom. The gifts were blessed by the pope.

In an effort to revive an old custom, members of the movement will present rings to the grooms.

A luncheon and musical program will follow the ceremony and after supper a tableau entitled "The Labor World" is scheduled for the stadium.

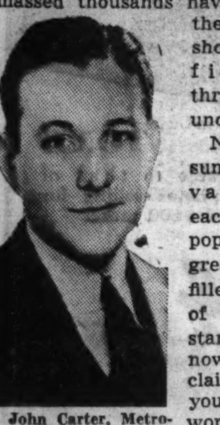
BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Nine times in the last nine years massed thousands have gathered in the great horseshoe of Soldiers' field to be thrilled by music under the stars.



John Carter, Metropolitan Opera singer, who will appear in music festival.

Nine times, on summer nights, vast throngs—each equal to the population of a great city—have filled the tiers of seats to hear stars of world renown and to acclaim as stars young men and women who yesterday were unknowns.

And nine times these multitudes have gone away deeply stirred, not only by what they have heard but also by the things they have seen at the event that here has become a summer tradition. Because part of this tradition which is the Chicagoland Music Festival is its production of amazing spectacles in which massed bands, marching hundreds, and the multitude itself blend in a flood of man made light as a scene that is unforgettable.

Tenth Festival Four Weeks Away.

Now, in less than four weeks—on Aug. 19—the tenth and greatest Chicagoland Music Festival will be held in the same Soldiers' field whose classic pillars have looked down upon the colorful triumphs of other years. And, before previewing the thrills of that night, it is fitting that we look back on some of those that have gone before.

It was on Aug. 23, 1930, that the first festival was held. The depression held in its grip not only Chicago but the nation as well. That first festival was an experiment—a doubtful one. As the sun sank that afternoon and Soldiers' field stood vast and empty the doubts deepened.

But, of a sudden, the rush started. It seemed that all Chicago was moving on Soldiers' field. The great horseshoe was empty one moment and full the next. The gates were shut—and 25,000 who had been left outside smashed them and moved in, filling aisles, runways, and part of the field itself. By the time John Philip Sousa stepped forward to lead the festival band, the feature of the show, there were 150,000 spectators inside the amphitheater.

Unknown Swept to Fame.

And it was that night that an unknown was crowned as the greatest baritone in all Chicagoland. He is John Burdette, a young colored man who up until then had been an elevator operator. At the festival for four years afterward John Burdette sang "Ol' Man River," the number that won him fame.

The festival was established. Each year the men and women who make it have sought for greater stars and greater spectacles.

In 1932, at the third music festival, there were ten major events, each a headliner in itself. Among these was the chorus of 1,000 Negro voices, a dramatic performance of Tschaikowsky's "1812" overture, augmented by the thunder of artillery, and the singing of the "Hallelujah" chorus from Handel's "Messiah" by 5,000 voices. The "Hallelujah" chorus has been featured at every festival and will be at the tenth one.

The music festival of 1934 retained all the massed pageantry and the color of other years—and in addition it presented Al Jolson, beloved by theatergoers for a generation.

The year following there were six notables of the operatic stage in the feature of the evening. Led by Margery Maxwell, they sang the famous Sextet from "Lucia di Lammermoor."

It was Homer Rodeheaver, the late Billy Sunday's noted choir leader, who led the massed thousands in song in 1937.

Then came 1938. Chicago still is talking about the great double attraction that brought the multitude to their feet cheering. The thousands in Soldiers' field took to their hearts Alec Templeton, the British blind pianist who in three years has captivated America. Then came the thrill.

Young Douglas Corrigan, who took his plane into the air, headed for California, and landed in Ireland, was brought in as the honor guest of the ninth annual festival.

Cinderella Girl Coming.

And this year, at the tenth Chicagoland Music Festival, there will be a visitor who should bring with her just such a thrill as did Corrigan. She will be Miss Britain, the Cinderella girl of the British Isles, who even now is being sought by The London Daily Sketch. She hasn't been found yet, but we can tell you something about her, nevertheless.

This Cinderella girl, wherever she is, is pretty, and she can sing. She has poise and self-assurance, as she will have to have when she faces 100,000 people in Soldiers' field and sings her native songs. She loves new things and will be thrilled when she learns she is to fly the Atlantic in a Pan-American Clipper plane and then fly to Chicago for her appearance at the festival.

The great male voice at the festival will be that of John Carter of the Metropolitan Opera, whose tours through the United States last year and this have been processions of triumph. There will be another noted artist also, to be announced later. The guest of honor that night will be Carrie Jacobs Bond, whose songs are loved everywhere.

1,000 to Join Square Dance.

The principal spectacle of this year's festival will be a mammoth square dance in which more than a thousand persons will take part. Down the expanse of green field the dancers will move in the steps of pre-jitterburg days. Many Chicagoland organizations have asked for places in this dance, and they may arrange to do so by communicating with R. U. Nelson, chairman of the Chicago park district square dance committee, at the parks administration building, 14th street and the outer drive.

And last, but not least, at this tenth annual festival, Chicagoland again will hail its greatest musicians, individuals and gruoups, to be chosen between now and the Night of Music.

33 TO SING AND PLAY AT URBANA'S MUSIC FESTIVAL SATURDAY

Urbana, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—Thirty-three singers and instrumentalists are entered in the first Central Illinois district festival contest which will be held next Saturday night at 7:30 in the Smith Memorial Music hall, located on the University of Illinois campus in Urbana. Mrs. Frank Tatham Johnson, chairman of the festival, announces that Miss Kathryn Witwer, W-G-N prima donna, will act as one of the vocal judges. The winners, including singers, violinists, and cornetists, will represent this preliminary festival at The Chicago Tribune's Chicagoland Music Festival in Chicago on Saturday, Aug. 19.

Mrs. F. T. Johnson.

Philip Maxwell, director of the Chicagoland Festival, will be present and give a brief talk after the contest.

DR. H. W. ROUPP TO BE PASTOR OF CENTRAL CHURCH

Bernard E. Sunny, president of the board of Central church, Orchestra hall, announced yesterday that the Rev. Dr. Harold Washington Roupp of the Boston university school of theology, has been called to succeed the Rev. Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, who resigned last spring.

Dr. Roupp is 40 years old and a native of Upper Sandusky, O., where he received his early education. After studying civil engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, he enrolled at Ohio Wesleyan university, where he graduated in 1921. In 1926 he was graduated with highest honors from Boston university school of theology.

Dr. Roupp will begin his Chicago ministry on Sept. 17. He is a member of the Ohio conference of the Methodist church.

JOB INSURANCE CHECKS WILL GO OUT TOMORROW

More than 25,000 to Get Funds During Week.

Illinois' first unemployment compensation checks, under the law which became effective July 1, will be distributed tomorrow.

Martin Durkin.

Martin P. Durkin, director of labor, said yesterday that 114,000 claims for compensation have been filed with his office, and that between 25,000 and 50,000 checks would be mailed this week. The compensation ranges from $7 to $16 a week, depending upon the recipient's earnings during 1938. Most of the checks are for more than $13.

Checks to Go Out Daily.

"The checks which will be mailed first are going to workers who filed claims for unemployment compensation on July 1," Durkin explained. "Additional checks will be sent out each day, as quickly as pay orders can be verified and checks issued. By the end of the week many thousands of dollars in benefits will be in the hands of unemployed workers of the state who were able to meet the eligibility tests for compensation."

To obtain compensation a worker must have earned at least $225 in an insured job during 1938, must be willing and able to work, and must be registered with the state employment service. He or she also must have served a two week waiting period for which no compensation is paid.

84 Pct. of Claimants Eligible.

Durkin said that about 84 per cent of the claims examined thus far had been found eligible for weekly payments. Including the waiting and examination periods, eligible applicants will begin drawing checks about twenty-five days after their application, he said. A little more than half of the claims were filed in counties outside Cook county.

Unemployment compensation was voted by the legislature during the 1937 session. When amendments to the law were passed at the 1939 meeting it was said that approximately 1,800,000 workers would be covered when the statute went into effect July 1. One of the amendments will increase that figure to about 2,500,000 next Jan. 1, when persons employing six or more workers will be included under the law.

At present only employers of eight or more workers are included in provisions of the law.

Waiting Period Reduced.

Another of the amendments provides for reduced contributions from employers who have favorable employment records—who have stabilized their employment. This provision becomes effective in 1943.

A third change brought by the 1939 amendments reduced the waiting period from three to two weeks and increased weekly payments—the minimum from $5 to $7 and the maximum from $15 to $16.

CONCERTS IN WOODS REUNITE SINGERS; 3 CHOIRS SING TODAY

Three more choral concerts in Cook county forest preserves, sixth in the series of Sunday afternoon programs sponsored by the county commissioners and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be presented at 5 o'clock today.

Reunions of former members of choruses participating in the concerts are becoming a feature of the programs each Sunday. After the concerts, which last an hour, most of the groups gather for picnics.

Today's concerts, with the choruses and directors, follow:

CALDWELL WOODS—Royal League Women's chorus, Sylvia Brydine.

Full details of the programs are to be found in the Metropolitan section of today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

BOY, 3, FOUND INJURED, DIES.

Budd Goldstein, 3 years old, died in Ravenswood hospital yesterday. He was found injured at the foot of a ladder Friday at his home, 4866 North Talman avenue. Relatives believe he climbed the ladder and fell.

PUPILS AND THEIR TEACHERS GO TO CLASSES IN NUDE

Mays Landing, N. J., July 22.—[U. P.]—Boys and girls and their teachers will attend classes in the nude, weather permitting, at a new school to be opened Sept. 1, it was announced today.

Fifteen children from New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Wyoming, and California already have been enrolled, according to the Rev. Isley Boone, president of the American Sunbathing association.

Classes will be held on the 2,000 acre grounds of the association's sunshine community nudist camp here. The curriculum will include in addition to the recognized educational essentials, nature study classes teaching "normal and sensible" information regarding sex, he said. Harrison Matsinger of Lansdowne, Pa., formerly a lay missionary in China and the Philippines, who will be director of the school, said he hoped to have pupils aged 3 to 12 and to teach them until they are 18.

NO EXTRA CHARGES!

For years, loan companies have charged everyone who borrowed from them according to standard schedules of charges that gave little or no recognition to people with established good credit. In line with this, some loan companies still charge the maximum rate allowed by law for small loans. Some other loan companies charge slightly less than this lawful maximum. Now Personal adds to its regular service a new "Special" Loan to help responsible persons save on loan costs.

"SPECIAL" LOANS

Under this plan responsible persons of established credit standing save up to half the maximum lawful rate on loans of $20 to $300.

To obtain a loan under this plan you need:

1. Steady income or salary sufficient to meet payments promptly without undue strain.
2. A good credit record.

You get any amount up to $300 at Personal's new low rate of only 1½% per month on the equal balance owed each month.

"REGULAR" LOANS

People in all stations of life may borrow under this plan. The ability to repay in small monthly amounts is necessary.

This plan meets the needs of:

1. Persons who wish to carry a loan larger than 8 to 12% of annual salary or income.
2. Persons without established credit and employment ratings.

You get the first $100 at 3% per month on the actual balance owed each month and 2% per month on the remainder above $100. This is less than the maximum lawful rate on loans above $100.

Payments under our "Regular" Loan plan can also be arranged to suit your budget:

FIVE CHICAGOANS, VACATION BOUND, KILLED IN CRASH

Car Strikes Truck Head-On; 3 Slightly Hurt.

Five Chicagoans were killed and a sixth was injured early yesterday when their vacation bound automobile collided with a truck thirty miles southeast of Eau Claire, Wis., near Augusta on U. S. highway 12. Fog shrouded the road.

The dead were Walter Boyce, 39 years old; his wife, Lillian, 38; their daughter, Irene, 17; and Ralph Senn, 38, all of 1107 West 82d street; and Miss Lilly Prendergast, 17, of 1401 West 80th street. The lone survivor was Frank Lumpp, 15, of 7952 South Ashland avenue, a cousin of Senn.

Drive to Summer Cottage.

The party left Chicago Friday night, intending to drive to Spooner, Wis., where Senn has a summer cottage. Augusta police said the car and the truck met head on at 4:40 a. m. Ralph Olson of Fairchild, Wis., driver of the truck, and a companion, were only slightly bruised.

The Chicago party remained unidentified until late in the day when the Lumpp boy recovered consciousness in the Sacred Heart hospital at Eau Claire. He was cut and bruised, but apparently otherwise unhurt. At the time of the accident he was asleep. Boyce was driving the car.

Killed in Wisconsin Mishap.

Clara Wilk, 23, a Chicagoan, was killed in an automobile accident near Adams, Wis. Stanley Balicki of Chicago, who was with her, was seriously injured. Their Chicago addresses were not known.

William Dionne, 63, of 1446 East 71st street, a WPA worker, died in the Marine hospital of injuries suffered Tuesday when he stepped off a safety island at 79th street and Vincennes avenue. He was struck by the car of Richard Mehlan, 10201 Charles street.

An unidentified man in his late 50s was fatally injured by a truck at 42d street and Lake Park avenue. He died in the Chicago hospital. The truck was driven by William Schrieber, 4144 Berkeley avenue.

Dog Clew to Victim.

Through a small brown mongrel dog police were seeking to identify a woman, about 45, who was fatally injured early in the day when she walked into the side of an automobile at 26th and Halsted streets. The dog was trotting by her side on a leash. The driver was John Bava, 3252 Princeton avenue.

Donald Barklay, 24, of Yorkville, was fatally injured when his automobile crashed into a safety island at 71st street and South Shore drive.

An unidentified man, about 50, was killed early in the day by an automobile at Harlem avenue and Roosevelt road. Alexander Keller, 2222 Northgate road, Riverside, was the driver.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 449 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 349 were killed in Chicago where 11,654 were injured in the same period.

2 Promoted to New Posts in N. U. Trafic Institute

Lieut. F. M. Kreml, director of the Northwestern university trafic institute, yesterday announced the promotion of two faculty members to the duties formerly handled by Capt. Ray Ashworth, associate director. A. R. Forster, a graduate of Northwestern, will direct all training programs. Lieut. Robert E. Raleigh of the Maryland state police will supervise activities of the field staff. Capt. Ashworth has resigned to become police chief of San Antonio, Tex.

New Army Chief of Staff Visits at Fort Sheridan

Gen. George C. Marshall, new chief of staff of the army, visited Fort Sheridan yesterday. Brig. Gen. Karl Truesdell, commandant at Fort Sheridan, entertained him there at dinner last evening. Gen. Marshall will fly to Washington, D. C., today.

LOOP POLICEMAN CONQUERS SAVAGE DOG BAREHANDED

A loop crowd looked on yesterday afternoon as Trafic Policeman George Buttenshen, 55 years old, fought a barehanded battle with a large dog that had bitten three persons. Buttenshen won the fight, but suffered bites that required hospital treatment.

The dog slipped into the Food Mart restaurant at 54 West Randolph street and attacked three employés—Miss Alberta Winner, 23, of 4437 North Racine avenue; Eugene Yanmanski, 48, of 1819 Lincoln Park west, and John Gannon, 33, of 2958 Adams street.

Driven to the street, the animal snapped at several pedestrians. Buttenshen, on duty at Clark and Randolph streets, took up the chase. It led to Michigan avenue, where the policeman seized the dog by the throat. An unidentified helper struck the animal on the head with a club, and a flivver squad which arrived opportunely dragged it into an alley and killed it. The dog's head will be examined for rabies.

A FORMULA FOR COURAGE

By CALEB

FEAR is man's oldest inheritance. To our first ancestor, every external thing was a foe. Jungles, rocks, beasts, waves, winds, sounds—all were his enemies; and Death was creation's most formidable fact. As the sun disappeared in the west, according to one tribal legend, the simple children of earth would gather on the hills and howl. How could they know their solar lord would reappear?

Fear, then, is not only our oldest, but our most instinctive, emotion. To many a person, even in this enlightened century, the problem of problems is that of learning how to master it.

Man himself has worked out many answers. For fearless living, he has written, preached and printed many recipes. Out of them, what practical principles, or mastery-tools, has he perfected, that men and women in any walk of life can use successfully?

One common sense formula that has stood every test contains four simple ingredients. The first is—knowledge. As Francis Bacon affirmed in the seventeenth century: "Knowledge is power." Since fear always flourishes on uncertainty, knowing what one fears—finding out the exact facts about it—is half the battle of its extinction. A specialist in human ills once commented: "For every one who has to face the reality of disease, a hundred people ruin their efficiency through fear of it."

The second courage ingredient is reason. Reason employs thought in place of feeling; logic instead of imagination. When reinforced with knowledge, reason has something definite with which to work. You can't reason intelligently about something till you understand it. Getting the help of a poised, informed friend, and reasoning one's fear out in conference, is often a helpful step toward its conquest.

The final ingredients of the fear-cure formula are faith—and character. If these seem strange team-mates, recall that faith requires one to trust things—particularly oneself. And character—a composite of self-honesty, belief in one's fellows, kindness, dependability—is the only sure basis for self-reliance.

With these simple thoughts as groundwork, thousands of life-distrustful human beings have regained sufficient fearlessness to become happy and effective citizens. Many a once fear-ridden individual, who today laughs at his former self, has a formula as simple as this to thank for his new wellbeing.

Flowering Trees Add Beauty

One of the most attractive landscape features on a farm are its flowering trees. The Tribune's DuPage county farm is fortunate in having a wide variety of these beautiful trees on it. Seven of them are described for you by Bob Becker in his entertaining article which appears in the want ad section of today's Sunday Tribune.

IT'S CIRCUS DAY FOLKS! HUR-R-Y, HUR-R-Y, HURRY—

Step Right Up and See the Big Show.

BY MARCIA WINN.

The long circus train with its seventy-nine cars of enchanted cargo drew slowly into the foot of Randolph street at dawn yesterday.

Some of the cars bore stacks of mighty poles, 60 feet long and a foot in diameter. Some bore glittering chariots of gold and of silver fit for a Nero. Some bore great cages shrouded in tarpaulin, out of which came the snarl of a black panther, the tip of a giraffe's nose, or a muffled pounding which gave notice that Gargantua, the 500 pound gorilla, was having another tantrum.

Some bore yellow tractors. Some bore mammoth red closed trucks, their contents a subject for mysterious conjecture. Some bore piles of steel cable, chains, buckets, rolled canvas, hay. Some bore delicate riding horses. Some bore elephants.

Up Goes the Canvas.

But all this was transformed during the ensuing five hours into a mighty show. By 10 a. m. the big top of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey's circus, 117,000 square yards of canvas, scarlet, blue, and gold pennants flying, was up on the circus grounds southeast of Soldiers' field.

If credit for the transformation, the resultant order out of seeming confusion, is due to any single group, it goes to the elephants. That is, to all the elephants except Fanny and Juno. They're nearing the age of 80 years and just walk around, happy, fat and saucy. The others worked. With a nimble trainer perched on their heads, they lumbered easily back and forth from one gargantuan undertaking to another. They pulled the trucks, the chariots, the poles, the circus wagons off the train. They pulled the cables that raised the giant poles for the big top. They pulled the ropes that raised the canvas dome. They did everything no one else wanted to do, and they did it as thoroughly as they walked.

A New Job for Them.

It's a new job for them, too, Walter McLain, elephant superintendent, explained. Always before the show has used draft horses, but this year there is only one draft horse. Pat Grier, assistant trainmaster, prefers horses himself, but he admitted the elephants get it done.

Neither the elephants nor the 1,600 men working to set up the circus made a single futile motion. They worked with precision, ease, and efficiency. A 600 pound steel ramp for the train? Twenty men have it in place, supported by heavy wood braces, in a trice. Stakes driven into asphalt for the big top ropes? Eight men, each wielding an iron sledge hammer, form a circle around each stake, their blows falling in such beautiful rhythm that they sound like a riveting machine. Spread a giant roll of canvas? Fifteen men tug at it at the blast of a whistle.

Better Trained than Soldiers.

"These fellows," a spectator observed, "are better trained than soldiers." All of which may account for the fact that the former Kaiser Wilhelm, when wishing to better his German army, besought the aid of a circus man.

It also explains how the show was able to leave Danville, Ill., at 3 a. m. yesterday and yet have its 41 tents, 9 electric light plants and its new air conditioned big top set up in Burnham park, Chicago, in time for a 2:15 p. m. matinée. Its 1,009 menagerie animals had been fed, its uniforms burnished, its wagon wheels washed and its 800 performers ready.

"They move to a different place every day," a father told his small daughter yesterday morning as they watched a maze of ropes being pulled into position. "O, no," corrected a circus employé, who stood nearby. "Not every day. We're settled here for nine days and glad of it."

Rescue 6 Passengers from Northwest Passage Ship

Seward, Alaska, July 22.—(AP)—The United States coast guard cutter Morris reported late today it had taken aboard the six passengers of the Northwest passage ship, the Pandorá, but the thirty-eight foot rebuilt halibut boat was a total wreck. Members of the expedition, headed by Dr. Homer Flint Kellems, farmer-evangelist of Delaware county, Okla., and including his daughter, Vivienne, were reported in "good health," although exposed for twenty-eight hours. The expedition sought to travel to the Atlantic coast along northern Canada's shores while the waters were ice free.

SECRETARY HULL SAYS HE KNOWS NOTHING OF EUROPEAN PEACE PLAN

Washington, D. C., July 22.—(AP)—Secretary Cordell Hull said today the state department had received no information through official channels to the effect that five European powers were agreed tentatively upon a pact designed to settle their major problems and preserve peace at least twenty-five years. The Philadelphia Inquirer published today a story from its Washington bureau saying a five power agreement which "settles every outstanding European problem" had been reached tentatively by Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Poland.

Hull was asked for comment on this story. He replied that the state department had received absolutely nothing in the way of information, news reports, rumors or speculation in the subject through official channels.

LA GUARDIA GIVES N. Y. FIRST NEGRO WOMAN JUSTICE

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—The first Negro woman judge in the history of New York City was appointed today when Mayor Fiorello La Guardia swore in Jane Bolin, 31 years old, as a justice of the Court of Domestic Relations. She will report for duty on Monday.

In private life she is Mrs. Ralph E. Mizelle, wife of a Washington lawyer, but she prefers to use her maiden name. Her husband witnessed today's ceremony.

Justice Bolin said the appointment came to her as a surprise. She said she knew nothing of it until she was called to the mayor's office today.

2 MEN INJURED AS VOLUNTEERS FIGHT FARM FIRE

Two men were injured early yesterday when volunteer firemen from Palatine fought a blaze on the farm of Fred Koester, three and one-half miles south of Palatine on South Plum Grove avenue. Koester's large barn was destroyed, but his home and other buildings were saved.

Fred Hahnfeldt, a fireman, was burned, and Koester's son, Fred Jr., 19 years old, who was recovering from an operation, was injured as they were saving two horses and two cows. Fire Chief Westley Comfort estimated the loss at $4,000. Volunteers trucked in water in milk cans, pouring it over the farm buildings that were saved.

Las Vegas, Nev., July 22.—(AP)—Alan Le May, 40 years old, author of fifteen novels and hundreds of western stories, was married today to Arlene Hoffman, 24, of Hollywood. The Aurora, Ill., writer who has been living for several years on a ranch near San Diego, flew here from Los Angeles with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lasky Jr. Le May and Lasky are collaborating on the scenario for a Cecil B. De Mille picture, "Royal Canadian Mounted."

4 Flee Manteno Hospital; One Captured in Chicago

Walter Moss, one of four men who escaped early yesterday from the Manteno state hospital for mental patients, was captured by police at Peoria street and Washington boulevard late yesterday. The others who got away were John Melzer, Graham Aitkin, and Joseph Calabrese. The Manteno hospital is unfenced. The patients there are not ordinarily deemed dangerous.

SON OF VETERAN FLYER BECOMES AIR LINE PILOT

The first father and son pilot combination in commercial aviation was discovered yesterday, according to air line officials. Capt. Ernest E. Basham, veteran of more than 12,000 hours in the air, is operations manager of Marquette Airlines, flying between St. Louis and Detroit. His son, Ernest E. Basham Jr., recently started flying as a co-pilot on an American Airlines' flagship between Chicago and Newark. The elder Basham taught his son to fly in Cleveland in 1929. After finishing college, the son became a mechanic for American Airlines in 1935. He kept flying at every opportunity, building up experience and solo hours until finally he qualified as a co-pilot.

SCIENTIST FINDS FEET OF GLACIER BURIED IN CLAY

Little pebbles, like those found in the soft clay alongside country roads, near streams of water, and in undisturbed soil, may help determine the movements of the glaciers which covered Europe and America thousands of years ago.

This is the theory of Prof. William C. Krumbein, University of Chicago geologist, who for eighteen months has been studying the relationship between pebbles in the clay and the direction of ice movements in the Chicago region.

Finds Pebbles Swam Like Fish.

"Pebbles found in the glacial till, débris left by the last glacier 25,000 years ago, were carried in the ice in the manner of a fish swimming in water," Prof. Krumbein said yesterday, "in that each pebble presented its minimum cross sectional area to the direction of ice flow.

"When the ice melted, the pebbles were left in the same position in the clay that they had occupied in the glacier. Thus they were left pointing longitudinally in the direction of the ice movement.

"This has been proved by observing the position of pebbles near limestone beds. The glacier, in crossing the limestone, cut deep groves and scratches, which reflect the direction of movement. Pebbles associated with the glacial deposits are arranged in the direction of the limestone grooves.

"By studying the pebbles in débris not associated with limestone beds, we can determine the exact direction ot flow of glaciers, which could not be done before."

Studies Made in Palos Park.

Prof. Krumbein has been working in the Valparaiso moraine region in Palos Park. [This morainic region, an accumulation of glacial débris, extends around the end of Lake Michigan and can be recognized as hills in Palos Park.] The pebbles in this area show that the last advance of the glacial ice varied from south to west. The Lake Michigan basin was the central part of the ice lobe, which originated in Canada, and buried everything southward to central Illinois.

In studying the pebbles in the clay their relative positions are recorded. From the orientation of a few hundred pebbles, the statistical mean direction of ice movement is found.

Prof. Krumbein will present the first scientific paper on his methods before the Pacific Science congress in San Francisco, Cal., next Friday.

INTELLIGENT USE OF MAIL SERVICE PAYS DIVIDENDS

Tribune Survey Shows How to Get Best Results.

This is the first of three articles covering the findings made in a survey of the postal service between Chicago and its suburbs, the outlying communities, and important cities and towns of Chicagoland.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Since completion of its national survey of the postal service six weeks ago THE TRIBUNE has received many requests that it conduct a similar study, covering the service between Chicago and its suburbs and between Chicago and certain downstate cities.

These requests were responsible for the decision to conduct a postal survey in the greater Chicago area. The new tests are concerned only with straight first class and special delivery mail.

On a recent business day regular and special delivery letters were sent to more than a score of TRIBUNE staff members and correspondents in the area. On a form in each letter was noted its posting time. When it reached its destination the arrival time was written on the envelope.

Posted at 5 P. M.

The outgoing regular mail was posted at 5 p. m.—since an earlier posting would not have insured delivery that day and would have caused the greater elapsed time to reflect upon the postoffice department. The specials were dropped into the mail chute at Tribune Tower at 10 a. m.

A day or so later the recipients mailed similar letters to Tribune Tower and the same routine was followed, with the exception that the incoming mail was posted at varying hours of the day and night.

The initial tests—covering regular mail—showed that with only one exception letters posted in Chicago at 5 p. m. were delivered the following morning in the twelve communities involved. The exception was Niles Center, where delivery was made at 2 p. m. The best time was made by the letter sent to Aurora—14 hours 25 minutes. The Niles Center mail was the slowest—requiring twenty-one hours.

Record of Mailings.

Following is the record of the regular mailings within the city and to its suburbs:

Joliet	5:00p	7:00p	7:40a	14h, 40m

Abbreviations: a—a.m.; p—p.m.; h—hours; m—minutes.

Advantages of late afternoon mailing are shown in several instances by the record of letter transmissions from the suburbs to Chicago. The Gary correspondent mailed his at 10:30 p. m. It was delivered at 8:30 a. m.—an elapsed time of only 10 hours 30 minutes. Late mailings in Joliet, Elgin, Rogers Park, and Wheaton also showed up well.

Don't Wait Too Long.

But it is an error to wait too long, until after final collection of the night, the time of which is shown on the mail box. The Englewood correspondent did so, dropping his letter at 11 p. m. It was not delivered until 2:30 p. m., an elapsed time of 15 hours 30 minutes. In a supplementary test, however, a letter mailed at 7:25 a. m. was delivered at 1:55 p. m., an elapsed time of 6 hours 30 minutes.

FROM.	MAILED.	POST-MARK'D.	DELIV-ERED.	ELAPSED TIME.
Rogers Pk.	8:45p	11:00p	8:30a	11h, 45m

Joliet	6:20p	7:00p	8:30a	14h, 10m

*Obviously an error; possibly due to jamming of cancellation machine.

The survey showed special delivery service between Chicago and its suburbs to be good. The only breakdown was in Oak Park. The special posted in Chicago at 10 a. m. and postmarked at 1 p. m. was in the Oak Park postoffice at 5 p. m. its backstamp shows. Yet it was not delivered until 10:24 a. m.—its elapsed time totaling 24 hours 24 minutes.

Mail Waits in Box.

The time made by all the specials sent to the suburbs could have been bettered by more prompt collections of mail from Tribune Tower. All these letters were dropped at 10 a. m., yet on only two occasions was mail postmarked as early as noon—a two hour wait. Most of the letters were stamped at 12:30 or 1 p. m.

Following is the record of letters mailed from Tribune Tower to points in the city and to its suburbs:

TO	MAILED.	POST-MARK'D.	DELIV-ERED.	ELAPSED TIME.
Rogers Pk.	10:00a	1:00p	3:45p	5h, 45m
Eng'w'd ..	10:00a	12:30p	3:30p	5h, 30m

Wauk'g'n.	10:00a	12:30p	4:28p	6h, 28m
N. Center.	10:00a	12:30p	5:50p	7h, 50m
Pk. Ridge.	10:00a	12:30p	4:17p	6h, 17m
Oak Pk. ..	10:00a	1:00p	10:24a	24h, 24m
Wheaton..	10:00a	1:00p	5:47p	7h, 47m
Aurora ..	10:00a	12:30p	6:34p	8h, 34m
Elgin	10:00a	Noon	3:15p	5h, 15m
Gary	10:00a	12:30p	2:50p	4h, 50m
Joliet	10:00a	12:30p	3:35p	5h, 35m

Chicago is one of the few cities in the nation that has 24 hour special delivery service. But this is not effective if intracity mail is put into mail boxes after the final collection of the night. This was demonstrated by dropping a letter in the Englewood district at 11 p. m. It was not picked up and postmarked until 9:30 a. m. the following day, but it moved swiftly enough after that, as shown by the backstamps.

Record of Incoming Specials.

The record of the incoming specials:

Rogers Pk.	8:45p	11:30p	2:09a	5h, 24m

Joliet	6:20p	7:00p	7:10a	12h, 10m

*Another canceling machine error.

In the case of the Joliet special, whose elapsed time was the longest of all the inbound letters, the delay was between Joliet and the central postoffice, which it reached at midnight, and between there and the old postoffice annex, where it arrived at 7 a. m. From there to Tribune Tower it was en route only 10 minutes.

The best time—4 hours 25 minutes—was recorded for the inbound Park Ridge letter. The Wheaton and Gary mail was close behind.

(Another study will be concerned with the service to sixteen towns and cities in Chicagoland.)

MILK PRICE GOES UP 1c IN DETROIT TO END LONG WAR

Detroit, Mich., July 22.—[Special.]—The price of delivered milk in Detroit will be advanced from 9 cents to 10 cents a quart, effective Monday, it was announced today by leading distributors. The retail price has been 9 cents since last April.

The price rise will mark the end of a long milk price war in the city, which began May 15, 1938, when the price was cut from 13 to 11 cents. At that time milk producers were paid $2.25 a hundred pounds for fluid milk. Since then the price to dairymen has declined to $1.90 and several distributors have been forced out of business because they said they were unable to pay the farmers $1.90 on a retail return of only 9 cents.

Stable Producers' Prices.

Dealers declared the 10 cent price will enable them to maintain the $1.90 schedule to producers, without further cuts.

A factor in the price war was the appearance of cash and carry milk depots, where milk was sold over the counters at 5 to 7 cents per quart, the 7 cent grade being the same as that delivered from the wagons at 9 cents.

New Law Expedites Truce.

Another factor in the rise is the passage by the legislature of a Milk Market act, under which is set up a board with licensing powers. The board has the right to fix retail prices if it determines, after a hearing, that prices are below the cost of production.

The act admittedly is of doubtful constitutionality, and the board has not yet functioned beyond the organization stage.

EFFORT TO RAISE SUNKEN BRITISH SUB SUSPENDED

LIVERPOOL, July 22.—(AP)—Attempts to salvage the submarine Thetis were suspended temporarily today and admiralty experts called a conference on further operations after receiving a new setback in plans to raise the craft. The latest blow came early today when two windlasses collapsed from the strain of eight nine-inch cables attached to the Thetis. Cables snapped when another effort was made to raise her on June 8.

An officer of the salvage ship Speedy said that another salvage ship, the Zelo, had attached the cables and was about five cable lengths away when the windlasses gave way.

"We were too far away to see what damage had been done," he said. "As far as I know the Thetis is still lying on the sea bed undamaged."

In London, Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, conservative member of parliament, prepared for introduction in the house of commons a proposal that the Thetis be left on the floor of Liverpool bay as a memorial to the ninety-nine men who died when the submersible failed to rise from a practice dive June 1.

BANDITS HANDLE COUPLE ROUGHLY; GET $2,200 GEMS

Two bandits roughly handled Mrs. Mina Scharmer, 34 years old, early today when they robbed her and her husband, Otto Scharmer, at the garage at the rear of their home, 2033 Jarvis avenue. Scharmer is head of a lumber milling company bearing his name. The robbers, both masked, tore Mrs. Scharmer's clothing in a search for jewelry. They got a bracelet set with 118 diamonds and two emeralds, valued at $2,000; a wedding ring which cost $200, and her purse. From Scharmer they got $18.

HORNER EXPLAINS SUPERHIGHWAYS PROGRAM STAND

Bills Become Law Minus His Signature.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., July 22.—Gov. Henry Horner, in allowing Chicago's $60,000,000 superhighway bills to become law today, filed with Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes a statement explaining why he withheld his veto and signature to the bills.

The governor's message states that the Illinois Supreme court has never considered the legality of the financing methods designed by this legislation, the issuance of notes to be retired with anticipated gasoline tax revenue. Attorney General John E. Cassidy doubted the constitutionality of the unprecedented proposal.

The governor reasoned that the plan can become operative only after a high court establishes the validity of the statutes. Therefore he permitted the bills to become law, allowing Chicago and Cook county officials to test their case in court.

Same Action for Third Bill.

Horner's action was on two of the three bills in the series. Although all three laws are essential for any to be functional, his decision on two was accepted as applying to the entire road program. Furthermore, it was made plain that he will take similar action on the third bill.

"The attorney general in a lengthy opinion rendered me," reads the governor's message, "discusses the validity of anticipating an excise tax over a period of years, but since this question has never been considered by our Supreme court could advise me only that he had 'serious doubt as to the constitutionality of this legislation.' Inasmuch as the validity of these bills must be settled finally by our Supreme court before these notes will be purchased by investors, I am not inclined to veto them because of their possible invalidity.

Points to Allocation.

"Under our present method of distributing the motor fuel tax, one-third is allocated to municipalities, one-third to the counties and one-third to the state. The use of these moneys is prescribed by law. The only question presented by these bills is whether Cook county and the city of Chicago shall be permitted to use in the immediate future moneys which otherwise would be available only over a period of twenty years.

"This, it seems to me, is a matter for local determination. The whole problem of motor and other trafic upon the streets of Chicago and the safety alike of motorists and pedestrians is, in the first instance, Chicago's concern and afterwards the concern of the whole state.

"If in the opinion of the corporate authorities and the people of Chicago and Cook county their trafic problems can be met to some extent at least by highway construction made possible by these bills, it is not the province of the state to deny them the opportunity. However, because of the doubt as to the validity of these bills, I have not approved them but have permitted them to become law without my signature."

Describes Both Bills.

Earlier in the text, the message describes the provision of the individual bills. Addressed to the secretary of state, it reads in part as follows:

"No. 184 authorizes the governor, the treasurer and the auditor of public acounts to sell notes in anticipation of the shares of motor fuel taxes which will be collected and allocated to counties and municipalities of over 500,000 population prior to July 1, 1959, the total amount of such notes not to exceed 50 per cent of the estimated amount to be allocated to such county and city. Such sale is to be only at the request of the governing body of the county or city and with the approval of the department of public works and buildings.

"No. 343 is a companion bill to No. 184 as is also No. 509. Both of these companion bills relate merely to the payment and retirement of anticipation notes issued and sold in accordance with No. 184.

MOVE TO START PROGRAM.

Maj. George A. Quinlan, county superintendent of roads, said yesterday that he will ask the county board's permission at its next meeting, Aug. 2, to begin carrying out the Chicago superhighway plans.

SWIMS TO SHORE; GASPS STORY OF RIVER SHIPWRECK

MONTREAL, Que., July 22.—[U. P.]—Capt. Leo Bernier swam ashore through choppy seas today and gasped out a story of shipwreck in which his wife, his 8 month old daughter, his brother, and a seaman were drowned.

Then, his strength returning, he directed the rescue of another seaman clinging to wreckage of the forty-eight ton schooner Crane Island which Bernier said was "cut in half" by the Japanese freighter Kirisima Maru.

Bernier said the crash occurred in the St. Lawrence river about forty miles above Quebec. The freighter, he said, continued on its way, apparently unaware that it had struck the schooner. Capt. T. Tamasita, master of the freighter, on arrival here, denied his ship had struck the schooner.

FARLEY TO CALL ON ROOSEVELT, THEN GO ABROAD

Politicians Eye Reports of Growing Friction.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 22.—Political interest is centering on the visit Postmaster General James A. Farley will make here tomorrow to say good-by to President Roosevelt on the eve of Farley's departure on a trip to Europe.

James A. Farley.

Interest in the visit is due to reports that Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee who put Mr. Roosevelt across in 1932 and again in 1936, has told at least three Democratic senators that he will oppose a third term for Roosevelt because "I am placing the good of the country above party considerations."

The summer White House had no official comment on the reports. But it is reported Mr. Farley will be asked to explain the stories on his arrival.

Farley Denies Responsibility.

Reached at the Democratic national headquarters in New York City, Farley said:

"When I have anything to say on political matters, I'll make my own announcements. I can't be responsible for everything that's attributed to me."

There has been considerable comment recently on reports of growing coolness between the President and Farley. In this connection it has been noted that Farley has not been consulted on major political matters or even patronage, which is ordinarily the prerogative of the postmaster general and party national chairman.

It is known that Farley opposed the Supreme court packing program and also was against the attempt to purge the Democratic senators who defeated the measure.

President at Clam Bake.

The recent action of Mr. Roosevelt in appointing Paul V. McNutt, former governor of Indiana and former high commissioner to the Phillipines, head of the Federal Security administration has also been considered a jolt to Farley.

Late this afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt motored to the farm of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., for a clam bake.

There the President lifted his baritone in the community singing and called the numbers of the square dance which followed the feasting.

ROOSEVELT FINDS AMPLE QUARTERS FOR 6 NEW AIDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—The President has at last found a place for his six assistants with a passion for anonymity. It was learned today that he plans to house them in the state department building after the war department is moved out of the same building, which covers ten acres.

The massive structure, once known as the state, war, and navy building, then will house the six assistants, the budget director and the state department.

The new White House offices, built in 1934 at a cost of $335,000 in PWA funds, were felt to be inadequate to accommodate the new assistants, although there are sixty-seven rooms and offices in this section.

The three assistants so far appointed are: Lauchlin Currie, who was economist for Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board and author of the President's deficit spending policy; James H. Rowe, former assistant White House secretary and protégé of Thomas G. Corcoran, No. 1 White House adviser and another spending advocate; and William H. McReynolds, former administrative assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.

LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES TURN TO SALEM THIS WEEK

Watch Veterans' Reunion for Ticket Material.

Salem, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—Illinois politicians, with their thoughts on the 1940 state tickets, will watch Salem next Tuesday and Wednesday when leaders of both parties are scheduled to attend the 56th annual Marion County Soldiers and Sailors Reunion.

On Tuesday—Republican day—one avowed candidate and two or three potential candidates for governor are slated as speakers. They include Wayland Brooks of Chicago, Richard J. Lyons of Libertyville, an avowed candidate; and perhaps Dwight H. Green of Chicago and Edward A. Hayes of Decatur. All four may enter the gubernatorial primaries next April.

Doubt Horner's Attendance.

On Wednesday—Democratic day—both United States Senators Scott W. Lucas of Havana and James M. Slattery of Chicago intend to be present, as will Lieut. Gov. John Stelle of McLeansboro. Congressman John C. Martin of Salem will preside at the rally.

Gov. Henry Horner has been invited, but his impaired health, which is being tested by a mountain of work on bills passed by the legislature, probably will prevent his attendance.

In addition to the headline speakers, most of the Democratic state officials—several of whom plan to seek renomination—are expected, along with many Republican aspirants to the ticket.

Honor Chicagoans.

Among Chicagoans present will be the family of Charles E. Peace, Republican committeeman of the 42d ward, whose late father, Daniel Peace, will be especially honored at the reunion. Each year it is the custom to pay particular honor to one Marion county soldier. Daniel Peace was a first sergeant in the Union army during the civil war, and later lived with his son, Daniel Jr., in Kell, Marion county, where he died in 1920.

The reunion opens on Monday with the dedication of the new $350,000 Salem armory. Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn, commanding the 33d division, Illinois National Guard; Adj. Gen. Carlos E. Black, and Charles E. Miner, state WPA administrator, are scheduled to attend this ceremony.

SKIN diseases are perhaps the most annoying and embarrassing afflictions to which the body is heir. Many persons live more or less secluded lives, denying themselves many pleasures because of disfiguring skin lesions. Many skin infections are very painful and frequently present a serious disease problem. Your skin is considerably more than just a protective covering for the body. It is a very active organ, performing many important functions. It also acts as a barometer for the entire body, often registering the first signs of beginning disease within. Such ailments as measles, scarlet fever, smallpox, etc., manifest themselves in the skin, and what often appears to the inexperienced eye as an ordinary skin rash may even indicate the presence of syphilis. Any irritation on the face or about the body that does not heal promptly is a potential source of danger. Such conditions may develop into growths that become cancerous. Every person, especially those 40 years of age and over, should pay more attention to their skin—not only in an effort to preserve a youthful appearance, but as a protection to health. There is a definite cause for every skin infection and proper treatment can not be instituted until that cause has been accurately determined. Medicine has made great progress in the development of new technique in diagnostic procedures as well as the discovery of new methods of treatment, including the powerful forces of X-ray and radium. With these advancements at the command of an experienced dermatologist, competent skin therapy is the rule. The cost of examination and treatment is no longer a burdensome factor. Since the organization of a United Medical Service, the most modern and up-to-date facilities are available to all at a fraction of former costs. This necessary service, founded by one of the country's foremost pioneers in the fight to reduce the high cost of medical and surgical care, has the knowledge and facilities for providing diagnoses and adequate treatment in all fields of medicine and surgery. A competent and experienced staff of specially trained physicians supported by one of the finest X-ray departments in the middle west . . . a complete medical laboratory, and other medical equipment help to make this possible. The costs for all services are no lower than is consistent with responsible medical practice.

CENSUS TO PLACE EMPHASIS ON IDLE ALIENS IN NATION

Bureau Reveals Queries for Test Survey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—The department of commerce today allowed a preview on the questions which the public will be expected to answer in the 1940 census for which the administration intends to spend 45 million dollars on an army of more than 150,000 census takers.

The census, according to the list of questions issued today, will enable the government to determine how many aliens are unemployed in this country and dependent upon its citizens, a survey which so far has not been made by the government.

The new series of questions will place stress on employment, income, education and housing. Unemployment and its reasons will be determined.

Test Quiz in Two Counties.

A test of the new questions will be made in St. Joseph and Marshall counties, Indiana, starting Aug. 15. Final selection of questions to be asked in the general census will not be made until results of the special census, to cost $20,000, have been analyzed.

Following are questions to be asked in the special census:

1. Location of home, street and house number, and type of dwelling.
2. Does this household live on a farm?
3. Is the home owned free of debt, mortgaged, or rented?
4. Value of home if owned, or monthly rental if rented, and number of rooms in home.
5. Name of each person in household, relationship of each person to head of household, sex, color or race, and age at last birthday.
6. Marital status [single, married, widowed, or divorced].
7. Attendance at school or college any time since March 1, 1939, and highest grade of school completed.
8. Place of birth [state or country if foreign born].
9. Citizenship status of the foreign born [naturalized or alien].
10. For persons 5 years old and over the place of residence on Aug. 14, 1934, including whether the person lived on a farm.

Job Questionnaire.

Following are the questions to be asked of all persons 14 years old and over concerning their job status:

1. Was this person at work any time during the week Aug. 6-12, 1939?
2. If not at work, was the person seeking work?
3. If neither at work nor seeking work, did this person have a job during the week of Aug. 6-12, 1939?
4. For persons not at work, not seeking work, and without a job, indicate whether engaged in home housework, attending school, unable to work, or other reason for not working or seeking work.
5. For persons at work, the number of hours worked during the week of Aug. 6-12, 1939.
6. For persons seeking work, the duration of unemployment [number of weeks seeking work].

More Questions for Workers.

7. For persons at work or with a job: [A] the occupation and industry in which he worked; [B] whether a wage or salary worker, an employer, a person working on his own account, or an unpaid family worker; [C] if a wage or salary worker, whether employed by private person or corporation, or by a regular government agency, or on public emergency work.
8. For persons seeking work, with previous work experience: [A] the occupation and industry in which he last worked; [B] whether a wage or salary worker, an employer, a person working on his own account, or an unpaid family worker; [C] if he was a wage or salary worker, whether he was employed by a private person or corporation, by a regular government agency, or worked on public emergency work.

Capture Parolee

Policewoman Alice McCarthy looking at gun found on Anthony Horvath, whom she helped capture in Grant park last night.

An armed parolee from the St. Charles School for Boys was captured as a bandit in Grant park late last night by a park policewoman and a park policeman while his companion escaped under gunfire. The prisoner is Anthony Horvath, 22 years old, 444 West 29th street. He was paroled in 1937 after he had served three years on a robbery charge.

For some time police have been swamped with complaints of robberies in Grant park. Recently Park Police Captain Roger Shanahan assigned Policewoman Alice McCarthy and Park Detective Joseph Moriarity to trap the bandits. Both are winners of park hero awards. Miss McCarthy is an expert shot and has killed one thief and wounded three others.

Horvath admitted, police said, that he and his companion had committed about thirty robberies in the park in three months. The fugitive's name is known to police.

Horvath was identified by Dr. Alexander Duff, an interne at Mercy hospital, as the man who robbed him of $25 and his companion, Miss Florence Fitzpatrick, a nurse at the hospital, of a wrist watch valued at $50. The robbery occurred Friday night as the couple strolled along the lake shore at 21st street.

Fells Girl, 17, in Street with Club; Police Puzzled

Miss Elizabeth Peterson, 17 years old, 7728 Clyde avenue, was walking to her home last night when, in front of 7609 Clyde avenue, a young man dressed in summer wear, stopped her. Without a word he hit her on the head with a club. As she fell she screamed for help. "Gosh, I didn't hit you hard enough," her assailant cried. He then struck her again. Then he fled, making no other effort to harm Miss Peterson. Police were mystified by the attack.

STRIKE! OMINOUS WORD STIRS FEAR IN PACKINGTOWN

Armour Workers Recall Hardships of 1921.

BY DORIS LOCKERMAN.

Strike! It is a word of foreboding in packingtown. There the memory of riots in 1921, the outbreaks which forced men into idleness and brought want to thousands during the winter, cannot be forgotten. Yesterday, as the threat of a new walkout hung over Armour & Co., the question of strike was back again, debated with dread in every household.

All the workers feel that tomorrow is a danger point. The Packinghouse Workers' Organizing committee, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, is demanding a nation-wide wage contract with the packing concern. Members have authorized the P. W. O. C. leaders to call strikes if necessary in seventeen of Armour's twenty-nine plants throughout the country to force the company to enter into negotiations toward such an agreement. The company maintains the dispute should be placed before the National Labor Relations board.

Jurisdiction Is Disputed.

There is a union jurisdiction dispute within the ranks of the workers in the Chicago plant of Armour & Co. The P. W. O. C. maintains it has the majority membership there. The American Federation of Labor union, the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, challenges the P. W. O. C. claim. The independents voice their disfavor of both unions. But interviews yesterday with men in their homes revealed that most of them agree on one thing: They want no strike. Their wives and children are terror stricken at the thought of one.

Mrs. Anna Zubrzycke, 1539 West 46th street, has ten children. Her husband struck in 1921. He never got his job back. Now her son, Walter, 22 years old, is the only one in the family working. He drives a truck in Armour's sweet pickle department.

"I don't know if he belongs to a union or not," she said yesterday. "But I have begged him not to walk out on his job, not to strike. We are not yet through with the last one."

Lamb Cutter's Opinion.

Tom Drong, 4518 Justine avenue, makes 72½c an hour in the lamb cutting department of the Armour plant. He is 35 years old, married, has two children, and has worked there thirteen years.

"Nuts to both unions," he exclaimed. "Not over 10 per cent of the men would go out if the union called a walkout. Not a man in my department [there are twenty eight of them] has a complaint against the company. They treat us good. The interesting part of this strike threat is that the leaders of it, the C. I. O. agitators and the stewards, are the Mexican and Negro strikebreakers the company brought here in 1921."

A closed shop would help the employés, in the belief of Mrs. Caroline Fedro, a soup kitchen worker who lives at 4814 Winchester avenue. But her views are opposed by those of her husband, Robert, who was an ardent striker in 1921, and now, eighteen years later, has never been able to get back on the rolls. He is a member of the A. F. of L. union.

"You got no kick," he admonished her. "For twenty-three years you work for Armour. They let you off when all six kids was born. They let you back again. You work."

"The workers don't want a strike," said George Dasho, 4535 Justine avenue, president of the A. F. of L. local. "The lowest paid laborer gets 62 cents an hour. I hope the C. I. O. doesn't bring tragedy to packingtown with its demands."

OFT INDICTED AID OF PENDERGAST IS INDICTED AGAIN

Kansas City, Mo., July 22.—(AP)—Charles V. Carollo, a powerful figure here when Democratic Boss Tom Pendergast ran the town, was forced back into court today on a new federal charge. Known as the "big man" of Kansas City's wide open $20,000,000 a year gambling rackets, Carollo has been indicted for mail fraud, for falsely stating in his application for citizenship that he didn't make any gambling profits and by a county grand jury for gambling.

Charles Carollo.

Red faced, but silently, he came into court each time and posted bond. Today the government had to go out after him.

Indicted yesterday on income tax evasion charges, Carollo failed to put in his customary appearance. Federal agents found him with his feet propped up on a desk at the North Side Democratic club, headquarters for the Pendergast machine in that area. So he went to court and posted $20,000 bond.

"I don't owe the government a cent," roared Carollo. "All the money I got went to the other guy. They're not prosecuting me, they're persecuting me."

CRIME AGAINST COTTON.

The unsoundness of the Roosevelt administration's economic controls is nowhere more clearly seen than in cotton. After six years of experiments at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars, the situation is as follows:

1. The stock of cotton in the country is the largest it has ever been. At the beginning of the new crop year on Aug. 1 the equivalent of an entire year's crop will remain unconsumed from previous years' production.

2. With the largest supply of cotton the country has ever seen, the exports of cotton are the smallest in any crop season in more than 50 years.

Three-quarters of the cotton supplies in the country are held as collateral against government loans. Farmers were lent more than they could get if they sold their cotton, with a stipulation that if the price went up the planter got the benefit and if it went down the government took the loss.

The effect was to keep cotton from going into consumption. When supplies from this country ceased to be available, the cotton consumers were forced to seek cotton elsewhere. In Brazil planters were found who obligingly stepped up their production from 348 thousand bales to 2 million bales. India, China, Russia, Egypt, and Mexico were willing to take over the market we abandoned.

For a time Wallace and Roosevelt didn't bother about the lost opportunity to sell cotton. Mules would plow up some of the surplus. And farmers would be paid to reduce their planting. But the various schemes calculated to reduce production have been without the coöperation of nature. Even this year, when the farmers have been induced to devote to cotton what is believed to be the smallest acreage since 1899, there is no assurance that the crop will be small.

All his schemes having failed, Mr. Wallace seeks to reverse himself. Now he wants to sell the cotton to the old customers who used to take our surplus output before controled economy. But the old customers don't want our cotton. They have established other sources. And the cotton growing countries which took over our export business Wallace destroyed are going to fight to hold on to it.

Recently a meeting was held in Washington to lay plans for an export bounty on cotton. The idea is that whoever exports cotton after the first of next month is to receive 1 or 2 cents for each pound he ships out. One of the consequences will be to arouse ill-will in cotton producing countries. Another consequence will be to ruin the business of our cotton goods exporters. Our textile industry has been competing for foreign business against great odds because of low wages prevailing in other countries. To this disadvantage Mr. Wallace is to add 1 or 2 cents a pound differential on cotton.

The ingenious planners of the Roosevelt administration conceived the idea of putting up the price of cotton by paying a bounty to farmers to keep their lint off the market. Now the government is going to pay a bounty to force the cotton into the market. If Wallace is able at great cost to the treasury to regain some of the lost market he cannot undo the harm he has done. For what he takes will be from nations whose friendship we have been at great pains to build up. There is trouble ahead. No bounty can expiate for the Roosevelt administration's crime against cotton.

GREAT SOCIAL DOCUMENTS.

Gov. Bushfield of South Dakota and Congressman Mundt say the federal government has libeled their state in the government-made movie "The Plow That Broke the Plains." South Dakota, they say, is presented in its entirety as a desert, whereas, in fact, year after year it led the states in per capita production of wealth and is rich in agricultural, mineral, and recreational resources.

Mr. Mundt says "this so-called documentary film is a parade of inaccuracies." This should not surprise him. The words "document" and "documentary" have been so widely misused in recent years that they have lost their original meanings. The reviewers have been referring to books like "Grapes of Wrath" as "social documents," or, more commonly, "great social and human documents," though in reality these books were not documents at all. Magna Charta is a document. So is the t e x t of the Treaty of Utrecht. So are the census reports, or even a personal letter. "Grapes of Wrath" is a document only in the limited sense that it discloses what the author and his readers were interested in or believed. It is not a document in the sense that it can be accepted as objective evidence regarding the migration from the dust bowl to California and the causes which led to the movement. To call such a book a document is to say that fiction is fact and that the scholar who spends a lifetime trying to establish facts might better consult his or some one else's imagination.

"Documentary" as applied to films has been misused in precisely the same way. A news reel might properly be called a documentary film even though many news reel shots are carefully staged rather than spontaneous. A news reel is a kind, if only a rather poor kind, of document. Movies like "The Plow That Broke the Plains" or "The River," produced by the government, are not documentary in any sensible use of the word. There is little or nothing in these pictures to show where the incidents were filmed or when. There is no evidence to show that the incidents are typical of any region or all regions. The films are as nearly valueless as evidence upon which to base judgments of public policy as anything can be. They are propaganda pure and simple.

To call such movies by the high sounding word documentary is merely to disguise propaganda under a respectable name.

ACTUALITIES AND IDEALITIES OF WAR.

It is not often that people who make wars fight them. In nobler instances it is because the greater duty is in the less dangerous rôle. In ignobler instances it is because an excess of what is regarded by the possessor as idealism has led to an advocacy of policies, the worst consequences of which cannot be felt by the proposer unless the land he inhabits and has influenced has been overrun by the enemies he has provoked.

In other days, which may be regarded as simpler days, there was a branch of the governmental agencies called the army and another called the navy. They were comparatively small and they were manned by persons who had voluntarily entered the profession of arms. When the governmental policy called for the use of this arm, the men who had joined it had no complaint to make that they were then to engage in their profession. A prime minister might at a certain stage of his negotiations with an opponent decide to resort to what was called the final recourse and to decide the issue by determining whether the other fellow had as good a military arm. War was then within somewhat logical bounds—an instrument of policy. The professionals who engaged in it were plying their trade and the prime minister was playing his cards.

This has all been changed, and although the change is not entirely new now unnumbered persons in a population are jeopardized by the decisions of politicians and diplomats working at their business, which usually is one of badly conducting the affairs of the nation. Wherever there is a free expression of opinion there will always be a rhetorical element of citizenship indulging in unrealistic ideas regarding the destiny of the human race, the values of human relations, and the comparative worth of human beings. Frequently they are disposed to make the last and final sacrifice, but seldom of themselves and more generally of the abstraction which they think is the national will, the intelligent opinion, and the substance of the nation.

It happens that this abstraction with which they deal is no longer an instrument of government, composed of professionals willingly having undertaken these responsibilities, but it is a vast number of young human beings with involved and intimate sympathetic and economic relationships. In the wake of all this high faluting emotionalism must be apprehended four, five, six, or ten million able bodied men wrenched from their normal life, and business pursuits, and family relations, marching out in flesh and blood to do and suffer.

This is the proper conception of war. It is not a sweet and simple assertion of virtue impersonated as St. George and riding down the dragon. It is bitterness, hardship, and misery. War parties should cease to think of their force as disembodied power of virtue but always think of it in the terms of the men who man the guns.

SANTA CLAUS MAKES SOME CHANGES.

Mr. Roosevelt's shifts of New Deal personnel have caused some interested speculation and the interested speculators are not at all certain that they know what is going on. Most of them are fairly sure that everything can be interpreted by using the third term as a rule of reason.

The WPA has been a political pain and it is possible that Mr. Hopkins had publicly to confess too many errors in judgment and method when taxed with responsibility for some of the abuses. As secretary of commerce he is now out of the heat, but he also is out of the news. He is no longer the great almoner. He is not the logical successor. He is not now any part of Santa Claus.

Mr. Ickes of the interior department has been given back to the Indians. When the politicians want some money they need not pack an overnight bag and camp out in his anteroom. They will deal with the new public works man, John Carmody, who speaks their language.

It's not imaginable that Mr. Roosevelt thought of Mr. Ickes as a rival. The secretary has not been notable for charm. He has enjoyed his importance too much. The politicians may have to bow to get their money, but they don't like it. A great many of them will be in the national convention. The third term would not be sweetened by rudeness in the public works. There is no sense in kicking people to prove that you have bought them—not in politics. The dough is better sweet than sour. Mr. Ickes isn't in the Santa Claus business any more.

Mr. Jesse Jones has gone upstairs. He has resigned from the hetmanship of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, but is appointed chief supervisor of all the lending enterprise. The RFC itself will be under new management. Mr. Jones may or may not keep an eye on it. Presumably he will but if he cares to nod he may.

Santa Claus is preparing for the next Christmas. The third term will need a bigger fireplace and larger stockings.

SPORTSMANSHIP.

S. C. Wooderson, the record holding English miler, had the bad luck or bad judgment to run a poor race at Princeton and was defeated by four Americans, Fenske winning. Wooderson was bumped and for an instant thrown off his stride. For a few days after the race it seemed as if tricky America was about to be condemned for poor sportsmanship again. The Manchester Guardian corrects any such impression which might have gained ground in England.

The British, says the Guardian, were disappointed chiefly because Wooderson allowed this unintentional bump to affect his running. "He has been bumped dozens of times before now—so often, indeed, that one is satisfied that his own clumsiness has something to do with his series of collisions—but he has always reacted by running with even greater fire. The Wooderson that we have known here, even if unbalanced for several strides, would have pulled himself together and have finished more irresistibly than ever. On the existing evidence—one repeats that it is still incomplete—he seems to have allowed the accident to depress him emotionally and to weaken the resolution with which he finished."

Wooderson did not run his race. He ran a poor one, explainable probably by the change in conditions which will affect athletes. But there was no international incident in it.

JUSTICE: 1939 MODEL

How the Wagner act has been used to extort settlements was disclosed in recent testimony before the committee on labor of the United States senate. The witness was David R. Clarke of Chicago, counsel for the Illinois Manufacturers' association. Senator Ellender of Louisiana presided. Condensed excerpts from the record follow:

MR. CLARKE—Keep in mind that the board is supposed to handle cases with dispatch. That is the whole purpose of having an administrative body of that kind.

But what is the record? I think my office has probably had 25 or 30 cases in the labor board. We do not settle our cases. When the labor board representative says to our client, "If you will pay a hundred dollars apiece to these men, we don't issue the complaint, and if you do not, we will," we tell the labor board representatives that that sounds very much like an encouragement of blackmail to us and we won't settle.

SENATOR ELLENDER—Have you any cases like that?

SENATOR ELLENDER—M-a-l-l?

MR. CLARKE—M-a-l-l, the Mall Tool Company of Chicago. It was alleged by the labor board informally that the company had discharged some employés discriminatorily in March and April, 1937. Between that time and April of this year Mr. Leiserson—not the board member Leiserson, but a Mr. Leiserson who is connected with the labor board regional director's office in Chicago—repeatedly called upon that company to come in and confer concerning that case. He repeatedly brought up the proposition that the case could be settled by paying to the men a comparatively small amount and by restoring them to employment.

SENATOR ELLENDER—I thought you were talking about a bribe.

SENATOR HOLT [interposing]—I did not think it was a bribe, but blackmail.

MR. CLARKE—Not by Mr. Leiserson, certainly not. I said to Mr. Leiserson this, and I said to my client this in his presence: "If what my client tells me is true, there is no case against him. These men are entitled to no back pay and to no restoration of their jobs, in my opinion." I said to my client privately and otherwise, "Are the facts you have given me true in this matter?"

"Yes, sir."

I said: "All right, then, I would not, in order to avoid the cost and expense of a trial, give these men $100 apiece; I would refuse to accept Mr. Leiserson's efforts at conciliation; he has no business acting in conciliation matters anyway. In other words, let them bring their case. If you are guilty, all right, it will cost you something. If you are innocent, all right, it will cost you something, but at least you won't have encouraged the rest of your employés to think that any time a man wants to go down to the labor board the labor board will pull out a hundred dollar bill for him some way or other."

SENATOR ELLENDER—What is the status of that case now?

MR. CLARKE—The date of the alleged offense was March and April, 1937. The board dillydallied around and never issued its complaint until April 28, 1939, two years later. In a case, mind you, where if there is guilt the back pay was running all the time. The date of the hearing was May 25 to June 5, 1939. The examiner's report has not yet been made.

SENATOR ELLENDER—Have you any others like that, Mr. Clarke?

MR. CLARKE—The Boss Manufacturing Company case. The date of the alleged offense was in July, 1935; the date of the complaint issued against the company by the labor board was in April, 1936; the date of the hearing on the complaint was on April 30 and May 1, 1936. I may say that after the labor board issues a complaint it is not dilatory. If you are not ready to go to trial within the ten days it is just too bad.

But listen to what happened after the trial. The date of the hearing was April 30 and May 1, 1936. The date of the examiner's report was June 22, 1936—not much delay there. The date of the board's decision was Aug. 27, 1937, about a year and four months after the examiner's report. The case is now in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

SENATOR ELLENDER—You grant that the employers had something to do with the delay?

MR. CLARKE—Out of the four years possibly the employer is responsible for 25 days.

I point out to you the Burnside Steel Foundry Company case in Chicago. The dates of the alleged offenses were in September and October, 1937; the date of the complaint was in October, 1937; the date of the hearing was in October, 1937; the examiner's report was in December, 1937. They were going along pretty good, but the date of the board's decision was on June 7, 1938.

The next case is the Automotive Maintenance Machinery company in North Chicago, Ill. The dates of the alleged offenses were April, May, July, and August, 1937; the date of the complaint is February, 1938; the date of the hearing was in February, 1938. They try you in a hearing pretty quickly after you get the complaint.

SENATOR ELLENDER—That is what you want?

MR. CLARKE—You bet. The date of the examiner's report was June 17, 1938, and this is June 20, 1939, and the board has not yet decided the case.

SENATOR ELLENDER [interposing]—Have you ever tried to compromise any of your cases or did you just keep on fighting and fighting all through as a good many employers have done?

MR. CLARKE—I have tried to compromise in the Boss Manufacturing Company case. While we were filing the briefs last week a lawyer came out from Washington to settle the case, but they want to settle by having you do what they have ordered you to do.

SENATOR HOLT—During all of this delay hasn't there been a destruction of the morale of those employed because there was a case pending?

MR. CLARKE—Of course there has.

SENATOR HOLT—The delay stimulates strife rather than allays it?

MR. CLARKE—Of course it does. And that is the reason why, when congress set up this act, they set up a system and a board that they thought would give dispatch to these things and not the court type of delay in litigant matters as the chairman suggests.

[Mr. Clarke then described the similar delays in the cases against the Walworth Manufacturing company, the Rockford Mitten and Hosiery company, and the Burson Knitting Mills of Rockford.]

Now, as I say, maybe I am getting special treatment and maybe, because I have come here and pointed out that there are five cases in my office where the board has delayed in deciding the cases for a year or more, maybe I will get the decisions prompt and quick for having come here and pointed that out to you, and maybe my clients will be quite unhappy about the decisions that they get. I expect that sort of thing.

SENATOR HOLT—Do you think if you had been a little timid it would have worked?

MR. CLARKE—That is hard to tell. I am a little timid. Everybody is timid when they run against a thing like this. It is only a crusader who will fight one of these cases and it takes plenty of courage and plenty of money.

There ought to be a provision that would prevent the labor board from acting as conciliator. According to the President's statement, they have wrongfully assumed the power to conciliate and settle 9,000 cases in the period since this act has been adopted.

[Mr. Clarke was referring to the statement made by President Roosevelt on July 5, 1935, when he signed the Wagner act. He said: "The National Labor Relations board will be an independent, quasi-judicial body. It should be clearly understood that it will not act as mediator or conciliator in labor disputes. It is important that the judicial and mediation function should not be confused. Compromise, the essence of mediation, has no place in the interpretation and enforcement of the law."]

SWIM BY ALL MEANS.

EVERY one should be at home in the water—not only for recreation and enjoyment, but for health and safety. Lessons should begin in childhood—certainly by the time the youngster has reached his fifth birthday. A good teacher is highly desirable—one who can instruct in the proper strokes. Thereafter practice makes perfect.

Swimming is a most valuable form of exercise. Next to walking it brings into action more movements of more parts. In addition, the body is buoyed up so that every joint has free play. Because of lessened resistance those who cannot indulge in violent gymnastics—tennis or squash—take kindly to outdoor bathing. Even invalids are benefited and a tank is an almost indispensable adjunct in the treatment of many forms of arthritis or weakened muscle fibers due, for example, to infantile paralysis. Even pressure on the spinal column is relieved. This is present constantly when one is on a hike. In consequence, one may perform maneuvers which would be difficult, or even impossible, were it not for the lifting effect of the water.

Furthermore, there probably is no lung developer of equal power. Deep, regular breathing is called for and the upper portion of the chest—particularly that which is likely to flatten about middle life—is maintained in its full, rounded contour. Thus more room is preserved for the lungs, the heart, and the great vessels.

No one should be obliged to argue in favor of aquatics—whether practiced in a tub at home, at the seashore, or in a clean stream or lake. The rôle of the skin in the elimination of wastes is well understood. When functioning at top efficiency it saves the kidneys an overload and the arteries undue strain. In consequence, glands become more active, and the capillaries dilate. It is a good deal like opening a safety valve when the force within the boiler mounts too high.

If one does not remain immersed too long—a few minutes at first, gradually increasing the period—the whole episode will prove relaxing and strengthening to tired nerves. One can stay in the ocean far longer because salts which the body needs and must have are not excreted. Those who feel exhausted after a dip either have been submerged too long, or have been too energetic.

Indulgence, however, requires great caution. The most expert swimmer may be seized with cramps in which there is so powerful a contraction of the muscles that effort is impossible. This may follow plunging into a cold pool or it may accompany fatigue. The cause is deficient nutrition to the muscles. If panic can be avoided so that one will not waste his energies in useless struggles the incident may pass quickly. We all know that it is not necessary to work the arms or legs in order to float. It is highly important that we learn to "rest" in the water.

More dangerous, perhaps, is a peculiar type of sensitiveness to cold which may lead to collapse. Two or three years ago our attention was called to this phenomenon by Bayard T. Horton, who believes that many of our drownings are due to cold allergy which renders the individual powerless. In his short series of cases some victims developed the symptom after leaving the beach and four had to be rescued from drowning. If one is susceptible, he should accustom himself to the lower temperature by degrees. Protection may be acquired by immersing the hands in ice water for a minute or two twice a day for a few weeks.

Despite our warnings, however, fatalities will occur and it behooves us all to understand resuscitation. There are two excellent methods—one proposed by Schäfer and the other by Sylvester. The former is easily learned and is taught in most of our first aid classes. Artificial respiration may be life saving and no one should give up until the procedure has been persisted in for at least three-quarters of an hour or longer.

[We have leaflets on the two methods of resuscitation which we will be glad to send on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.]

CORNEAL ULCER.

S. G. writes: I contracted a corneal ulcer which is now cured. I would like to know what I should do to prevent another siege of this kind.

REPLY.

The commonest cause of corneal ulcer is infection following injury to the eye. Lowered resistance may be an accompanying factor. An ample supply of vitamins A and B in the food, or in more concentrated form, often helps to prevent a recurrence. It is well also to keep the parts clean by dropping a mild antiseptic, such as a saturated boric acid solution, in each eye night and morning.

HAVE AN EXAMINATION.

D. C. writes: Since having my second baby eight months ago, I tire easily and do not seem to get any benefit from my night's sleep. Do you think it necessary to consult a physician about this?

REPLY.

You may have a chronic infection and, if so, eradicating this may help the situation. Women who go back to their duties too soon after confinement frequently are affected in this manner. By all means have an examination.

PLEASE STOP IT!

F. H. writes: My 2 year old child has a very dry nose. When I clean it I have to use a toothpick to remove the scabs. Is this all right?

REPLY.

Please don't! Never introduce any hard, sharp object into the nostrils. Syringing is the best procedure. Use a dilute salt solution—a teaspoonful to a pint of water—and a soft, rubber tipped bulb. The child's head should be inclined forward.

SHALL TONSILS GO?

M. S. writes: Will removal of the tonsils help a case of Vincent's angina?

REPLY.

As a rule, the organisms are found about decayed teeth or infected gums. The tonsils may harbor them. Surgery—involving any portion of the throat—is never advised in acute inflammations. The infection can be eradicated if you will use industriously some such compound as sodium perborate. Your physician can help you.

IT WILL DEADEN A NERVE.

H. S. writes: What is a local anesthetic?

REPLY.

A chemical compound injected into the neighborhood of a nerve, which will deaden it temporarily.

A BEWILDERED INVESTOR.

Eagle Harbor, Mich., July 18.—Having $600 to invest, I am writing in the hope that perhaps some one on your financial staff may offer some ideas. I come to you because my regular advisers appear to have nothing but negative ideas.

I asked a broker to buy some Woolworth stock. He advised me not to do so because the government is soon to propose a heavy tax on chain stores. Then I asked his advice on the investment of the cash. When I intimated that Peoples Gas looked good he assured me that would be a mistake because the government is going to do something about utilities. Then I suggested General Electric or Westinghouse. He objected on the ground that the federal authorities plan to "smear" those two companies in its monopoly investigations. Columbia Broadcasting has excellent earnings and pays good dividends but he cautioned against it as the radio broadcasting business is at the mercy of the regulatory bodies and may be ruined any time the dictators at Washington wish to cut the stations off the air.

By this time I was thoroughly confused and the suggestion was made that I buy some steel stocks. My broker friend explained that would be foolhardy because the government is fixing things so that the unions rather than the shareowners should get the profits, if any, in that industry. Besides, the earnings are insignificant anyway.

Thinking that perhaps the insurance business offered a haven for investment without governmental interference I intimated that I might buy some insurance stocks. He was horrified at my lack of knowledge concerning the regulations about to take place in the insurance business.

Finally, in desperation, I said, "I guess there is nothing to do but buy government bonds." "Well," says he, "that may be O. K. for a short time, but watch out, the government is going broke sooner or later."

So I used the money to buy a few choice lots in the Eagle Harbor cemetery.

HOMER GUCK.

FISHING.

Chicago, July 20.—Did you ever sit on the bank of a stream for hours and hours fishing? Or did you ever sit in a boat until the sun cooked and the mosquitoes ate you? You didn't catch a fish; you didn't even get a bite but you had such a good time expecting something unusual to happen. Any minute you might land a big one. You watch turtles crawling upon logs to sun themselves and you watch them meeting other turtles and you wonder what method of communication they have, if any, and what do they get out of life.

Cows are grazing at the foot of the hill; all this gives you a restful feeling. You are thinking well of every one—your enemies seem miles away. In fact, you wonder if you ever had an enemy. You still haven't caught any fish, but you will come again tomorrow; the fish may be biting and if they aren't you can enjoy the scenery and dream beautiful dreams that might come true.

ANNE JESTY ROGERS.

HAS McNUTT BOXED UP.

Oak Park, Ill., July 14.—I cannot see why there should be all this mystery about the McNutt appointment when it is so well recognized that F. D. Roosevelt is determined to rule, and to that end will be a presidential candidate in 1940. He would prefer to be the candidate of the Democratic party. Failing that he will probably head a third ticket. He is very subject to mandates and may get one from the stars at any time.

Acting on McNutt's own statement and by his appointment to a high governmental position, from which he cannot possibly be spared later on, F. D. R. has McNutt tightly boxed in, within a month after his return to the United States, thus disposing of a dangerous contender for the nomination on the Democratic ticket.

B. D. W.

BEER BARREL POLKA.

Chicago, July 18.—The most popular number in years. Why? Because it is never played in swing style. This should be a tip to sponsors of radio programs that the public as a whole want to hear melody and detest swing to the extent of shutting off the program in many instances.

I am not a music master. No—notes look like a bunch of birds on a fence to me. I do love music and dancing and the enthusiasm to dance furnished by real melody and not a substitute which makes it nearly impossible to recognize what number is being played.

Get smart. Swing is passé and the world is glad of it. LEROY J. WAGNER.

BONFIRE RECOMMENDED.

Newton, Ill., July 14.—Our rubber stamp congress has passed a bill for a memorial building on Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate to save his papers for the nation. He is expected blushingly to sign the measure. As to any papers he may leave relating to his acts as President, so far as I am concerned, the proper disposal of them would be a good bonfire.

Nothing of any value to the country would be wasted, but on the contrary its people in the future would be saved a lot of shame and mortification.

GEO. W. MCCOLLEY.

YES, LETTERS WELCOME.

Chicago, July 22.—I know of half a dozen cases of more than one member of a family on public payrolls. I think such matters are scandalous. Does THE TRIBUNE care for my information?

TAXPAYER.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

TO CHANGE NAME.

Chicago, July 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I wish to change my name by taking my mother's. She has remarried. What is the proper procedure?

D. C.

"It is sufficient, in legal proceedings and elsewhere, that a person is designated by a name by which he is commonly known and called, even though it is not his true name. . . . A marriage by the name by which the individual is commonly known is valid. . . . Where it is not done for fraudulent purposes and in the absence of statutory restriction, one may lawfully change his name without resort to any legal proceedings, and for all purposes the name thus assumed will constitute his legal name just as if he had borne it from birth."—45 C. J. 380, 381.

In Reinken vs. Reinken, 351 Ill., 409, these principles were applied in holding that a divorced woman can resume her maiden name without court permission.

Chapter 96 of the Illinois revised statutes provides that a person "may" file a petition and secure a court decree, but it is held that such statutes do not abrogate the common law right of an individual to change his name without application to the courts.

In adopting a new name, one should for convenience give notice of the change to those persons to whom the information may be material. In a series of transactions beginning under the old name, for example dealing with a real estate title, we suggest continuing to use the old name, or using both names coupled with such an expression as "formerly known as," to avoid confusion. If an additional showing is asked for, affidavits should suffice.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONTRACTOR'S LIEN.

Chicago, July 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—How long after labor, for example, painting, is performed on a building can a lien be placed against the property if the owner furnished the material?

D. C.

Any person who, by contract with the owner or with one whom the owner has knowingly permitted to contract for improvements, furnishes labor or material used in such improvements, is a contractor and is given a lien by section 1, chapter 82, Illinois Revised Statutes.

The contractor, in order to retain his lien against third parties, must file claim within four months [section 7], but as to the original owner he may file his suit within two years after completion [section 9].

Subcontractors must, unless contractor's statement to owner covers their facts, serve notice on the owner [section 24] within sixty days after completion or file notice if service cannot be had [section 25] and suit must be started within four months after final payment was due contractor [section 33]. If the owner wishes to dispute the lien, his remedy is to serve demand that suit be commenced. If the lien claimant does not comply within thirty days or release within ten days after additional demand, he forfeits $25. Sections 34 and 35.

STRAY BIRD.

Chicago, July 15.—I would like to report a very disturbing and noisy pigeon. It flies from roof to roof as soon as day breaks and is so annoying. Its moans are more noisy and disturbing than a dog's bark and they keep up constantly until about 9 o'clock. As our children are awakened at 5 o'clock, I wonder if something cannot be done either to have this pigeon cooped up in its own yard or be disposed of.

J. W.

Upon receipt of this complaint we went to the address given and found that the pigeon complained of was a mourning dove. We captured this bird and brought it to the 11th district station, where it was placed in a cage in the basement. The Anti-Cruelty society has been notified and will pick up the bird. In our investigation we found that this was a stray bird which did not belong to any one.

JAMES P. ALLMAN,
Commissioner of Police.

DOGS.

Chicago, July 11.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it compulsory for dogs to be licensed and to be on a leash or muzzled? Three dogs at our address are without licenses and are permitted to run at large without leash or muzzle. They frighten my children. I wonder what can be done about it.

A. K.

Investigation has been made by an officer who reports that he found three dogs kept at the location for which the owners have obtained proper license. The owners of the dogs deny that their animals are permitted to run at large but they were advised by the officer that if such violation is found they will be given an arrest summons. Undoubtedly there will be no cause for further complaint.

JAMES P. ALLMAN,
Commissioner Chicago Police Dept.

THE JUDGE WILL DECIDE.

Chicago, July 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A couple married ten years contemplate separation.

1. Husband claims as long as he has paid for all the furniture, it belongs to him.
2. Wife claims it belongs to her.
3. Which of them is right?

LEADER OF IRISH TELLS STORY OF BOMBING DRIVE

Bares Organization Work in United States.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—The Irish republican army, a band of fervent patriots seeking by a campaign of bloodless bombings to wring complete independence from England, is establishing a widespread organization in the United States.

Amazing inside details of the plans for expanding their forces and carrying on the war with England were revealed here by one of the army's top ranking leaders. Extreme precautions were taken to circumvent British agents who, it was said, were working through Washington to break up the organization in this country.

The interview with this leader, a tall, ascetic looking youth with light, wavy hair and pale blue eyes, took place on the top floor of a house in a distant corner of New York City.

Points to 150 Bombings.

According to this spokesman, the IRA expeditionary force is waging a successful war against England. He spoke proudly of the 150 bombings his compatriots had carried out in England during the last six months.

Peace will come only when British troops are withdrawn from Irish soil, when the free state and the northern counties are united in a government free from all ties with England, when the English king is no longer recognized as Ireland's king. Until that day the war will be continued relentlessly, the IRA leader asserted.

Meanwhile, the IRA does not consider the free state government under Prime Minister Eamon de Valera as legitimate because the British set it up. The IRA recognized the second dail, elected in 1921 and suppressed by the English, as the legal government. The second dail met clandestinely through the years until last December it transferred its civil powers to the IRA and dissolved.

Refuse to Recognize Dail.

The IRA holds that when hostilities ceased in 1921 the republic already was functioning under the second dail, elected by the people, but that England achieved a coup d'etat during the following year. The delegate who went to London returned with a dominion status for Ireland. The provisional government refused to recognize the second dail and by force it was prevented from assembling.

Part of the funds for the IRA's war to restore the republic come from the United States where dues and voluntary contributions are pouring in from the pockets of IRA members, and Irish-Americans.

Most of the IRA members here are naturalized citizens, this leader declared. The country has been divided into districts for better organization. He reported Chicago had an especially "loyal and active group."

The ranks are filled with Sinn Feiners who fought the British two decades ago and members of the Clan Na Gael, the Irish independence group which grew from the immigrants to America after the 1847 potato famine. They swore to avenge themselves on England for high rents and taxes.

The IRA's spokesman talked bitterly of the English. As a small boy he had seen his mother gun whipped by the black and tans. If he and his compatriots failed to free Ireland their descendants would continue to carry on the struggle, he prophesied.

"We have taken no lives—yet," he asserted. "If we wanted it that way England would be in shambles. We have men in the munition factories, in the utilities, all transportation agencies and in communications such as mails. All we have to do is give the word.

Forty Men Captured.

"Our effort is to disrupt the life of the ordinary citizen. That is an accepted tactic in any war. Forty of our men have been caught but that isn't many for a six months' war. The damage from our bombings is estimated at more than a million dollars.

"The extraordinary precautions taken to safeguard English lives are contingent upon English treatment of captured members of the expeditionary force as prisoners of war. If she takes the life of one man we'll drop those precautions."

Recent censorship regulations in the free state and pending laws in the British commons providing for the arrest, deportation and barring from Britain of Irish agitators were pointed out as evidence that England had grown to fear the IRA.

Halifax Ignores Demand.

The IRA sent Viscount Halifax, the British foreign secretary, an ultimatum on Jan. 12 of this year demanding the withdrawal of troops and British influence from Ireland within four days. Halifax ignored it. On Jan. 16 the IRA struck. Explosions rocked London, Manchester, Northumberland, and Birmingham. They have continued intermittently.

Scotland and Wales have been untouched because the IRA considers them separate nations and hopes they, too, will revolt against England.

With bombs bursting in railway stations, public squares, banks and bridges back home, extraordinary measures were taken in New York City at the time of the visit of King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth because of the IRA here. All this was unnecessary, the IRA leader declared.

"No member of the IRA would have so much as snapped his fingers," he asserted. "We would have regarded any kind of violence as an offense against the United States."

He told with a chuckle how Scotland Yard men had raided the uptown headquarters of the army two nights before the royal couple's arrival in the city. They were unable to force the steel cabinets containing records and the following night the bomb squad of the New York City police force staged a raid.

Seized in Holdup

Liberty Arsenis, wearing dark glasses and carrying toy pistol used in holdup attempt.

Mrs. Margaret De Vries sent for help yesterday when a tiny woman with dark glasses entered her milk store at 2239 Montrose avenue. Capt. Daniel Lynch and Detectives John Grover and James Walsh of the Damen avenue police were passing. They were hailed and sent in.

In the little woman's purse they found a dangerous looking toy pistol. They said she confessed that she had come in to rob the milk store. Miss Loretta Ryan was summoned from a milk store at 2139 Montrose avenue. She identified the woman as the robber who took $25 from her on July 6. Mrs. De Vries had recognized the toy gun woman from a description sent around the neighborhood at the time of that robbery. The police locked up the woman with the gun. She identified herself as Mrs. Liberty Arsenis, 22 years old, and said she has no home.

VIGILANTES RISE OVER LOUISIANA TO HALT GRAFT

New Orleans Gambling, Fearing Jury, Halts.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New Orleans, La., July 22.—A popular uprising of the vigilante type against irregularities and political corruption in state departments seemed well under way today. The uprising centers in the citizens' voluntary committee, which announces that branches have been formed in Shreveport, Monroe, Alexandria, La Fayette, Baton Rouge, and Lake Charles.

Concealed public records and pay rolls, a relic of the late Huey Long dictatorship, are targets. A small army of federal agents, a federal grand jury, and a parish [county] grand jury at Baton Rouge are investigating misuse of WPA materials and labor and alleged shakedown of political slush funds from WPA workers, income tax evasions, alleged violations of the Connally act concerning hot oil [oil moved secretly to avoid federal regulation], tax rackets, and the new Charity hospital here, part of the foundations of which have been sinking.

New Orleans Gambling Halts.

While these official investigations are under way volunteer agencies are seeking to delve into political rackets.

Political jitters was in evidence here today. The lid was clamped on gambling houses at midnight in New Orleans, which has boasted it was wide open as any town. One authority is quoted:

"Some officials have an idea an indictment may come out of gambling."

Handbooks are still operating.

FALL IN ELEVATOR SHAFT FATAL.

Charles Wimmer, 65 years old, 8317 Throop street, head of the Swift & Co. elevator inspection department at the stock yards, died in Billings hospital yesterday of injuries suffered in a fall down an elevator shaft Tuesday.

MASKED GUNMEN CURB TAXI; ROB CASHIER OF $5,000

Four masked gunmen riding in a dark sedan robbed Maurice Wolpe, cashier for the South Central Check Exchange, Inc., 103 East Cermak road, of $5,000 yesterday. Wolpe, who lives at 1545 East 60th street, was taking the money to the exchange in a taxicab from the Central National bank, 728 Roosevelt road. As the cab neared Clark and 18th streets, the robbers' car drew alongside. Three men leaped out, pointed revolvers at Wolpe and the cab driver, Michael Dudash, 2815 South Michigan avenue, got the money, and then sped away.

Kills Neighbor After Dirt from Digging Falls in Yard

John Tanner spent most of yesterday afternoon digging holes for garbage pails in the yard at the rear of his home at 522 Indiana avenue, Hammond. Some of the dirt fell over the fence into the adjoining back yard of Denzel Ellyson, 526 Indiana avenue. Angered, Ellyson emerged from his house with a shotgun and killed Tanner. Ellyson was arrested by Hammond police.

LIBRARY READERS USE THE TRIBUNE FILE MOST OF ALL

Photograph Pages of Old Issues for Permanence.

More than three times as many people read THE TRIBUNE as any other newspaper at the Chicago public library. This was shown yesterday in a report made by Edward M. Peterson, in charge of the newspaper room at the central library.

Peterson said 13,417 persons asked to see back files of THE TRIBUNE in 1938. The next most popular Chicago paper had 4,074 readers. The New York Times was third in popularity with 3,748 readers.

Peterson's report was made to Carl B. Roden, head librarian, in connection with a library project to make a photographic newspaper history of Chicago.

Old Papers Photographed.

Last year the library started photographing old Chicago newspapers, chronologically, page by page, starting with the Chicago Democrat of 1833. The pages are photographed by a special vertical camera which uses 35 millimeter film, 100 feet long, for a negative.

After the negative is developed and a positive film made, prints of the film will be viewed by readers. The film is placed in a projection machine which enlarges the image and projects it so that one quarter of a standard newspaper page covers a paper screen that is 12 inches square.

Permanent Record Made.

Roden said the purpose of making a photographic record of Chicago newspapers is twofold. With this method a full year's editions of a newspaper will require about 2 per cent of the storage space required by the large bulky bound volumes of the paper, he said.

In addition the film makes a permanent record. He said that many old copies of Chicago newspapers are now becoming dry and brittle with age.

The chronological newspaper record of Chicago is now complete to 1895 and will be completed to 1917 under the present library board appropriation. According to Peterson, who is in charge of the project, THE TRIBUNE has been used for the photographic record wherever early editions were available, because of its popularity.

Firemen Search 5 Hours for Tunnel Blaze; Quench It

Where there's smoke there's fire. Every one knows that. And so the firemen kept cool yesterday as they searched hour after hour for the source of the smoke that billowed out of the La Salle street tunnel. After five hours they lifted the right manhole cover and found the insulation of the street car lines' cables ablaze. Looking vindicated, the firemen put the fire out. Street cars, which had been rerouted, began going through the tunnel again.

CHICAGO'S DEATH RATE INCREASES AS BIRTHS DROP

Mortalities from Syphilis Down Sharply.

Chicago's general death rate increased during the first six months of 1939 to 10.7 per 1,000 population, compared with 9.9 per 1,000 during the same period last year, a report issued by the board of health showed yesterday. The birth rate for the same period declined from 13.3 to 12.9 per 1,000.

There was a decline in the death rates for syphilis, typhoid, diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles, and nephritis [kidney ailments]. Increases in the rates for heart disease, cancer, tuberculosis, pneumonia, and whooping cough more than offset the decline in the other diseases, causing the upturn in the general rate.

Infant Mortality Rate Climbs.

The infant death rate went up slightly from 36 per 1,000 births to 36.3, while the maternal deaths remained the same, 2.9 per 1,000 births.

The largest decline was in syphilis. During the first half of 1938, there were 7,229 cases and 110 deaths. The rate of deaths was 6.1 per 100,000 population. The health board received reports of 9,972 cases in the first half of this year but only seventy-nine deaths. The 1939 rate is 4.4 per 100,000.

The largest increase was registered by heart disease. There were 5,783 deaths from this ailment between January and July last year for a rate of 323.3. In the same period this year there were 6,622 heart deaths, a rate of 370.2 per 100,000 population.

Auto Fatalities Top Diseases.

The rate of deaths from automobile accidents, 16.4 per 100,000 population, was higher than the death rate of typhoid, diphtheria, syphilis, whooping cough, scarlet fever, and measles.

A comparative table of death rates [per 100,000 population unless otherwise indicated] from various causes for the first six months of 1938 and 1939 follows:

Cause—	Deaths.	Rate.	Deaths.	Rate.
*Total	17,870	9.9	19,131	10.7
†Infant	860	36.0	834	36.3
†Maternal	69	2.9	66	2.9
Heart	5,783	323.3	6,622	370.2
Cancer	2,360	131.9	2,496	139.5
Nephritis	1,635	91.4	1,618	90.5
Tuberculosis	970	54.2	1,025	57.3
Pneumonia	1,059	59.2	1,137	63.6
Auto	294	16.4	293	16.4

Scarlet fever	36	2.0	20	1.1
Measles	39	2.2	1	0.6

*Per 1,000 population. †Per 1,000 live births.

There were 23,878 births during the first half of 1938 compared with 22,959 in the first six months of this year, the report said.

Later he turned to editing, and for illustrators for his books he turned to such men as Pierre Bonard and Rouault Raoul Duffy.

RITES AT GRAVE TO HONOR EARLY FOE OF SLAVERY

McNabb, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—A centennial celebration to honor Benjamin Lundy, pioneer abolitionist active in the turbulent history of this country in the early nineteenth century, will be held on Aug. 20 near here at the rural cemetery in which he was buried 100 years ago.

A permanent marker will be placed on his grave by the alumni of the John Swaney Consolidated school, who have interested themselves in perpetuating Lundy's memory.

Alumni of the school, situated in the midst of a ten acre campus about two miles from McNabb, are sponsoring the celebration with the cooperation of the Illinois Society of Friends, a Quaker organization which holds its annual meeting here each August.

Tablet to Be Unveiled.

The ceremonies will include an address, music by a Negro choral group, and the unveiling of a bronze tablet honoring Lundy. The committee in charge plans to issue a reprint of his famous newspaper, The Genius of Universal Emancipation.

Mr. Lundy was born in Sussex county, New Jersey, on Jan. 4, 1789, of Quaker stock. Following the western trend of civilization of his time, he went to Wheeling, Va., now West Virginia, to learn the saddler's trade.

It was there that Lundy came into contact with slavery, witnessing for the first time the trains of Negroes passing through the town in the slave trade.

Moves Next to Ohio.

Moving to St. Clairsville, O., he gathered about him friends who, like himself, opposed slavery. In 1815 he organized the Union Humane society, reputed to have been the first abolition society.

At St. Clairsville he printed the first issues of his paper. After five years of its publication there, Lundy spent much of his time traveling—mostly on foot—organizing societies.

In July, 1838, he came to Putnam county, Ill., to join his children, his wife having died while he was on a trip to Haiti. He later settled at Lowell, Ill., and died on Aug. 22, 1839.

ESTRANGED SON OF RICH FAMILY FATALLY BEATEN

Two Drinking Companions Detained at Elgin.

Elgin police were confronted with a mystery yesterday when a little known resident of that city was found fatally beaten in his hotel room. The victim of the slaying was revealed in death as a member of a prominent Cleveland, O., family who had lived in Elgin under an assumed name for thirty-five years.

Elgin knew him as Jack Adams, 57 years old, who once worked as a tinsmith for Mayor Myron M. Lehman when the mayor owned a tinshop. But his real name, Police Chief Joseph G. Huber announced, was William Modrock.

Silent on His Dual Life.

Modrock's sister, Mrs. Josephine B. Kohler, widow of a Cleveland mayor, confirmed the slaying victim's identity, but declined to discuss any other details of her brother's dual life.

Mrs. Kohler's husband, Frederick, who died six years ago while he was mayor, left an estate valued at nearly $500,000. Each month Modrock received a check, supposedly from his family, Chief Huber said. His friends said Modrock once told them he changed his name to avoid embarrassing his relatives.

Order Two Detained.

Late last night Assistant State's Attorney W. Ben Morgan of Elgin ordered that two men he had questioned be held in connection with the killing. They are Christian Sell, 24, of 682 Hartwell avenue, Elgin, and Russell Stewart, 20, of South Elgin.

"Both have admitted they were in Modrock's room in the Washington hotel [100 Division street, Elgin]," said Morgan, "and that there was a struggle in which Sell struck Modrock. All the men had been drinking together until the hotel bar was closed at midnight Saturday. Henry Dufer, the hotel clerk, saw them with Modrock in the lobby."

Blow on Head Fatal.

Dufer went out for lunch at 12:30 a. m. and was informed by a maid when he returned that Modrock, severely injured, was moaning in his room. He investigated and found the mystery man unconscious. He died soon afterward in a hospital. Death was due to a blow on the head.

The authorities were notified by Mrs. Kohler that she would come to Elgin for the body tomorrow.

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 22.—(AP)—Eleven year old Stanley Dobruk confessed today he shot and killed his 14 year old sister Frances yesterday in a quarrel over 2 cents she owed him for picking berries.

"But I didn't mean to do it," Prosecutor Ivan A. Johnston quoted the boy as saying.

The weapon was a .22 caliber rifle Stanley won in a magazine contest.

Frances was killed as she stood at an ironing board in the kitchen of the farm home of her father, John Dobruk, near New Haven, Mich. He was using the gun to frighten her, Stanley said, when "suddenly it went off, and she fell to the floor."

Probate Judge Ray H. Callens, who presides in juvenile cases, will decide what action to take against the boy.

CRIME BODY ASKS LABOR TO PURGE LAWLESS FORCES

Federation Head Replies It's Police Job.

The Chicago crime commission, in a bulletin to its members, declared yesterday that organized labor must purge itself of the criminal element within its ranks and called upon the Chicago Federation of Labor to take the initiative.

John Fitzpatrick defends labor record.

The crime commission recalled the prohibition era when all bootleggers were armed and no one wondered why. Their business was outside the law and they constituted a law unto themselves, the commission stated, but labor has not the same need of protecting itself.

Rap Gun Toting Laborites.

"These men are known to be affiliated with labor organizations," the bulletin said in reference to a number of instances of labor union leaders carrying concealed weapons. "Many of them, in fact, are officials of labor groups. Labor unions do not exist contrary to the law.

"They are entitled to the full protection of the law in all their legal dealings. Why, then, do these men carry concealed weapons?

"In the face of the fact that during the last eight years six men known to be affiliated with the painters' union were shot and killed by persons who were never apprehended or prosecuted, it is permissible to reach the conclusion that some sort of rivalry similar to that of bootleg days exists within the labor field.

Speculate on Racket Link.

"Whether that rivalry is over the control of some particular racket or merely an unscrupulous battle for control is an open question.

"The tactics pursued in the killings are the same as those used by the prohibition gangsters—just as vicious and just as illegal. They must be combated just as strenuously as were the henchmen of Capone.

"Officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor should not wait for law enforcement agencies to take radical steps. They should have acted long before this because there is no question in any one's mind but that they have been and are aware of the viciousness that has crept into the ranks of organized labor. They have not acted up to date, however, and the time has come for a cleanup of this element by the authorities."

President John Fitzpatrick of the C. F. of L., when informed of the Crime Commission charges, said:

"I replied to a similar statement by the crime commission a few months ago. I told them they make a lot of fuss about any crime to which they can attribute a labor angle and they ignore other crimes.

"They talk about killings connected with the painters' union. What is the police department doing about them? What is the state's attorney doing about them? What's the crime commission doing?

"Organized labor's record must be good if they can't pin any of those murders on us. Let the other agencies do their work and we'll do ours."

WOMAN'S BODY TAKEN FROM LAKE.

A woman's torso was found yesterday wedged among the rocks off Briar place in Lake Michigan. Sheffield police said there was no evidence of criminal violence. The body apparently had been in the water since last fall.

LAWYER MISSING IN MURDER TRIAL GETS JAIL TERM

Frank A. McDonnell, a lawyer, was sentenced to two days in jail and fined $25 yesterday on a charge of contempt by Judge Robert Jerome Dunne in the Criminal court.

The action was based on McDonnell's disappearance last March from a murder trial in which he was defense counsel. He stayed away nine days. A mistrial, which cost the county $2,500, resulted. The defendants, Stanton Cooke and Peter Biron, accused of killing John Delcourt, a handbook operator, were acquitted at a second trial.

In court yesterday McDonnell said he had been suffering from amnesia and insomnia. He said he disregarded doctor's orders in attending the first trial as much as he did. He said he lost his memory during the trial and did not regain it for two weeks. McDonnell has been fined or censured seven times for contempt of court since 1921.

TRIANGLE STORY HOLDS PREACHER IN WIFE'S DEATH

Flint, Mich., July 22.—[Special.]—Examination of James W. Lane, charged with having killed his wife two weeks ago, has been continued by Municipal Judge Frank W. Cain for further investigation. Lane will be taken before Judge Cain next Friday and the court then will decide whether to hold him for trial in Circuit court.

Mrs. Helen Sherwood, 41 years old, housekeeper for the Lanes, testified yesterday she and Lane had been having illicit relations with the knowledge of Mrs. Lane, who was partly blind.

Lane testified that the shooting of his wife was accidental.

He has been employed for years in an automobile plant. About eight years ago he started an interdenominational church in Frankenmuth, Mich., and has conducted weekly services there.

CHALLEDON WINS; JOHNSTOWN 3D IN CLASSIC

LLOYD MANGRUM IS 2D WITH 139; NELSON THIRD

Field Reduced for Windup Today.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Dick Metz, the young Mill Road farm professional who would make an ideal hero for a Hollywood man-who-came-back number, was still playing his rôle yesterday in the fortieth Western Open golf tournament at the Medinah Country club. His total of 138, three under par, gave him a one stroke lead on the field entering today's final round of thirty-six holes on Medinah's No. 3 course.

Handsome Richard, who was kept from competition by a leg injury in 1937 which threatened to end his career, had shot a record 67 on the No. 3 layout Friday. Yesterday, in the same fashion in which he rallied from his injury to finish second in the 1938 National Open, he bounced back off of an untidy 37 on the No. 1 course for a 34 and the 71 which leaves him one up on the rest of the smart field battling for the Western title.

That one stroke margin is all that separates Dick from Lloyd Mangrum, Bambino of the Clan Mangrum. The 24 year old Los Angeles pro, who was only a stroke back of Metz Friday with a 68 on No. 3, worked around the No. 1 course yesterday in 71, one over par.

Nelson Third at 140.

Today's battle will be far from a two man show, for only a stroke away at 140 is Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., the lean young National Open champion, who added a 72 on No. 3 to his first round of 68. From there on the leaders have a fairly comfortable margin. There follows a threesome of 143's, including Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., who a week ago yesterday won the National P. G. A. title from Nelson; Jimmy Hines, curly headed New York Irishman, and Ky Laffoon of Northmoor. Laffoon, incidentally tossed in the lowest card of the day while playing with Metz, a rousing 68 on No. 1.

Denny Shute Cards 69.

Denny Shute, the silent gent from Huntington, W. Va., who has held the British open and national P. G. A. titles, notified the gallery of nearly 1,000 that he is here by knocking down a 69 for 144, whereat he was joined by Harry Adams of the home club. Harry was bound for better things through the fifteenth, but went four over par on the last three holes. Shute joined Laffoon in the distinction of breaking 70. They were the only parties in the field of 300 to do so yesterday.

The detail for the final rounds today consists of 78 players. The qualifiers for the stretch had to be among the low 50 pros and ties and the low 12 amateurs and ties. Fifty-one professionals made the grade with 36 hole totals of 154, while 23 of the amateurs entered with 156's.

The 145 delegation included four professionals, headed by big Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N. J., who is trying right hard to make it four western championships in a row for himself. The field is a trifle sharper in this particular event, not to mention the fact that Medinah offers competition a bit more ornery than most golf lots. Ralph, who has saved much of his golf for the stretch run, will have to use the whip to overhaul the three leaders today.

Guldahl Gets Eagle.

Guldahl played sporadic golf on his round over No. 1, but finished with a creditable 71 in which he had trouble connecting with the greens on the first nine, and then was putting for birds most of the way back. A drive, a spoon and a fifteen foot putt gave him the only eagle of the leaders at the 507 yard tenth.

Cards of the three thirty-six hole leaders follow:

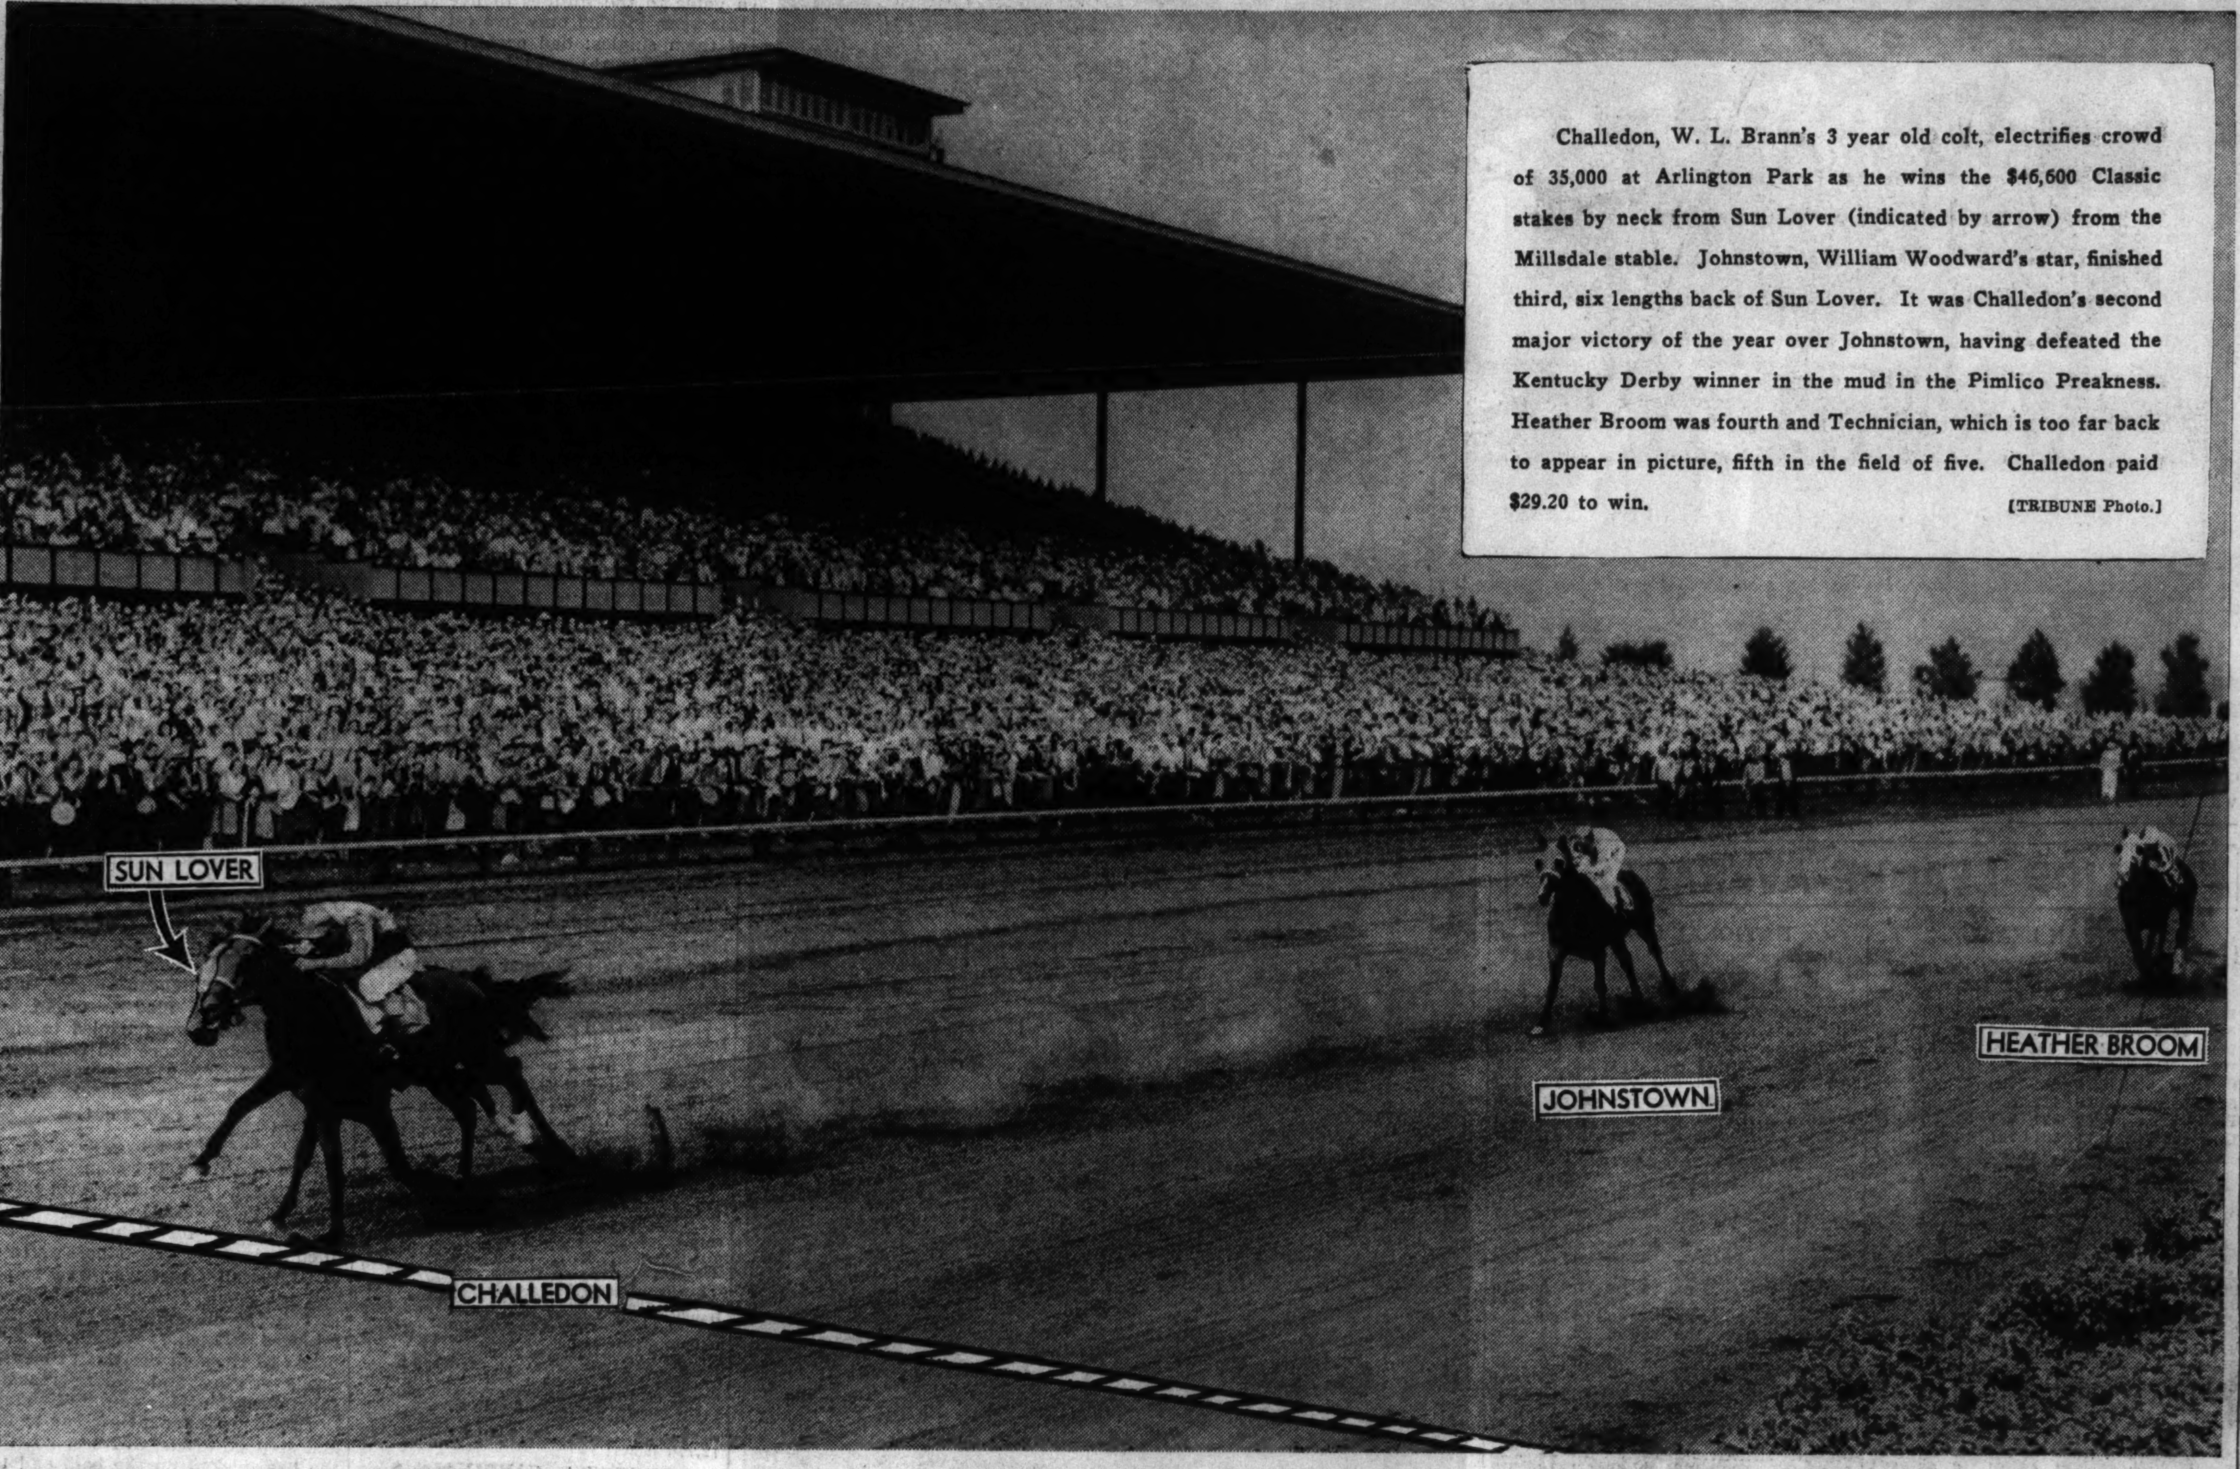
NECK AND NECK TO THE WIRE—AND JOHNSTOWN'S FAR BEHIND!



Challedon, W. L. Brann's 3 year old colt, electrifies crowd of 35,000 at Arlington Park as he wins the $46,600 Classic stakes by neck from Sun Lover (indicated by arrow) from the Millsdale stable. Johnstown, William Woodward's star, finished third, six lengths back of Sun Lover. It was Challedon's second major victory of the year over Johnstown, having defeated the Kentucky Derby winner in the mud in the Pimlico Preakness. Heather Broom was fourth and Technician, which is too far back to appear in picture, fifth in the field of five. Challedon paid $29.20 to win. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Woodward Colt, 1-5, 6 Lengths Behind.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Thirty-five thousand followers of thoroughbred racing gathered yesterday at Arlington Park with the expectation of seeing a great horse, Johnstown, win a great race—the $46,600 Classic stakes.

They saw a great horse win—but it wasn't the one they expected. It was Challedon. They saw something more, something they hadn't bargained on. They saw the fall of a champion.

Thoroughly beaten, Johnstown finished third, six lengths behind Sun Lover, which was a neck short of the winner. Heather Broom was fourth and Technician last in the field of five horses. So confident were the fans that Johnstown could not fail that they backed him down to the minimum of 1 to 5 odds, remembering his mighty triumphs in the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont, the Withers, the Dwyer, the Wood Memorial, and the Paumonok. Challedon was held at more than 13 to 1 and Sun Lover at 8 to 1.

Crowd Cheers Johnstown.

As the horses paraded to the post, the spectators applauded Johnstown, an unusual thing on a race track. When the field swept past the stands immediately after the break, a spontaneous cheer rose from the massed thousands because they saw that Johnstown was going out to run as he had always run before, dominating the pace and racing the legs off any horse that tried to go with him.

Technician was attempting to keep up as they headed into the clubhouse turn, but already Johnstown was beginning to draw away. He was three lengths to the good as they started the run down the back stretch. Technician was four lengths in advance of Sun Lover with Heather Broom next and Challedon last. The confidence of Johnstown's backers increased as the long striding colt maintained his margin.

Then, as the horses approached the far turn a strange thing began to happen. The spectators suddenly realized that Johnstown's rivals were closing in upon him. In those earlier stages Johnstown had been running at killing pace—a quarter in :23 1/5, a half in :47, five-eighths in :59. It was faster than sprinters go.

Johnstown Slackens Pace.

Now on the last turn, that early speed was beginning to take its toll. Johnstown's rivals were overhauling him. A champion was nearing the end of a speed trail that he had blazed through Kentucky and the east.

In vain, Jimmy Stout called on him. As they swung into the stretch and headed home, Johnstown was still a length and a half to the good, but Challedon was coming now with a tremendous rush and Sun Lover was moving with him. At the three-sixteenths pole, Johnstown and Challedon were locked in a head and head struggle. At the eighth pole, the champion was conquered.

That was the moment Challedon's admirers had been awaiting many months. They had said that if he ever looked Johnstown in the eye in the stretch he would beat him. And now it was accomplished.

Withstands Sun Lover.

But then a new menace appeared. It sent Harry Richards furiously to the whip to keep Challedon at his task. For now Sun Lover was coming on under Johnny Oros—the boy who can get the last ounce of finishing power out of a horse.

And then Challedon showed that, if a champion was to be dethroned, it was fitting that he should be the one to dethrone him. In that last sixteenth he ran like the conqueror of a champion. It wasn't in the books for Sun Lover to beat him.

Following his triumph, Challedon came prancing back to the winner's circle. Then Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army, presented W. L. Brann of Maryland, owner of Challedon, with the Classic trophy, which is a solid gold replica of the Coronation cup.

Challedon's winning time was 2:02. In the mutuels he paid $29.20 and $8.40, no show tickets being sold. Sun Lover returned $6.40 to place.

BY ARCH WARD.

America has chosen its gridiron heroes of 1938 in the greatest popularity contest sport has known.

The boys in the counting room have now taken charge and when their work is completed the fans of a nation will know the personnel of the team that will represent the colleges against the New York Giants in Chicago's sixth annual All Star game on Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 30.

The contest department of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is swamped with late returns. So are most of the 332 other newspapers and radio stations which coöperated with this department in the selection of the people's team. It will be Tuesday morning before the final standings can be presented.

5,895,407 Votes Recorded.

When the tabulators called it a day late yesterday afternoon a total of 5,895,407 votes had been recorded. They will work throughout today and tonight, if necessary, to finish the job by Monday afternoon. It looks as if the final figure will exceed 8,000,000.

Votes poured into THE TRIBUNE yesterday by the hundreds of thousands. They came by messengers, by mail and by wire. The polls closed at midnight and scores of organizations waited until the last possible minute to file their returns in the hope that the enormity of their vote would swing the tide in favor of their candidates.

The All-Stars who will line up against the world's professional champions truly will be a team of the people, by the people, and for the people. It is certain that never before has so much effort been put into a contest of this character. The campaign involved the support of senators, legislators, governors, college presidents, alumni, and thousands upon thousands of football followers whose only reason for participation in the poll was to have a hand in the election of the strongest available talent.

Walks 12 Miles to Get Votes.

A 12 year old admirer of Bob MacLeod, Dartmouth half back, walked twelve miles in northern Michigan, from farmhouse to farmhouse, gathering ballots. Supporters of Bronko Smilanich went into the mines, the mountains, and the plains of Arizona and New Mexico in quest of votes. Mayors in many cities have proclaimed special days for home town candidates. Alumni have toured the country's great industrial plants, parks, playgrounds, and beaches in efforts to roll up the count. Theaters have appealed to patrons for support of city or neighborhood favorites.

Friends of the headline players—

50,000 to See Sox, Yanks in 2 Games Today

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox are going to war again today and it's likely to be quite an afternoon. All they have to do for four or five hours after 1:30 p. m. is to battle the world champion Yankees in a double-header which will tax the 50,000 capacity of Comiskey park.

Jim Dykes' troops haven't been shot down in a twin bill this year. They have swept four of the double engagement and split the others. They now own a winning streak of five games, four over the second place Bostons and the other over the Yanks in the series opener last Friday. The Yanks, even with their big lead, aren't so far off that they can't be caught.

Close to Second Place.

The Sox are so close to second place that Boston has reason to be concerned. These all are items the Sox will keep in mind as they turn to their chores today.

Ted Lyons, the 38 year old wizard, will be trotted out to the mound today in the first game, hoping to improve his current record of nine victories, none of which he acquired from the Yanks. The second battle will be in charge of Johnny Rigney who last Wednesday captured his seventh decision by shutting out Boston's Red Sox.

Joe McCarthy, the Yankee boss, has promised to pick his starters from among Lefty Gomez, Bump Hadley, and Atley Donald, the freshman right hander who has an amazing record of eleven wins without a defeat.

Sox Go East Tonight.

After getting through with their playing program the Sox and Yanks will hop a special train for the east, the champions going home and the Chicagoans continuing on to Boston, where they open a series on Tuesday. After finishing at Boston the Sox meet up with the Yanks again, thus rounding out four consecutive series involving the first and second place teams.

Wachman, Podesta Gain Eastern Tennis Final

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Marvin Wachman of Milwaukee, Wis., and Defending Champion Gerard [Jeff] Podesta of Montclair, N. J., reached the final round of the eastern clay court tennis tournament today. Wachman eliminated 16 year old Earl Bartlett Jr., New Orleans, conqueror of two seeded stars, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4, after Podesta had eliminated Billy Gillespie of Atlanta, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2.

SIX GIANT ERRORS, HOME RUN BY GALAN WIN FOR CUBS, 8 TO 7

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—The Giants, as full of self-pity as a coterie of bounced WPA workers, this afternoon were handed their eighth straight defeat. The Cubs and the Giants' new shortstop, Frank Scalzi, beat the proud New Yorkers, 8 to 7, in the opener of the two game series.

The Cub triumph, made possible by four errors by Signor Scalzi and two by Ken O'Dea, put an end to a five game winning streak against Chicago which the Giants accomplished in those happy days some weeks ago when they had a first class ball club.

Scalzi's terrible day probably was due more to nervousness than a complete lack of natural skill. Early yesterday morning Bill Terry gave him a $5,000 bonus and a $600 a month contract after the stubby shortstop had been made a free agent by Commissioner K. M. Landis. Frankie previously had convinced the judge that the Cleveland Indians had been hiding his light under a bushel in New Orleans. Frank drew his $5,000 signing bonus forthwith, but probably will be placed in a lethal gas chamber by Terry before he ever collects any salary.

Just Like Christmas.

Five of the Cub runs were unearned and one of the other three was fuzzy. The remaining two were produced by an enormous homer which Augie Galan knocked with one on base in the fifth inning.

Claude Passeau was the starting Cub pitcher and winner of his eighth victory. Claude was knocked out in the seventh and was followed by Larry French, who faltered some, and Vance Page, who stopped the Giants with the tying run on third and the winning run on first in the eighth. There also was a tying run on second in the ninth which Page refused to worry about.

The Giants made fifteen hits, including a homer by O'Dea and a triple by Zeke Bonura. The Cubs made only seven hits.

The Cubs, in returning to second place in the league standings, went above the .500 mark for the eastern trip, which closes here tomorrow. They have won eight and lost seven since leaving home the night of July 4. Though in second place, the Cubs are eight and one-half games behind the leading Reds.

Lead Is Cut in Two.

A 2 to 0 lead which the Cubs achieved in the first inning stood up until the Giant third, when the New Yorkers cut it to 2 to 1. The Cubs' splurge in the opening session got under way after one was out. Herman was safe on Scalzi's fumble and went to third on Galan's single to right. Galan reached second on a wild pitch, after which Herman and Galan scored on Gleeson's single to center.

Three hits in a row enabled the Giants to score in the third. With one down Whitehead singled to center and went to third on Demaree's second hit, also a single to center. Ott beat out a single to Bartell, scoring Whitehead.

Good Old O'Dea!

Herman walked with one down in the fifth, whereupon Galan smashed a home run high into the upper deck of the right field stands, scoring behind Capt. Bill for a 4 to 1 count.

The Cubs made it 5 to 1 in the sixth. With one down, G. Russell singled off Salvo's glove and reached second when O'Dea threw into right field trying to catch him off first. Bartell flied to Demaree but Passeau lined a single to left, scoring G. Russell. Hack flied to Ott.

The wolves gave O'Dea the bird for his two throwing errors when he stepped to the plate at the start of the sixth and Ken returned the salute by banging a homer into the upper deck of the right field stand.

Schumacher was the Giant pitcher in the seventh. Herman, for the second time in the game, was safe on an error by Scalzi. Galan popped to

Kayak II. Wins Gold Cup in Record Time

Inglewood, Cal., July 22.—(AP)—Kayak II. won the $50,000 Hollywood gold cup handicap before 45,000 fans at Hollywood Park today. The race was worth $35,075 to the winner, with $10,000 going to the second horse, $5,000 to the third, and $2,500 to the fourth.

Kayak II. hung up a new track record of 2:02 3-5. Cravat finished second, five lengths back. Specify was third, and Can't Wait fourth.

Kayak II. Finished Strong.

Seabiscuit and Shining One held the old track record of 2:03 4-5.

Kayak II. made his move on the far turn and passed the pace setting Specify and Whichcee with ease, with Jockey Georgie Woolf in the saddle.

Kayak's victory marked the second year in a row the Gold cup has gone to Owner C. S. Howard. His Seabiscuit won the Inaugural cup last year.

Pace Setters Fall Back.

Whichcee and Specify set a blistering pace, but just as they faded before Kayak II. in the Santa Anita handicap, so did they fall back before his rush today.

Kayak II. paid $2.80, $2.20, and $2.20. Cravat paid $3 and $2.60, and Specify $2.60.

Harbert, Kingsley Reach Trans-Mississippi Final

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 22.—(AP)—Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich., and Ed Kingsley of Salt Lake City advanced to the finals of the trans-Mississippi golf tournament today. Harbert defeated Harry Todd of Dallas, Tex., 1 up, and Kingsley won from Ray Lowell Jr., Colorado Springs, 5 and 4. They meet tomorrow over 36 holes.

CHALLEDON, taken to the inside almost immediately after the start, began to move up after about five-eighths, continued to find room next to the rail while overtaking HEATHER BROOM, SUN LOVER, and TECHNICIAN, swung a good distance out when entering the stretch, stood severe pressure gamely the entire final three-sixteenths, and stalled off SUN LOVER. The latter, raced wide after a half mile and kept in hand for a mile, raced to the leaders gradually when placed to pressure in the stretch where he was on the extreme outside and, holding on with fine courage, was slowly wearing down the winner. JOHNSTOWN shook off TECHNICIAN after three-eighths, maintained a fast pace easily to the final half mile, did not respond when called upon, drifted out slightly entering the stretch and weakened badly in the last three-sixteenths.

Newsom Fans 12, but Is Beaten on 16 Hits.

Detroit, Mich., July 22.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics and Detroit Tigers divided a double-header today, the visitors winning the first one, 4 to 2, and losing the second, 11 to 10. Lynn Nelson held the Tigers to five hits in the opener. It was his fourth consecutive victory over Detroit. Buck Newsom, his opponent, was found for sixteen hits but fanned twelve. The second game was featured by Schoolboy Rowe's homer in the second inning with the bases full. Rudy York, Tiger catcher, hit two home runs in this contest.

Throng Pays Final Tribute to Comiskey

Friends, business associates, employés, and plain every day faithful White Sox fans filled St. Thomas the Apostle Roman Catholic church to capacity yesterday morning while a solemn requiem mass was sung for J. Louis Comiskey, president-owner of the Sox, who died Tuesday afternoon at his Eagle River, Wis., summer home.

The celebrant was the Reverend Father Edward Flannery, assisted by Deacon Samuel Carroll and Sub-Deacon Robert Madden. The Right Reverend Monsignori C. J. Quille, John Dennison, Thomas Shannon, and Francis O'Brien occupied chairs in the sanctuary during the formal ceremony, following which Father James Leddy, lifelong friend of the Comiskey family, delivered the sermon.

"Louis Comiskey's father, the Old Roman, built up a baseball empire," spoke Father Leddy. "The Old Roman did his part to make baseball the game it is today, loved by men, women, and children. At its height this empire collapsed, because of conspiracy and treachery [the 1919 world series scandal], like a house of cards.

Tells of Charitable Deeds.

"Charles A. Comiskey started to rebuild but was taken away eight years ago, his chosen task unfinished. The son carried on as his father would have wished and despite the handicap of poor health and occasional financial worries, made remarkable progress in his few years as an owner. Lou Comiskey was never known to complain and his charitable deeds were without number."

Among the baseball notables in attendance were Commissioner K. M. Landis, Leslie O'Connor, secretary-treasurer of baseball's head office; William Harridge, president of the American league, who served as one of the active pallbearers, and Ford Frick, president of the National league. The entire White Sox team was present.

Burial at Calvary.

Burial was in the family mausoleum at Calvary.

Mills and Coals Play Two Games with Rivals Today

Gregory Lippold will be seeking his eighth consecutive victory for the Mills in the opener. Lefty Hautekamer will pitch the second game for the Mills.

Hauser, manager and first baseman of the Sheboygan team, set a home run record of sixty-nine while a member of the Minneapolis Millers. Lefty Stevens will pitch the first game for the Coals against Larry Roeck. William Hearn will pitch the second game for the Coals and George Hesik will start for Sheboygan.

Cincinnati Right Hander Yields Five Hits.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22.—(AP)—Paul Derringer exhibited his usual mastery over the Phillies today as Cincinnati's star right hander shut out the Phils, 2 to 0 for his 13th victory of the season against four defeats. Derringer, who has yet to lose a game to the Phillies in five starts this year, yielded only five hits, four of them singles; had perfect control and let only three Phils get as far as second base. Walter Beck likewise pitched great ball for the Phils, but the Reds bunched four of their nine hits in the third and ninth to score their two runs.

PIRATES, 9; BOSTON, 3.

Boston, Mass., July 22.—(AP)—A fan was arrested during an argument with Al Lopez, Boston Bees' catcher, and the Bees played seven error baseball—their worst of the season—today as they lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates, 9 to 3. It was Pittsburgh's eighth victory in eleven starts. Becoming angry when Lopez dropped a foul ball in the seventh inning for his second error of the day, a man booked by police as Ferdinand Brabant, 38, jumped from the grandstand and headed for Lopez. An officer ended the affair as it approached the blow swapping stage by grabbing Brabant. He was charged with disturbing a public assembly.

Giant Errors Enable Cubs to Win, 8 to 7

Whitehead and Gleeson walked. Reynolds doubled to right, Herman scoring. Hartnett was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. G. Russell's grounder went between Scalzi's heels for his second error of the inning and third of the game, Gleeson and Reynolds scoring.

The Giants made three runs and knocked out Passeau in the seventh. Moore and Whitehead singled, after which Demaree flied to Galan and Ott fanned. Bonura tripled to right center, scoring Moore and Whitehead.

Giants Fight Back.

After the Cubs had been retired in the eighth, the Giants stirred up much ado. Scalzi walked. Then Seeds batted for Schumacher and lined a single to left. Moore bounced to G. Russell. Russell's throw to second hit Seeds, Scalzi scoring, Seeds reaching second and Moore first. Page replaced French. Whitehead sacrificed and Herman threw out Demaree, Seeds scoring and Moore reaching third with the tying run. Ott walked. Bonura's grounder hit the bag at first and stopped dead. G. Russell fell on the bag, picked up the ball, and the rally ended.

LEE PITCHES TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—Big Bill Lee tomorrow afternoon will make his fourth try for his tenth victory in the windup of the Cubs' third eastern trip.

Gabby Hartnett expects to catch every playing day until he sets a new major league record. Twenty more games and he will have surpassed Cracker Schalk's record of 1,721 major league games.

The Cubs will leave for home immediately after tomorrow's game. They will open in Wrigley field Tuesday against the Dodgers.

The Giants' losing streak had given Manager Bill Terry a slight edge over Gabby Hartnett in their Drizzlepuss Derby, wiping out the 1,000 points Gabby gained in the opening at Wrigley field last month after the Giants won three straight last time they were in Chicago.

Leaders in the thirty-second annual Chicago to Mackinac Island yacht race just before dusk last night were Louis Ainbinder's Baccarat and Christen J. Peterson's Batavia, according to advices from the United States coast guard cutter Escanaba.

John Kinney's Bangalore, Luther Taige's Chinook, Manning Hodgson's Sally, Clyde E. Lerish's Windsong, and Leeds Mitchell Jr.'s Seiglinde were well up, spread across the course about thirty-five miles north northwest of the starting point in Belmont harbor.

Eighteen of the small cruising craft were sailing ahead within a five mile circle. All the leaders at this time were cruising craft which had a head start of a half to two hours over the universals.

James R. Lowe's Manitou was the only A class craft in sight at the time and was moving up on the smaller boats which had started an hour and a half ahead of it. The fleet was sailing north at about three miles an hour.

Wind Rises, Subsides.

At the start Dr. Hollis Potter's Hornet took the lead in the universal fleet, finally sailing under Carl A. Schmidlapp Jr.'s Windigo's lee at 4:30 p. m. A small squall then passed over the course of the leading boats, the wind rising from five to thirty-five miles an hour in a few minutes, but soon dropped and returned almost to a calm.

The fleet of forty-six started to move from Belmont harbor at 1 p. m. yesterday.

Revenge, largest entry in the racing division, is out to repeat its 1937 victory and to be first of the entire fleet to cross the finish line. As scratch boat in the racing division Revenge, a ten meter class cutter, has to give its competitors from three to nearly seven hours time allowance.

Largest Sail on Lake.

If Revenge finishes as much as 6 hours 48 minutes and 6 seconds ahead of the smallest rated boat in its division, it would win. Revenge's parachute spinnaker contains 5,000 square feet of cloth, and is said to be the largest sail of any Lake Michigan craft.

After the last class had been started by Byron Willis, race committee chairman, the coast guard convoy, the cutter Escanaba, flagship, and the patrol boats Nansemond and Colfax, began spreading out to keep as many of the yachts in sight as possible.

O'BRIEN MAKES A HIT WITH BOYS IN SUMMER CAMP

They'd Like Him Even if He Were Not a Football Hero.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Delafield, Wis., July 22.—Davey O'Brien and the youngsters were playing touch football on the sun bleached gridiron at St. John's summer camp. Davey's team had the ball. He received it from his ninety pound center, backed up and arched a pass to a 10 year old end who dodged down the side of the field for a touchdown.

Davey O'Brien threw twenty touchdown passes for Texas Christian last fall. He has already received more than a half million votes in the national poll to select the College All-Americans. It is probable he will be the starting quarter back for the All-Stars against the New York Giants in Soldier's field, Aug. 30.

The Kids Like Davey.

But Davey O'Brien, regarded as the greatest forward passer since Sammy Baugh, is not a hero to these youngsters at St. John's solely because of his intercollegiate exploits. He's liked because, as Harry Gamble, a 12 year old from New Orleans, phrased it, "He's a swell fellow."

Harry will enter the 7 B grade in New Orleans' Wilson school this fall. Last year Harry played half back and quarter back on his school eleven. You can bet that this year Harry will call signals and throw the passes. What team would turn down a lad who has been taught forward passing by Davey O'Brien and who knows Texas Christian's plays?

"Gee, Davey takes it so easy," Harry said earnestly as he explained what he had learned about forward passing. All the boys copied O'Brien's smooth, short arm tosses, his nonchalance as he is rushed. The O'Brien style of passing, one may predict, will sweep Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Tennessee. The majority of the 170 boys of St. John's boys' camps come from southern states.

Misses Sugar Bowl Game.

This is Harry Gamble's sixth summer at Delafield. He has been brought up in the athletic tradition. His father was graduated from Tulane and coached boxing there for four years. Even now he takes time off from his legal work to get to camp.

One of the darkest moments in Harry's life was that day last January when his mother took him across Lake Pontchartrain to a house party and he didn't get to Tulane stadium to see Davey O'Brien and Texas Christian defeat Carnegie Tech in the Sugar Bowl game.

Harry's immediate regret is that Davey leaves camp tomorrow and cannot stay until closing date Aug. 20. O'Brien is driving to Philadelphia to report Wednesday to the Eagles' professional team. He'll return to Chicago Aug. 12 to report to the coaches of the All-Star squad.

In the five weeks Davey has served as football instructor and counselor, he has won the admiration and affection of the boys, the approval of his superiors. We question if Col. F. W. Mouso, head of St. John's camps, or Capt. Walter Hahn, in charge of the boys' camps, can quote that Davey O'Brien completed 110 forward passes last fall in 194 attempts or that these passes gained more than 1,700 yards. We do know, however, that these men agree with Harry Gamble that Davey is a swell fellow.

O'Brien Keeps Busy.

Davey's duties consist of three periods in the morning instructing the junior intermediate and senior boys. Ages include from 6 to 18, but the largest enrollment, of course, is in the intermediate class. Several of the older boys, however, are high school football players. There's David Wallace, for instance, of Oklahoma City, quarter back on his eleven, who will be a senior next fall.

Then, there's Frankie Swirles of the University of Southern California, who rooms with O'Brien in one of the cabins which dot the slopes above Lake Nagawicka. Bob Peoples of Oklahoma City, a student at U. S. C., and national collegiate javelin winner, is another St. John's counselor.

He's A Quiet Young Fellow.

This willingness to coöperate is appreciated by his superiors. It reflects, also, Davey's personality. O'Brien is quiet, reticent and polite in his conversation. His size belies his football ability, for few would suspect this 150 pound young man, despite his sturdily built, symmetrical body, is one of the greatest forward passers of all time. His record is superior to that Sammy Baugh established at T. C. U., and Baugh, you remember, threw the pass in the 1937 All-Star game which defeated Green Bay's Packers.

David Bailey, 12 years of age, from Knoxville, Tenn., is another of O'Brien's youthful admirers. He cast one of the 502 votes St. John's sent to THE TRIBUNE for Davey's selection as the All-American quarter back. David insists, moreover, that he also has the best candidate for end, Bowden Wyatt, of Tennessee.

A Youthful Prophet Speaks.

"Davey's passes to Wyatt will beat those New York Giants," Young Bailey announced seriously, "I saw all of Tennessee's home games last fall. And my father took me to Nashville to see the Tennessee-Vanderbilt game." Young Bailey will be in the eighth B grade at Tipton junior high school, Knoxville, next fall. He played full back and tackle in a midget football league. He's quite large for his age, but, according to his plans, full backs will throw forward passes this year in Knoxville.

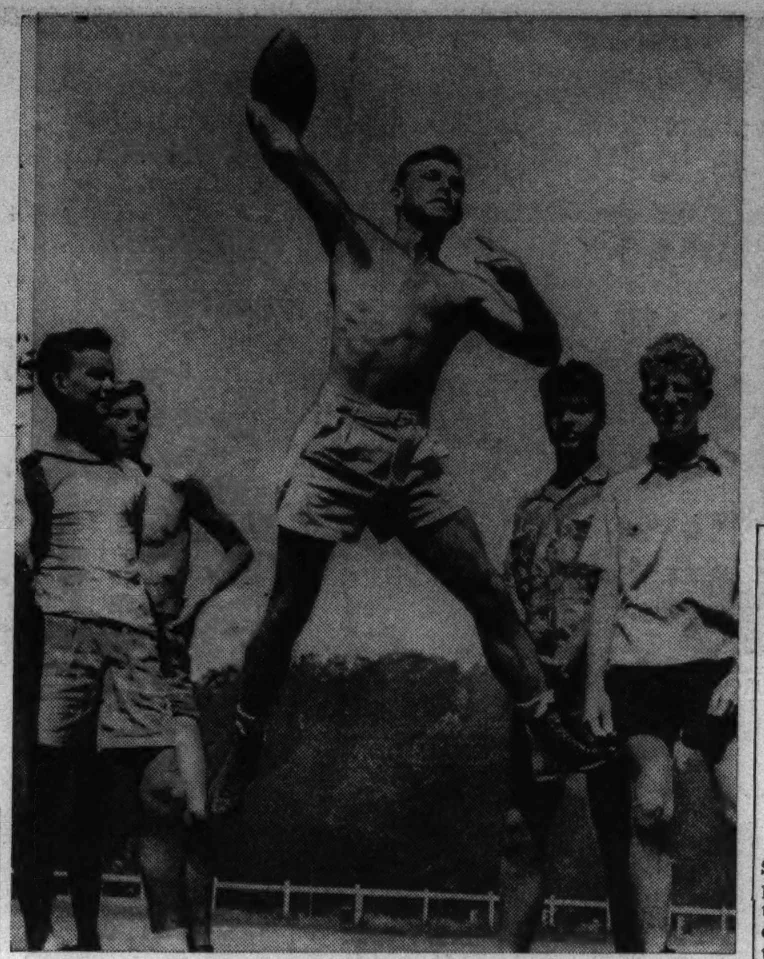
Buddy Wilson of Winnetka, Ill., who enters New Trier High school in September, is another who has football ambitions. His ninety-two pounds may handicap him for a season, and he's only 13 years of age, but wait a couple of years.

We know Davey O'Brien hates to leave his young friends at St. John's. No more, of course, than they dislike to see him go. Davey's first love is football and we suspect he is looking forward to meeting his new teammates in Philadelphia. We know he anticipates joining the All-Star squad in Evanston.

Davey, quite likely, will give the New York Giants a lesson in forward passing, as taught at Texas Christian, on the night of Aug. 30. The Giants, we recall, learned about passing from Sammy Baugh two years ago when they lost the championship game in the Polo Grounds to Washington, 49 to 14.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN'S DAVEY O'BRIEN STARTS HIS CHARGES YOUNG

Davey O'Brien, Texas Christian's great quarter back and forward pass exponent, who is leading the vote for that position on the starting All-Americans who meet the New York Giants on Soldiers' field Aug. 30 in the sixth annual game sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., wrestles playfully with his young charges at the St. John's Military academy summer camp at Delafield, Wis. O'Brien is camp athletic instructor and a hero to the youngsters under him. [TRIBUNE Photos.]



O'Brien's fame as one of the greatest passers in college football has followed him to summer camp. There's nothing his small admirers like better than to watch him toss the ball.

Just to make sure that he has lost none of his 1938 skill O'Brien keeps his timing and accuracy at peak by practicing tosses against a movable wire target.

Wyatt in Hospital, Has Water on Knee, Report

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—Whitlow Wyatt, Dodgers' star pitcher who won eight games before being defeated, may be out of action for some time. The tall right-hander, who suffered a left knee injury in Cincinnati on May 21, is in Johns Hopkins hospital at Baltimore and it is reported, although not confirmed, that he has water on the knee. According to Secretary John McDonald, Wyatt is expected to leave for Chicago with the club tomorrow night.

SID LUCKMAN TO TALK IT OVER WITH BEAR BOSS

Sid Luckman, who in Brooklyn is described as Columbia university's football team, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning for a tour of inspection and a conference with George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears.

Luckman, who stands seventh among the half backs in THE TRIBUNE's nation-wide All-Star poll because of his exceptional passing and all around ability, belongs to the Bears by right of the draft. He has declined to sign a contract to date, however.

He will be the guest of Ald. Jack Arvey while in Chicago and will be entertained at a luncheon in the Standard club tomorrow by J. J. Lipp, veteran Western conference head linesman. A meeting has been arranged with Halas in the evening, following Halas' return from the National league meeting in Pittsburgh.

MISS TAINTER WINS.

All-Star Vote Hits 5,895,407; Ballots Roll In

athletes who distinguished themselves in major competition—worked diligently to elect them to the squad where they could convince skeptics of their right to be called All-Americans. Organizations working for fellows from the smaller schools labored just as enthusiastically to prove that gridiron talent is not limited to the great universities. All recognize the indisputable fact that the Chicago All-Star camp is the nation's gridiron laboratory. It's there that you find out who deserved national rating and who didn't.

Fans' Job Only Half Completed.

Although the balloting for players has ended, the fans' job isn't finished. In fact, it's only half completed. Beginning today they will vote for a staff of coaches to lead the All-Americans. The coaching board will have five members. There will be two from the middle west—one from the Big Ten conference and one from outside—and one from the east, south and far west. The coach in these various groups who gets the greatest total will have charge of the staff.

You are entitled to vote for three coaches in the order of your preference. First place will count three points, second two and third one, the same as in other years. The coaches' poll will continue for two weeks.

With one exception the leaders in today's standings are players who earned national recognition in the 1938 intercollegiate season. Smilanich of Arizona is the only survivor of the so-called smaller college group. He is running with Marshall Goldberg of Pittsburgh as one of the starting half backs. The voting has been so widespread, with polling places in forty-seven states and the District of Columbia, that the more prominent candidates have been able to overcome the sectional support for rivals at their positions.

Reports 41,500 for Petrick.

Let's take a look at some of the returns. The Youngstown, O., Vindicator yesterday reported 41,500 for Frank Petrick, Indiana end whose home is in Youngstown. Radio Station WFIL at Philadelphia turned in nearly 15,000 for Roland Young of Oklahoma, Jim McGoldrick of Notre Dame, Joe Delaney of Holy Cross, Frank Twedell of Minnesota, Marshall Goldberg of Pittsburgh, Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian, and Howie Weiss of Wisconsin. John Wysocki, Villanova end, also was a Philadelphia favorite.

The Chisholm, Minn., Tribune forwarded 7,550 for Smilanich. Ed Gatto, Louisiana State tackle, picked up 6,044 from the New Orleans Item-Tribune, and Warren Brunner, Tulane half back, collected 5,708. O'Brien, Bob Haak of Indiana, Goldberg, Pingel of Michigan State, Wolff of Santa Clara, and Heikkinen of Michigan got more than 5,000 from the Crawfordsville, Ind., Journal-Review. The Chicago Defender turned in approximately 25,000 for three colored stars—Holland of Cornell, Jefferson of Northwestern, and Bell of Minnesota.

The Omaha World-Herald filed 10,457 for Charles Brock, Nebraska center, who is running strong throughout the middle west. Ed Bock of Iowa State, Pug Manders of Drake, Roy Engelbretson of Creighton, and Bill Callihan of Nebraska were other Omaha favorites. The Niles, Mich., Daily Star had 11,383 for Kell, Hofer, and Tonelli of Notre Dame and Spehn of Purdue and Janke of Michigan. The Purdue radio station, WBAA, swelled the totals of Mihal, Ippolito, Humphrey, and Spehn, all Boilermaker stars, and Haak of Indiana. Brock of Nebraska got 26,302 in the Green Bay Press-Gazette poll, where he ran neck and neck with Wisconsin, Lawrence, and Marquette candidates.

The Moline Dispatch scored heavily for Lenc of Augustana, Hodges of Illinois, Hofer of Notre Dame, and Holtzer of St. Ambrose. Lenc was the leader with 17,302. The Peoria Journal-Transcript reported 32,000 for Panish and Gross of Bradley. Votes in this poll came from points as distant as the New York and San Francisco World Fairs. The Warren, O., Tribune gave Petrick of Indiana 21,212. Fans in that area also gave a ringing salute to Goldberg and Daddio of Pittsburgh.

Fort Worth Votes Heavy.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram added 32,700 for O'Brien, Patterson, Dewell, Boyd, and others from the state of Texas. The Davenport Times gave Hofer of Notre Dame 19,467. The Knoxville, Tenn., News-Sentinel found most of the support in its area for Bowdin Wyatt, brilliant end of the Volunteers. Fans voting through the Fort Dodge, Ia., Messenger were giving a hand to Ed Bock and Charlie Heilman of Iowa State, home town products. The Phoenix, Ariz., Gazette rolled up 1,104 for Smilanich. The Arizona Daily Star at Tucson added 27,685 to Smilanich's total.

The Columbia University Club of Cleveland wired this department to be ready for a last day deluge for Luckman and Seidel. The Milwaukee Journal reported 18,007 for Weiss of Wisconsin. The second most popular player in that city was O'Brien of Texas Christian. The Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis Tribune, and St. Paul Dispatch piled up big totals for Minnesota athletes.

These reports could go on indefinitely, but if you don't mind we'll hurry back to the counting room and give a hand.

Bobby Riggs Is Seeded No. 1 for Seabright Meet

New York, July 22.—(AP)—Bobby Riggs of Chicago, recent winner of the All-England tennis title at Wimbledon, today was seeded No. 1 in the Seabright, N. J., tournament opening Monday. Seeded in order below him were Gene Mako of Los Angeles, Cal., runner up for the national title last year; Bryant Grant of Atlanta, Ga.; Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., beaten by Riggs in the Wimbledon final; Frank Parker of Beverly Hills, Cal.; Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla., and Wayne Sabin of Los Angeles, Cal.

Name Storck President of Pro League

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 22.—Carl L. Storck of Dayton, O., was named president and secretary of the National Football league with an increase in salary today in an executive session of owners held in conjunction with the annual professional rules interpretations meeting.

Storck, vice president and treasurer of the league for the last 19 years, presided at the meeting as acting president, an office conferred upon him following the death last May of Joseph F. Carr, founder of the league. The executive action today gives Storck full powers to administer the affairs of the league as its president, secretary and treasurer until the annual spring meeting next April.

Boost Official's Fees.

Other developments at the meeting, attended by coaching and executive representatives of the ten league teams, were:

1. Increasing the officiating fee for league games and establishing the salary of umpires, head linesmen and field judges on a par with that of referees. The amount was not disclosed.

2. The purchase by the Chicago Cardinals of Nick Michelosen, former University of Pittsburgh quarter back, from the Philadelphia Eagles.

3. A sale of Bernie Sherer, veteran Green Bay end, to the Pittsburgh Pirates and a trade between the teams in which the Pirates took Frank Butler, veteran tackle of Chicago, for Tuffy Thompson, former University of Minnesota full back.

Bears Release Ippolito.

4. The Chicago Bears' release of Tony Ippolito, Purdue full back, to the Philadelphia Eagles.

5. The naming of Charles Bidwill, owner of the Cardinals, to the league's executive committee to succeed Homer Marshman, of Cleveland, who resigned.

6. A unanimous vote of the owners to continue paying the salary of President Joe Carr, deceased, to Mrs. Carr until April, the end of the league's fiscal year.

7. The scheduling of an exhibition double-header between the Packers and Pittsburgh Pirates at Green Bay on the night of Aug. 26.

Officials Take Rules Quiz.

The executive session preceded the rules in interpretations meeting, in which the league for the first time attempted to solve the officiating problem with a written quiz on rules and a physical examination. Thirty-one officials attended the interpretations session in which Hugh Ray discussed the new professional rule book, a clarified and completely rewritten version of the collegiate code.

Storck declined to announce the fee established for officials, but indicated it was equal to that paid by major colleges.

Only the executive meeting, in which the owners voted to perpetuate the memory of Carr by establishing the Joe E. Carr memorial award for the most valuable player each season, interrupted trade talk.

Cards, Bears Seek Boyd.

Coach Ernie Nevers was in the process of closing a deal in which Versil Deskin, an end, and Harry Fields, veteran tackle, were to go to Pittsburgh when Owner Bert Bell of Philadelphia offered Art Rooney, Pittsburgh owner, $1,000 cash for the draft rights for Sam Boyd, Baylor end.

Fields, a native of Hawaii, played with the Cardinals for three years before joining the Los Angeles Bulldogs last season. Detroit, represented by Hunk Anderson, has been trying to get him from the Cardinals, who still own National league right to Fields, but has found the Cardinals unreceptive to all of Head Coach Gus Henderson's offers. Henderson coached the Bulldog squad last year. The Bears also entered in the contest for Boyd.

Owner George Halas was more concerned, however, with an attempt to get Bob MacLeod, of Dartmouth, one of the leading half backs in THE TRIBUNE's nation-wide All-Star poll. Halas offered two players, reported to have been Guard Gus Zarnas and Half Back Ray Buivid, for MacLeod. Brooklyn has drafted MacLeod.

Three Coaches Seek Smith.

Dutch Clark, coach of the Cleveland Rams, and his assistant, Art Lewis, were cornered at the curb upon their arrival by three coaches who sought Gayland Smith, 210 pound half back from Southwestern university in Memphis. Philadelphia and Brooklyn refused to meet Clark's terms and Pittsburgh, the third team interested, had nothing to offer. Pittsburgh's only hope of getting the material it needs is a squad of fifty rookies Coach Johnny Blood plans on taking to Two Rivers, Wis.

The Cardinals' purchase of John Michelosen will enable Coach Nevers to assemble an All-Pitt back field provided Marshall Goldberg comes to terms. The Cards already have Frank Patrick, full back, and Bill Stebbins, half back.

BUFFALO CLUB, BURK AGAIN WIN ROWING TITLES

Detroit, Mich., July 22.—(AP)—The West Side Rowing club of Buffalo, N. Y., by winning the final race for senior eights, successfully defended its national championship in the competition which came to an end today on the Detroit river. West Side scored 75 points. The Detroit Boat club was second with 70½ points.

Joe Burk of the Penn A. C., Philadelphia, took the senior singles sculls title for the third successive year. He won by a length from Frank Silvio, New York A. C. entrant who earlier had captured the senior singles quarter mile championship. The 145 pound senior singles sculls quarter mile title was taken by Ken Thornburn of Toronto, Ont.

West Side of Buffalo won the senior four with coxswain for the fourth straight year, beating the Penn A. C. by four lengths. Lincoln Park of Chicago, a post entry, placed third.

Frick Protects Umpires with Five Day Ban Rule

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—Secretary John McDonald of the Dodgers revealed today that he had received a notice from Ford Frick, president of the National league, that an automatic suspension of five days, without appeal, would be meted out to any player who lays hands on an umpire.

MISS WILLIAMS WINS DISTRICT CROWN, 4 AND 2

Mrs. Zech Falters After Early Rally.

Ellamae Williams of Medinah, Illinois champion, defeated Mrs. Lillian Zech of Tam O'Shanter, 4 and 2, in the thirty-six hole final match of the eleventh annual Chicago Women's District Golf association tournament at the La Grange Country club yesterday.

Ellamae, whose best previous effort in the district event was to finish runnerup in 1935, held the upper hand throughout. Mrs. Zech, champion in 1937, rallied from a four hole deficit on the ninth to square the match at the seventeenth and then lose the eighteenth to be one down at the intermission.

Father Is Bryn Mawr Pro.

Miss Williams, daughter of Eddie Williams, the Bryn Mawr professional, decided to do a little rallying herself in the afternoon and was around the front nine in 40, one over par, for a three up advantage. Mrs. Zech, after winning the thirtieth and thirty-first, finally surrendered on the thirty-fourth green.

Miss Williams was around the morning eighteen in 42—42—84, while Mrs. Zech had a 47—38—85.

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—The largest squad in the fourteen years of its entry in the National Football league is expected to report to the training camp of the New York Giants. More than forty-five players will be on hand when the squad assembles for its first drill in Superior, Wis., on Thursday, Aug. 10 to start work for the Chicago All-Star game in Soldiers' field on Aug. 30.

John V. Mara, president of the league champions, announced today that three more veterans had sent in their contracts which gives the Giants twenty-three signed players.

Ward Cuff, leading scorer of the Giants for the last two seasons, is the outstanding addition to the list of those signed in the last few days. The former Marquette star, who has been working at the world's fair this summer, is in good shape and figures prominently in Coach Steve Owen's plans for the title defense. Cuff in addition to leading the Giants in scoring last year also was top field goal getter of the league.

Dale Burnett, veteran Emporia back, also sent in his contract and will start his tenth season with the Giants. Burnett is only a few points behind Ken Strong as the leading all-time point getter of the Giants and two catches of tuchdown passes this fall will put him on top.

missing short putts for pars at the second and third and then three putting the fifth. This left him with a 37, three over par, at the turn. He corrected this by reaching the long tenth in two for a birdie, and flipping his second to the thirteenth within four feet.

L. Mangrum failed to hit the second green with his approach, but whipped out eight straight pars before reaching the tenth in two for his first birdie. He three putted the next green, then drove the shrubbery at the fourteenth. A twelve footer dropped for his second birdie at the eighteenth.

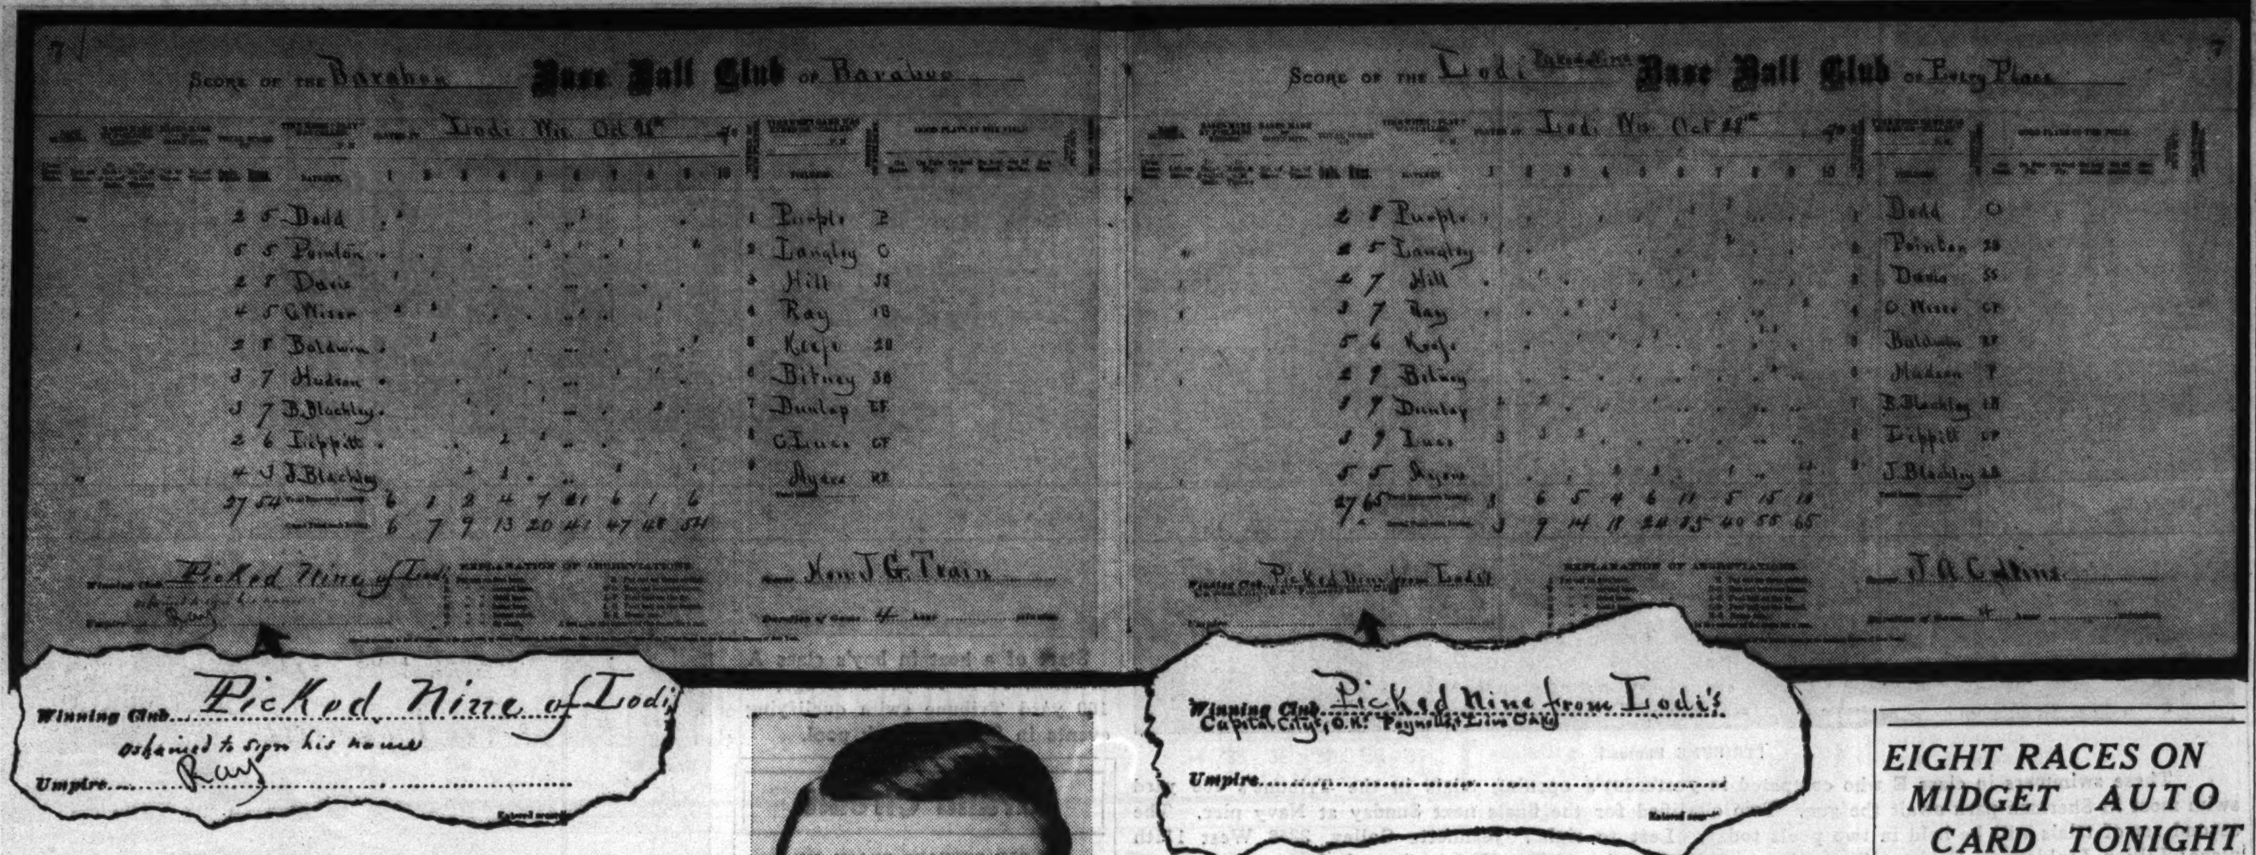
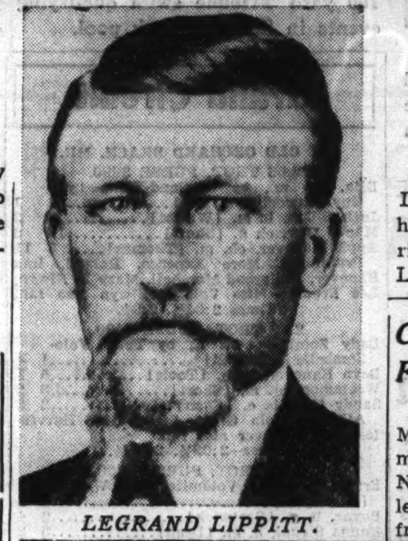
1870 SCOREBOOK TELLS STORY OF BASEBALL'S FIRST SCANDAL



Back on Oct. 28, 1870, a Lodi, Wis., baseball team which previously had been beaten by Baraboo challenged and won a return match, 65 to 54. Later it was discovered that Lodi had used ringers, and in the space reserved in scorebook for umpire's name the Hon. J. G. Train of Baraboo, the scorer, wrote "ashamed to sign his name."



LEGRAND LIPPITT.

The winning nine was listed as a picked nine from Lodi. Legrand Lippitt, Baraboo star, to make sure the facts were recorded in history, had Train print in the scorebook the names of teams from which Lodi's ringers were recruited. The scorebook and baseball regalia worn by Lippitt have been given to the baseball museum in Cooperstown, N. Y.

Baseball's Earliest Scandal

Cooperstown Hall of Fame Gets Relics of 1870 Lodi-Baraboo Ringer Contest

ONE of baseball's earliest scandals recently was brought to light, along with the most ancient score book and uniform yet to be placed in the National museum and Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N. Y.

An old trunk in the attic of the Lippitt homestead, 307 Moore street, Baraboo, Wis., was the King Tut's tomb of these relics, buried there years ago by the hands of one whose romance began at a baseball game.

Packed in leaf tobacco to thwart the ravages of moths, the woolen shirt and cap, two belts, two baseballs, a scorebook, and personal diary are in excellent condition and tell a vivid story of the game as played in the era immediately following the civil war.

A Gentleman's Game Is Rocked by Scandal.

Baseball in those days was almost entirely amateur and organized clubs were made up of gentlemen who were supposed to recognize the general code of sportsmanship. Thus when the scandal was exposed it rocked the countryside.

That the players took their baseball seriously is evidenced by the fact that to play a game away from home, perhaps a distance of twenty miles, necessitated taking a day off from work, arising before dawn the day of the game, and traveling for hours on horseback or by buggy over roads that would have broken the heart of the motorist of today.

Organized in 1866 by George Dodd, who was a player and captain, the Baraboo club, one of the few in this part of the country to boast of uniforms, set the baseball fashion for lower Wisconsin and led in the sport to the extent that it eventually won permanent possession of a silver pitcher and cup, offered for excellence of performance by the Wisconsin State Agricultural society.

It wasn't long, however, after Dodd brought the game from the east, that other towns in the vicinity organized teams and Oct. 22, 1870, Lodi, a town seventeen miles away, challenged Baraboo for the trophy and all that it implied.

Lodi Players' Lavender Uniforms Cause Stir.

Most games were more or less social events, the game proper being followed by a dance in the evening. For this exhibition both towns declared a holiday and the Lodi players caused excited comment when they appeared, resplendent in lavender uniforms to match the red, white, and blue of Baraboo.

None of the Lodi adherents ever had seen a curve ball thrown. Thus it can readily be imagined the amazement that followed when Moore Hudson, Baraboo pitcher, disdained the orthodox style, which was accomplished with a perpendicular motion, the swing stopping at the knee, and hurled a fast curve by employing a full, overhead swing.

The son of a clergyman, young Hudson was a recent arrival in Baraboo from Chicago, where he had seen a curve pitched. The new delivery stunned the Lodi batsmen and at the end of the second inning the score was Baraboo, 46; Lodi, 8.

Desperately the Lodi boys strained to solve Hudson's baffling offerings but failed, and, trailing, 64 to 10 at the end of the fifth inning, conceded defeat. Immediately Lodi went about obtaining revenge for the humiliation.

Return Game Played Six Days Later.

Shortly after the beating Lodi asked and was granted a return game and six days later Baraboo invaded Lodi. Although Hudson again pitched his curves, Lodi won, 65 to 54, in a contest that consumed four hours. Baraboo accepted defeat with good humor and all might have been well had not the Hon. J. G. Train, the scorekeeper, printed in the Henry Chadwick New Association Score Book, above the line reserved for the umpire's signature, "ashamed to sign his name."

Legrand Lippitt, who played left field and who was the particular star of that section of the country and the wearer of the relics found in the trunk, was as quick a thinker as he was fast on the bases and when he noted what the Hon. Train had done, other events happened.

The winning team was listed as a "picked nine from Lodi." When Lippitt's subsequent investigation exposed the fact that the Lodi team included five ringers from the Capital City, Live Oaks, Poynells, and O. K. teams, a near riot ensued.

Lodi refused to give up the trophy so Lippitt insisted that the Hon. Train print in the score book the names of the other teams represented in the Lodi lineup as lasting testimony that Baraboo on that day was defeated by fraud.

Lippitt a Master of Base Running.

That Lippitt was truly a star player is attested by the written and oral word of the few old timers still living who knew him. His speed was such that baseball fans traveled for miles to see him in action. One of his favorite tricks was deliberately to get caught off base. His agility usually enabled him to get back safely or advance.

Players wore spikes similar to those of today, but the infield wasn't trimmed to the turf. Lippitt, however, was claimed to have circled the bases in less than 15 seconds—a remarkable performance under the conditions.

Catching the ball on the fly instead of on the first bounce for an out had been in vogue for two years in the east, but it was something unheard of in Baraboo and therefore brought comment when Lippitt conceived the idea in 1866.

It was his dashing play that attracted more than the ordinary attention of Miss Sophie Hall. The attraction was mutual and eventually they married. There maintained throughout the years a lively interest in baseball.

Silver Pitcher, Goblet Used by Judges.

For several years the silver pitcher and goblet reposed on the bench in the Baraboo court and many a judge used it for refreshment during sessions. Worried that it might become lost or stolen, Mrs. Lippitt retrieved the goblet, the pitcher being claimed by another person, now unknown.

Thus through the thoughtfulness and care of one of baseball's feminine fans of long ago and through the generosity of her two surviving sons, Alburn and Oren, baseball's national shrine has received a gift on its 100th birthday anniversary—and evidence of one particular scandal is preserved for posterity.

WE WANTED TO MAKE SURE that this new cigar has a true Havana flavor . . . So we took it all the way to Havana for a test. Certainly, smokers in Havana would know if our new cigar actually had the taste of true Havana. We also asked prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs, such as Señor José García Montes, the Cuban Secretary of Agriculture, and Senador Enrique Recio, to try our new White Owl. Without exception they all praised the rich Havana flavor of our new cigar.

Why shouldn't we be proud of this cigar? We know the Havana tobacco that goes in it is a choice grade. Maybe that sounds unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? But, we're America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, this Havana is the same type tobacco used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this good Havana in each White Owl, too.

New INVINCIBLE

Your choice of 2 shapes

Another "10¢" feature—now yours for 5¢ . . . a choice of shapes to suit your smoking taste. A long, trim, new Invincible. And a rich, full-bodied, new Club House shape. You get the same amount of tobacco—the same mild blend in either size—only the shape varies.

The Sherman park preliminaries were the largest in the history of the events, annually sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. Nearly 800 boys and girls are eligible to race this afternoon.

Report at 1 o'Clock.

All must report to the clerks at these centers between 1 o'clock and 1:30. The first trial race, at each sectional, will be started at 2 o'clock. Any contestant who previously had signed to compete yesterday may enter either at Whealan or California park today. Your postcard is evidence that you sent in your entry before the deadline for accepting contestants. You will be assigned another racing number and may try for a place in the championships.

Four states—Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin—were represented in the list of sixty qualifiers yesterday. Lake Shore A. C., Medinah club, Jackson Natatorium, Princeton, Ill., South Side Boys' club, Wabash Y. M. C. A., Joliet, Bloomington, Peoria, Madison, Wis., Calumet City, Gary, Ind., Valparaiso, Ind., Naperville, Ill., and Hammond, Ind., were among the teams represented in the qualifying groups. It is impossible to estimate, since today's races must be completed, how these teams will finish in the fight for team championships next Sunday. Lake Shore and Medinah are the defending title holders. Cups are awarded the winning boys' team and girls' team.

Peoria Swimmer Fastest.

Fastest time for 100 yards in all age classes in Cermak pool yesterday was made by Joe Durkin of the Peoria, Ill., Country club. Joe finished second in the class A championship last year in Diversey beach lagoon. Quite likely he is the outstanding swimmer in the 11 and 12 year old class and his exceptionally splendid time for 100 yards, 59 9-10 seconds, is proof. No one in any age class at Cermak pool bettered that mark yesterday.

At Sherman park, Orval Roscoe of Madison, Wis., was the only swimmer to swim 100 yards in the finals faster than a minute. Roscoe is entered in class E for boys 19 years of age and over.

Ribbon Badges Awarded.

Bob Stevens of Elgin, Ill., had the best mark in Cermak pool in class C for boys 15 and 16 years of age. He swam 100 yards in 1:02.5. Bob Preble, from Klinger lake, Sturgis, Mich., winner of the first of five qualifying heats, was timed in 1:03.6. Many of the boys and girls, of course, were outdistanced in the races for the sixty qualifying medals, but all received souvenir buttons attesting their ability.

Ribbon badges also were awarded to all who won a preliminary race regardless of whether or not they qualified for the finals next Sunday.

The list of yesterday's qualifiers follows:

Winner trained by I. Parke. Went to post at 2:21. At post 2 minutes. Start good from permanent stalls. Won driving, place same.

PURPLE WRACK, away well and cleverly handled, was under steady restraint for a half mile, crossed to the inside after taking command on the stretch turn, withstood BOSTON SOUND'S challenge under light urging and weakened in the late stages, but stood off the bid of MIGAL FAY. MIGAL FAY, raced wide throughout, bettered her position gradually and, closing resolutely, was wearing down the winner. BOSTON SOUND had speed from the start, was in close quarters briefly as the winner crossed over on the stretch turn, came again when clear, but gave way sharply in the last seventy yards.

WATERCURE, on the inside throughout and steadied along to the stretch turn, was sent to the lead with a rush when straightened up for the last three-sixteenths and, holding on well, withstood the challenge of EBONY BOY. EBONY BOY, never far back, but forced to lose considerable ground, was nicely in hand for five-eighths, responded when called upon and slowly wore down the winner. COPPER LAD was badly outrun the first five-eighths, swung wide entering the stretch and closed well.

THIRD RACE—Mile. Hertz course. Out of chute. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Winner trained by J. W. Murphy. Went to post at 3:19. At post 1 minute. Start good from permanent stalls. Won handily, place driving.

TOTAL ECLIPSE, away fast and taken to the inside after drawing clear under strong urging in the first quarter, withstood repeated challenges from CHI and, sustaining fine speed, drew out steadily while under light hand riding the last three-sixteenths. CHI offered keen competition from start, made a determined bid when entering the stretch and hung on well to the last eighth, where he weakened. COOLING SPRING began fast, was steadied for a brief time when unable to outrun the leaders before reaching the final half mile, did not respond when called upon, and gave way suddenly after reaching the last five-sixteenths.

FOURTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Turf course. Purse, $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

WINDSHIELD, taken under restraint after being rushed into decisive command, remained under stout reserve to the final straightaway, where he continued strongly to the last eighth and, weakening thereafter, was vigorously ridden out. ROUGH DIAMOND, away fast, but allowed to drop out of it, was kept on the inside almost throughout, made up ground steadily after reaching the final half mile and outfinished TORCH STICK at the end. Latter, under energetic riding after a half mile, raced a trifle wide on the final turn, hung on stubbornly, but failed to hold ROUGH DIAMOND.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse $1,200. Net value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50.

QUENEMO, always clear as he raced wide throughout and, taken under stout reserve after an eighth, moved to CHARITABLE gradually while rounding the turn, disposed of CHARITABLE slowll when straightened out in the stretch and came away easily in the last eighth to win with something left. CHARITABLE displayed fine speed from the start, was on the inside after the first three-sixteenths and held on courageously but was no match for the winner. RAPID WAY was under strong urging from the start, swerved out slightly on the stretch turn and weakened in the stretch but outstayed WINTER SEA.

Winner trained by R. Waldron. Went to post at 5:27. At post ½ minute. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily, place same.

NO COMPETITION, away fast and having speed, was taken back under strong restraint before reaching the turn, responded with much energy when called upon after reaching the stretch where he secured room on the inside and, taking a good advantage in the last eighth, was steadied over the final seventy yards. MOUNTAIN RIDGE gave high speed from the start, swerved out slightly on the stretch turn and, shaking off TALKED ABOUT in the drive, was taken in hand the last sixteenth. TALKED ABOUT, on the outside from the start and never far back, moved up slightly on the turn, followed MOUNTAIN RIDGE out entering the stretch and weakened in the drive.

Winner trained by owner. Went to post at 5:58½. At post ½ minute. Start good from permanent stalls. Won easily, place driving.

JIM CORN, a prominent factor from the start and always clear, took command while still under a snug hold, drew away fast when approaching the last eighth and had something left. LEE TORCH improved his position fast after reaching the turn and held on with determination in the drive. INVINCIBLE was moving up when blocked on the stretch turn, came again when clear and again was in tight quarters near the finish.

Gay Throngs Add to Color at Arlington

BY BETTY BROWNING.

It was not the racing alone that made yesterday the red letter day of the Arlington Park season. In attendance, betting and consumption of hot dogs it easily outranked every other day to date. Exciting as the unexpected victory of Challedon in the Classic was, the crowd was scarcely less interesting, what with the well known personalities and the many strikingly costumed women among the spectators.

Uncertain weather added its bit of suspense, particularly for the hundreds who were lunching on the terrace or the roof of the gay Post and Paddock club. The one brief shower of the afternoon held off until well past the luncheon hour, however.

Service Leaders in Crowd.

Gen. George C. Marshall, youthful looking chief of staff of the United States army, was a guest of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Roy D. Keehn in one of the largest luncheon parties.

Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward of New York, owner of Johnstown, and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brann, of Maryland, owner of Challedon, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hertz at luncheon. Young William Woodward Jr. also was in the party.

One of the largest and gayest parties was that of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hughes. Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Adams, the John T. McCutcheons, the junior George Brewsters, Mrs. Howard Linn, the Louis F. Swifts, Mrs. De Forest Hulburd, the S. Prentice Porters, John C. Mechem, Vaughan C. Spalding, Scribner Fitzhugh, Francis P. Butler, Mrs. Leander McCormick, and the James Sheldons were in this party.

An Attractive Young Party.

Three other particularly attractive women were in a large party of young-marrieds. Mrs. Robert W. Wood II., who, with her husband, is visiting his parents, Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood, was charming in a white piqué Dutch hat trimmed in red and a white dress with a red and blue vest. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. James R. Addington, wore a sky blue print dress and matching jockey cap. Miss Adaline Heiskell of Memphis, Tenn., who is visiting Mrs. Joseph Rich, was charming in a small hat perched band major fashion above her brow.

Tall, blonde Mrs. Philip D. Armour Jr. wore a white cardigan sweater over a dark blue and white striped dress, with a white straw hat well back on her head. Mrs. Dexter Cummings wore her attractive natural straw hat in the same fashion, and so did Mrs. John T. Pirie Jr., whose brunette coloring was offset by her blue dress and green and red hat. Edith Mason, the opera singer, was stunning in a maroon and white polka dotted blouse with a matching band on her white panama hat.

Two Yankee Stars Attend.

Robert [Red] Rolfe and Thomas Henrich of the New York Yankees, who are spending this week-end with the Robert Biggerts in Winnetka, with their hosts, were in Mrs. Oliver S. Picher's party. At a nearby table Mr. and Mrs. William M. Collins Jr. were hosts to their sister and brother-in-law, the Solomon B. Smiths, Mrs. Vilas Norton and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Juergens. Edward F. Wilson had Miss Louise Blossom, Miss Helen Shoemaker, Miss Peggy Burrows, Earl Kribben, and Daniel McGuire as his guests.

In Mrs. Robert R. McCormick's party were the Walter Webb Crawfords, Miss Anne Jay Bryant, Brandford Ripley, and Chauncey McCormick. With the Robert J. Thornes were Mrs. James L. Houghteling, the Marvin B. Pools, the Thomas I. Underwoods, and Mrs. Frederick A. Preston.

HORNER SIGNS BILL TO BOOST TRACKS' TAKE

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., July 22.—The mutuel take from betting at Illinois horse tracks was increased from 6½ to 7½ per cent under senate bill 465, which became a law today when it was filed with the secretary of state by Gov. Horner.

Illinois tracks will profit by more than $300,000 through the new law. The average daily betting during the 138 days of the racing season is $240,000, of which $15,600 went to the track when the 6½ per cent take was in force. The 1 per cent increase will amount to $2,400 daily and $331,200 for the 138 days.

Horner Wants Better Racing.

The governor, in a message explaining his approval of the bill, said he will insist that the additional track revenue be spent in posting larger purses to attract better horses to Illinois tracks. He added that he will urge a future session of the assembly to cut the take to 6½ per cent if the tracks to fail to boost their purses.

"Due to the large increase in the number of race tracks in this country," the message read, "the competition among the tracks to secure the better grade of race horses has become increasingly keen, which makes it necessary to increase the size of the purses or prizes to attract the better grade of horses.

Insists on Good Faith.

"The bill states that the increase of 1 per cent in the take is made to permit the race tracks to offer suitable purses or prizes comparable with those offered at other tracks in the United States and induce the owners of the best horses in the country to race them on our tracks.

"If there should be a willful failure or refusal by the race tracks to abide by the implied contract they have written into senate bill No. 465, I shall recommend to, and urge, the legislature to restore the take to its original percentage."

Driven by Harry Whitney, the Cedarhurst, N. Y., trotter reeled off the first heat in 2:01¼ in front of Dunbar Bostwick's bay gelding, Boyne, which finished second in the summary.

Johnstown Runs Poor 3d to Challedon

amounted to $737,591, last year's handle having been $643,386. The wagering on the Classic itself was $100,049. Under the new law increasing the track's take 1 per cent to 7½ per cent, signed yesterday by Gov. Horner, Arlington profited to the extent of $6,433.

No Excuse for Johnstown.

Neither Trainer Jim Fitzsimmons nor Owner William Woodward had any excuses to offer for Johnstown. There had been a slight shower a little more than an hour before post time, but it merely served to settle the dust and pack the track a little harder.

"Challedon was at his absolute peak today," he said. "Just as he was in the Preakness. I hope this dispels for all time a belief that Challedon is strictly a mud runner."

Challedon's rider, Harry Richards, scampered off with the remark: "Lou Schaefer gave me a runnin' horse and I just let him run."

Challedon's previous victory over Johnstown had been scored in deep mud in the Preakness at Pimlico. That was the only race Johnstown had lost this year and he had been considered invincible on a fast track.

Challedon's victory yesterday increased his earnings by $35,600. L. M. Emerich of Chicago, owner of Sun Lover, received $6,000 as his share. Johnstown's third was worth $4,000 to Woodward and Heather Broom's fourth brought John Hay Whitney $2,000.

Double Pays $153.40.

A good thing turned up in the first race in the shape of Purple Wrack, which closed at 8 to 1 after being quoted at 20 to 1 in the morning line. The bettors began plunging on him shortly before post time and his odds fell steadily. Under Jockey Elam's good handling he took command on the stretch turn and withstood Migal Fay's rush to win by a head. The winner returned $18.80, $10, and $5.40.

After being scratched from the Classic Total Eclipse made a runaway of the Cavalcade purse, winning well in hand. Basil James rated him cleverly, holding him on the rail while Chi made repeated challenges. Total Eclipse came on in the stretch under easy hand riding to win by two lengths. Chi was five lengths ahead of Cooling Springs.

Lovely Knight Is Declared Victor After Dispute.

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—A neck and neck finish, with whips flying, marked the running of the $23,950 Butler Memorial today at Empire City where 15,000 saw Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Lovely Night confirmed as the winner after a delay caused by a claim of foul. A 3 to 2 favorite, Lovely Night set a new track record.

The foul arose from a stretch duel when Lovely Night, who was leading, bore out, carrying Isolator with him. The William Woodward color bearer broke stride, as if frightened. It also appeared as if there was a bump, with plenty of leather scraping.

At the time Isolator seemed to be about to go on past Lovely Night, but his chance went then and there. Lovely Night's time of 1:57 2-5 lowered Esposa's track mark by a fifth of a second for the mile and three-sixteenths.

Jockey Claims Foul.

"Jockey Tom Malley claimed that Jockey Nick Wall hit Isolator with his whip," said the stewards' report on the foul claim. "Had this occurred we believe that Isolator would have flinched, which flinch was not apparent to us in the stewards' stand."

Third money went to Sickle T.

Lovely Night's speed, and the action of the stewards, gave Mrs. Clark her second victory of the day, and also the $16,950 purse which was high watermark for her son of Pilate and Snooze. He carried only 104 pounds, but many now are saying that he is one of the most underrated 3 year olds of the season.

XAVIER WINS AT SUFFOLK

Boston, Mass., July 22.—(AP)—Wesley M. Sears' Xavier, a 25 to 1 shot, registered a victory by four lengths in the $10,000 added Puritan Handicap today at Suffolk Downs before a closing day throng of 35,000. Behind him at the wire was the entry of Mrs. Emil Denemark, Blind Eagle and War Minstrel, separated only by a neck. Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud, an almost even-money favorite, finished fifth.

The winner raced the mile and an eighth in 1:49 2-5, two fifths off Seabiscuit's track record, but the 4 year old son of Whichone-Xanthina was carrying only 100 pounds, the lightest weight in the field of eight.

Behind War Minstrel trailed R. A. Moore's Clodion, Honey Cloud, W. L. Brann's Aethelwold, Brookmeade's Handcuff, and Fairfields stable's Lucky Omen. The winner paid $52.50, $18.60, and $8.40. The entry paid $5.40 and $5.60. The stake carried a net value of $9,250.

Fishermen Find New Thrills in Trout Trolling

BY BOB BECKER.

The number of fishermen who are trolling big spoon lures for lake trout this summer tell the story of how this fresh water fish has become more popular in recent years. There are hundreds of fishermen taking good sized lakers from the waters around the Apostle Islands in Lake Superior and eastwark to the Soo. Anglers in the Superior National forest and the Quetico are trolling in deep lakes with lake trout outfits behind them that reach down into the dark cool depths, the summer haunt of big lakers.

Farther north and west in Canada you'll see more lake trout fishermen. Hundreds of other fishermen do their fishing for lake trout from Michigan cities. At Northport, Mich., quite a fleet of cruisers is required to take care of the boys who want to go out on Lake Michigan to hook a few fish. [We have trolled from Northport with success.]

When we stopped at Port Washington, Wis. [just above Milwaukee], several days ago and talked with Oliver Smith, a member of a family that has been in the commercial fishing business for nearly 100 years, we heard how the sport of trolling for lake trout slowly is taking hold within a short distance of Chicago's loop. Fishermen have been connecting with specimens of lake trout weighing up to 21 pounds by trolling about twelve miles out in the lake from Port Washington.

Chicago fishermen who own power cruisers and want to troll for lake trout northeast of the city might do well to equip their boats with outriggers to hold one trolling line on each side.

STOCKS ROUND OUT WEEK WITH UPWARD SURGE

Steel Group in Van of New Advance.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 22.—In the broadest and most active Saturday market since April 8, stock prices surged forward again today. Most gains were held to fractions, but a number of issues scored advances of one to slightly more than two points.

Trading volume totaled 806,110 shares, and 674 issues moved during the two hour session. Only 205,760 shares were traded last Saturday, with 433 issues appearing on the tape. Advances were made today by 432 issues, 152 closed unchanged, and only 90 declined. Prices were highest since the middle of March.

Market Averages Climb.

The Dow-Jones average of representative industrial stocks closed at 144.71 for a gain of 1.25 points today and a total of almost 7 points for the week. The railroad average closed up 0.34 at 30.20 for a gain of about 2¾ points during the week. Utilities pushed up a little more than a point during the week to 25.91, making a gain of 0.38 today.

The following table gives the closing prices and net gains for today and for the week in some of the active issues:

Anaconda	$27.62	$ .87	$2.25
Bethlehem	65.00	2.50	9.00
Chrysler	84.00	.87	8.50
General Motors	48.87	1.12	3.75
Montgomery Ward	55.37	.75	3.50
New York Central	16.12	.25	1.87
Republic Steel	18.75	1.12	3.00

Steel Shares Lead Rise.

Steel shares today led the advance on reports that the steel industry next week will be operating at its highest level this year. Bethlehem rose 2½. United States Steel advanced 2 points in active trading. Gains of 1 to 2 points each were made by Republic, Youngstown, National, Inland, Continental, and Wheeling.

Utilities were in active demand. A number of sizable blocks of stock were traded in this section of the market. Advances were held within a fractional range, however, for the most part. This group is within striking distance of its best price level this year. Engineers Public Service moved into new high ground in an active turnover.

Loft, Inc., whose ownership of Pepsi-Cola stock has brought it into striking prominence this year, again astonished traders. It marched up to a new high of 21¾ before meeting sales which sent it back to 20⅜. At this level it still was up 1 point for the day and 7⅛ for the week. Its low this year was 6.

Chemicals Show Weakness.

Chemicals showed some weakness, du Pont slipping back a point today after reaching a new 1939 high yesterday. Allied Chemical was up 1¾, however.

Aircraft stocks turned spotty after a fairly strong opening. Boeing did the best of the group with a ¾ point gain. Douglas and Curtiss-Wright closed unchanged. Minor losses were charged against Glenn Martin and United Aircraft. Railroad stocks showed fractional advances as a general rule. Exceptions were Union Pacific and Louisville and Nashville with markups of a point or more.

Among stocks forging ahead to new highs were Montgomery Ward and Sears-Roebuck. Both made fractional gains.

International Business Machines gained 2½ and Underwood was up 1¾. Eastman Kodak, another specialty, was unchanged.

Fourteen Chicago Stock Issues Reach New Peaks

Fourteen issues traded on the Chicago Stock exchange established new 1939 peaks yesterday in the liveliest Saturday session since April. The volume was 32,000 shares. Of ninety-eight issues traded, sixty-seven advanced, ten declined, and twenty-one closed unchanged. Volume leaders which reached new high levels for the year included Middle West, W. B. Jarvis, National Standard, and Commonwealth Edison.

Gains Ranging to 18 Pct. Shown by Power Systems

Electricity output of twenty-four major utility systems during the week ended July 15 showed increases of 1.6 to 18.7 per cent over the corresponding week of last year. This compared with a drop of 0.8 per cent to a rise of 16.1 per cent recorded over the 1938 figures during the week ended July 8, 1939.

Senate Fight Faces Federal Spending Bill

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—The senate banking and currency committee today reported the administration's spending and lending bill to the senate, paving the way for consideration of the measure Monday. The committee approved final cuts amounting to $310,000,000, making the total of the bill approximately two and one-half billion dollars. This is many millions under the original figure proposed by President Roosevelt in his message to congress.

Senator Byrd. Says he will fight measure.

Even with these large reductions, the bill faces a battle. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.] was reluctant to predict that it could be passed next week in time for adjournment July 29. The house banking and currency committee delayed action on the measure today until next week.

Byrd to Contest It.

Senator Harry F. Byrd [D., Va.] served notice that he would contest indorsement of the measure. He asserted that the Reconstruction Finance corporation now has full authority and funds to make all loans provided in the bill for nonfederal public works and self-liquidating toll roads.

"If authority already exists, why increase the present power to issue new obligations?" he asked. "If the proposals in the new legislation are wise, why has not the RFC made use of its authority that has existed for some time to do the very things the new legislation provides?"

Additional strength to the stand of the bill's opponents was found in the testimony of Jesse H. Jones, federal loan administrator, that the RFC would lose heavily on loans it already has made to business. The testimony was made public today. It revealed the former RFC chairman as indicating that the losses might run higher than 20 per cent.

Jones Admits Losses.

"We are not infallible," Jones told the banking and currency committee at an executive session. "We make plenty of mistakes and plenty of bad loans. We will have a very substantial percentage of losses on our business loans."

"The liberality of the policy is going to show up in the losses you take?" asked Senator Alva B. Adams [D., Colo.].

"Yes," Jones answered. "We are going to have plenty of losses."

"Will the losses run as high as 10 to 20 per cent?" Senator Adams inquired. Jones replied: 'I am ashamed to tell you what I think it will be. It will be plenty.

"We are currently foreclosing on $12,000,000 of industrial loans and will take a very heavy loss on the transaction. If anybody makes loans on a more liberal basis than we are making them now, they will be grants—not loans."

The latest financial statement of the RFC showed that it had made 5,508 business loans, totaling approximately $261,000,000 since February, 1938.

RFC Funds Available.

Senator Byrd said he had been informed by G. R. Cooksey, secretary of the RFC, that one billion 361 millions is available, if existing authority is used, to finance either nonfederal public works or self-liquidating toll roads and bridges.

"This is nearly five times the sum estimated to be expended for these purposes during 1940 under the proposed lending bill and is entirely exclusive of the authority of the RFC to issue obligations for the purpose of acquiring preferred stock of insurance companies, banks and mortgage loan corporations, securities from the WPA and other purposes," Senator Byrd remarked.

"These projects are proposed under the new spend-lend plan as self-liquidating possibilities; but the federal bureau of public roads has just reported to the President that a federal toll road system will not prove a self liquidating project.

Motorists Would Rebel.

"Furthermore, it cannot be reasonably expected that motorists, already heavily burdened with taxes, wil pay a mileage toll estimated by the bureau of public roads to be greater than the combined cost of the gasoline used and the federal and state taxes on the gasoline. Even if they should submit to such tolls, such a system, according to the public roads bureau, would be only 40 per cent self liquidating.

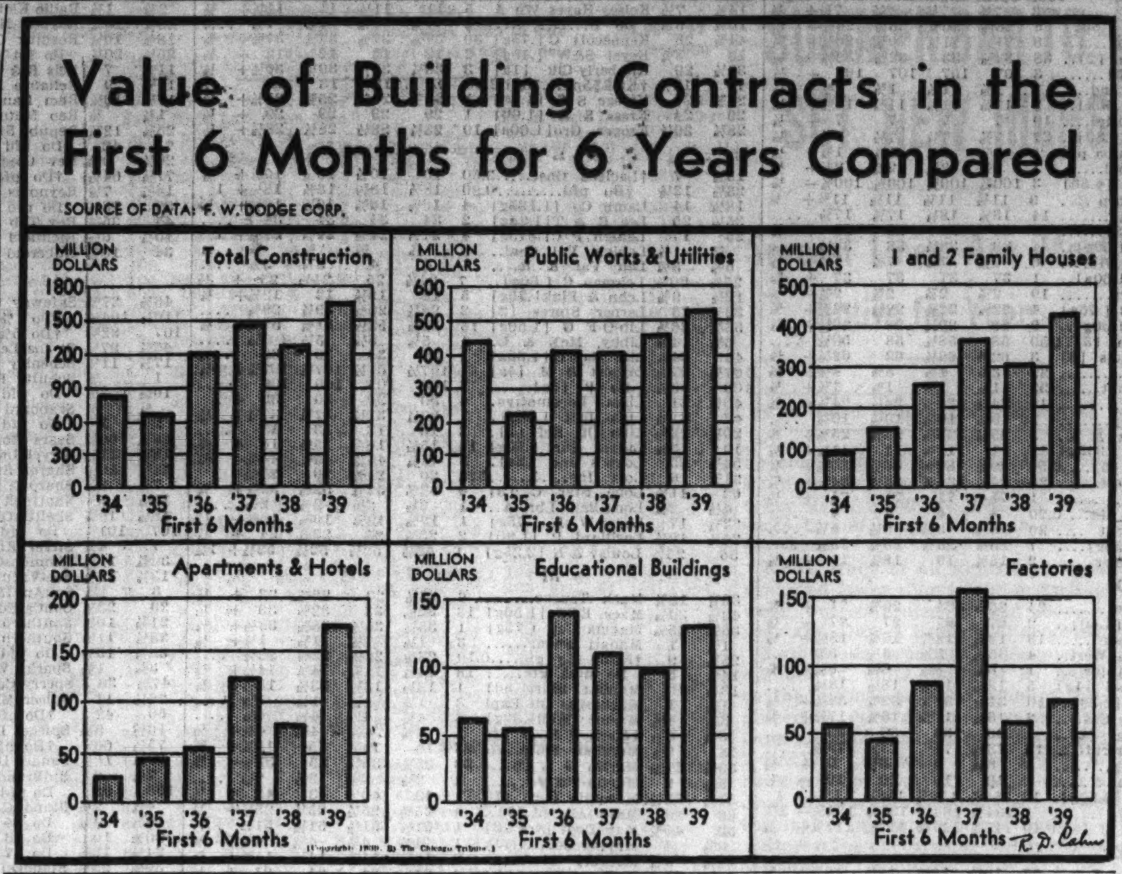
"The whole scheme is devised to evade the present statutory debt limit. It is a spending scheme masquerading as a lending scheme. If we must spend public money, we owe the simple justice to the taxpayers to be frank and not hide our debts by creating government corporations in the thought that this double system of bookkeeping evades the debt. It merely conceals it."

Nash Automobile Sales Far Above Level of 1938

Retail sales of Nash automobiles in the first ten days of July totaled 1,225, an increase of 63 per cent over the 753 sold in the corresponding 1938 period, the company reported yesterday. Sales from Jan. 1 to July 10 totaled 30,730, an increase of 72 per cent over the 17,901 total for the corresponding 1938 period.

United States Purchases from Argentina Up 54 Pct.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—An increase of 54 per cent in Argentina's trade with the United States during the first half of this year was reported today by the department of commerce.



Securities Act Strengthened, Bankers Hold

Amendments to the Illinois securities act, which became effective at midnight Thursday without the signature of Gov. Horner, should simplify administration and increase protection of investors, the Investment Bankers' Association of America said yesterday. The opinion was expressed in a statement issued by the legislative committee of the association's central states group.

The committee, which is headed by Mark L. Baxter, described the amendments as "intelligent law making which brings the statute into conformity with federal laws, and eliminate certain unworkable and confusing provisions."

The amendments were sponsored by Edward J. Hughes, secretary of state, and were drafted by the members of his staff. Representatives of the investment banking business were consulted.

Exemptions Authorized.

Exemptions in registration under the act were made to include a number of securities in class A, the highest rating. Among the exemptions were: Securities issued by state agencies, such as the Port of New York authority [federal government and municipal bonds were already exempt]; stocks of banks chartered by other states if located in cities of 500,000 or more population and having capital of $1,000,000 or more; shares of federal building and loan associations; shares of any insurance company organized under Illinois laws; certain securities senior to issues listed on the Chicago and New York Stock exchanges and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Exclude Realty Issues.

Exemptions previously in effect which were eliminated under the amendments include: Real estate bonds with aggregate face value of more than $25,000; commercial paper sold in connection with the promotion of an enterprise; liens on freight and passenger boats.

Another amendment authorizes the secretary of state to end the exemption of any issue, except those of the United States and its agencies and the state of Illinois, in instances of fraud.

Greater control is provided in sales of securities by promoters functioning as private individuals.

Standards of class C securities are raised. Among other things the issuer must have been in continuous operation for five years, instead of two years as under the former law, and the earnings record must have been better than formerly.

SEABOARD LINE ORDERS TWO NEW STREAMLINERS

The Seaboard Air Line railway announced yesterday that it has placed orders for two streamlined trains with the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing company, Philadelphia. Each train will consist of seven stainless steel cars. The trains will be used in the New York to Florida service. A Diesel-electric locomotive for each of the trains will be built by the Electro-Motive corporation, La Grange.

The Seaboard order follows an announcement last week that the Atlantic Coast Line and the Florida East Coast had ordered four new streamlined trains from the Budd company. Three of them will be used in high speed service between New York and Florida.

Seaboard started streamlined all-coach service last year and with its three new trains it will provide daily service. There is no streamlined service between Chicago and Florida.

Department Stores Show Better Collections Rate

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—An increase of 3.5 per cent between April and May in the rate of collections on department store open or charge accounts was reported today by the department of commerce. Last year the rate of collections increased less than 1 per cent during May.

Deny Breakdown in Oil Negotiations with Mexico

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—Dr. Luis Quintanilla, charge d'affaires of Mexico, issued a statement today denying rumors that negotiations between the Mexican government and American oil interests over the expropriation of American oil properties have been suspended.

DROP IN LIVING COSTS GIVES WAGE EARNER MORE BUYING POWER

New York, July 22.—(AP)—More than 2 cents have been added to the purchasing power of the wage earner's dollar in the last year through a decline in living costs, economists figured today.

The June living cost index compiled by the National Industrial Conference board, a private research organization supported chiefly by corporations, showed a further decline in food, housing, clothing, and other items in the family budget.

The index, the board said, was 2.3 per cent lower than in June, 1938, and 14.8 under the figure for June, 1929, but 18.1 per cent above the depression low point in 1933. Food costs were rated 26.4 per cent lower than in June, 1929, and 27.5 per cent higher than the 1933 low.

	May.	June.
Food	78.1	77.9
Housing	86.2	86
Clothing	72.1	72
Fuel and light	84	83.4
Sundries	96.6	96.6
Average for all	84.8	84.7

STAMP PLAN MAY BE EXTENDED TO OVER 100 CITIES

Washington, D. C., July 22.—(AP)—Administration farm officials, pleased with results of the new stamp method of distributing surplus food among needy families, disclosed today that they intend to extend it to upward of 100 cities within the current fiscal year. The plan has been tried experimentally in Rochester, N. Y.; Dayton, O., and Seattle, Wash.

The government redeems the stamps from the groceryman at face value. Sponsors have hopes that the plan will be extended eventually throughout the nation, and that it will become a permanent part of the economic system, to be used for distribution of farm surpluses among under-privileged families.

The plan has evoked special interest, officials said, among grocers and wholesalers of food. Because of the extra business being turned their way, distributors in the experimental cities have put on special campaigns to sell surplus products and have cut their profit margins.

PLAN FEDERAL BINS TO STORE SURPLUS CORN

Washington, D. C., July 22.—(AP)—The department of agriculture announced today it had asked for bids on steel bins for storage of 50 to 100 million bushels of surplus corn in the midwestern corn belt.

The bins will be of 1,000 and 2,000 bushel capacity and will be located in rural areas for storage of corn the government expects to take over from farmers as payment for loans made on the grain. Officials said they expected the bins to cost about 12 cents per bushel capacity.

This will alter the government's previous policy of storing commodities in private warehouses and elevators. Officials said they believe the new plan would be cheaper.

Farmers now have 257,000,000 bushels of corn stored under government loans. Officials expect between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 bushels to be surrendered to the government as payment.

The American Mutual Liability Insurance company yesterday declared a dividend of 20 per cent payable on all policies expiring between Sept. 1 and Sept. 30. It was announced this is the company's 611th consecutive dividend of 20 per cent or more.

Grains Slump Further; Set Season's Lows

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

Closing prices on the September delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Yr. ago.
Wheat	$ .63½	$ .64¾	$ .69⅜
Corn	.39⅝	.40¼	.58⅛
Oats	.25½	.26	.24⅞
Rye	.40⅞	.41⅛	.49¾
Soy beans	.68⅜	.68¾	.84⅛

Liquidation by holders of grain futures continued yesterday. Price changes were more erratic than earlier in the week and final trades were near the low levels of the day. All deliveries of corn and the deferred futures of wheat and oats fell to new low prices for the season. December soy beans also reached a new low.

Corn was strong at the opening on short covering, but declined more than 1 cent from the top and closed ¼ to ½ cent lower. The July delivery sold at 38¾ cents, a new low price since last October. It was the final day for trading in the July delivery of grains and evening up operations were partly responsible for the erratic price changes.

Wheat Futures Decline.

Wheat futures closed 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents lower. The July contract was traded at 62⅝ cents at the close, or within ⅛ cent of the low price for the season. Oats lost ½ to 1½ cents with the July delivery leading the decline. Rye was ¼ to 1½ cents lower. Soy beans closed 1¾ cents higher on the July contract, and ⅜ to ½ cent lower on the new crop months.

All deliveries of wheat in the Kansas City, Minneapolis, and Winnipeg markets went to new low prices for the season as the result of yesterday's break. Liverpool prices, however, were firmer on prospects of smaller world shipments and week-end short covering, and closed ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher.

Bearish sentiment was rampant when the grain markets closed. The belief that still lower prices might be witnessed was heightened by a Washington report to the effect that department of agriculture officials said they could see no relief for the current situation.

Export Sales Lagging.

Despite low prices quoted for American hard winter wheat at Gulf of Mexico points no export sales were reported yesterday. Small lots of American corn were sold for July 28 shipment from the Atlantic coast at a price equal to 56 cents a bushel delivered at Liverpool.

Current low prices for cash corn have checked selling by farmers. At the close yesterday farmers in central Illinois were being bid about 31 cents a bushel at country loading points for ten day shipment to Chicago.

BANK CLEARINGS DIP, BUT EXCEED TOTAL YEAR AGO

Bank clearings in Chicago declined last week. They totaled $296,000,000, compared with $306,800,000 in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1938 week the volume was $272,200,000.

The Chicago Clearing House association's report follows:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 44,200,000	$ 4,200,000
Tuesday	46,300,000	4,300,000

Total for week	$296,000,000	$31,100,000
Corres last year	$272,200,000	$27,600,000

HOME BUILDING DROPS DURING NEW DEAL ERA

Roosevelt Program Branded Failure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—The administration's housing program, at a cost of 5 billion dollars, has actually resulted in fewer houses for working people and a lower standard of living. This statement was made today by Representative Dudley A. White [R., O.], who supported it with housing figures compiled by the department of commerce.

Representative White.

"Every time a fellow turns around in the capitol," said White, "he bumps into a new blueprint of some Roosevelt housing program. During the last six years no subject has been discussed more eloquently, or in larger figures.

Program Costs 5 Billions.

"Since 1933 government loans and expenditures for public housing and subsidized home ownership have aggregated roundly 5 billion dollars, exclusive of private loans guaranteed by the government. Wisely and soundly spent, this would have provided a million new homes at $5,000 each. But what has been the net result of all these scattered programs? Are the working people as a group housed throughout the nation? That's the real test—and today the official figures are available."

White then cited a survey published by the department of commerce which shows that during six New Deal years, 1933-'38, new dwellings built in the United States averaged 204,000 a year. He said the survey showed in the corresponding years of the preceding decade, or for 1923-'28, the average number of new dwellings built every year was 807,000.

603,000 Fewer Each Year.

"Thus," White said, "the New Deal record is 603,000 fewer homes built every year—or 3,618,000 fewer homes for the six years compared. Here we have a fair picture of what all the Roosevelt demogoguery about housing really means to the people who need the homes."

This table, taken from the commerce department's official report, which converts all types of home construction, public and private, into one family units, shows home building under the present administration:

1934	59,000	1937	327,000
1935	138,000	1938	360,000
Total			1,223,000
Average per year			203,833

Higher Before New Deal.

"And now," said White, "let's see what happened before Roosevelt began to throw money to the four winds. Here's the home building record for the corresponding years of the previous decade:

1923	814,000	1926	841,000
1924	827,000	1927	757,000
1925	894,000	1928	713,000
Total			4,846,000
Average per year			807,666

Offer Cotton Export Bounty to Win Trade

Washington, D. C., July 22.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace announced today the government would pay exporters a bounty of 1½ cents a pound on cotton sold abroad under a subsidy program designed to regain for the United States its "fair share" of world markets. An equivalent payment will be made on exports of cotton goods processed in this country.

Wallace reserved the right to decrease or increase the rate if such a change is "regarded essential to the success of the program." The program will become effective next Thursday, and payments will be made on cotton sold for export on or before June 30, 1940.

Seeks "Fair Share" of Trade.

"The purpose of this export program," Wallace said, "is to assure the United States its fair share of the world trade in cotton and to do so by restoring the normal competitive position of American cotton in world markets."

Exports for the season closing July 31 are expected to total about 3,400,000 bales, the smallest in sixty years. Wallace did not state what he thought this country's "fair share" should be, but assistants said he hoped to sell between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 bales abroad during the next twelve months.

The rates of payment on cotton goods exported will range from 1 cent to 2.10 cents per pound. The program is the second of its kind inaugurated within the past twelve months by the department of agriculture to increase sales of surplus American farm products abroad. Last August, the government started payment of bounties on wheat exports.

Loan Stocks Increase.

Officials attribute the sharp drop in cotton exports in recent years in part to the governmental policy of making loans to growers at rates above world prices. As a result, American cotton has tended to flow into loan stocks, now totaling about 11,300,000 bales, instead of into export markets.

Wallace said the bounty payment should "offset existing price disparities" and maintain American cotton in a competitive position throughout the season. "Retention of the export market for cotton is necessary if we are to avoid painful and costly adjustments in the south and elsewhere," he said.

PREDICT STEEL OUTPUT AT NEW HIGH THIS WEEK

A marked pickup in steel ingot production throughout the country as the week drew to a close led observers to predict yesterday that the national operating schedule in the coming week will reach a new high for 1939. It is expected the rate of 56½ per cent of capacity established last week.

Chicago district steel production is scheduled to start tomorrow at 54.1 per cent of capacity, an increase of 2.5 points.

Pittsburgh steel operations are expected to rise 5.3 points to 50 per cent of capacity.

Output at Buffalo is due to start tomorrow at 51 per cent, a rise of 4.5 points over last week's schedule.

The summary for the latest weekly periods for which figures were made available includes these showings:

Steel production—New 1939 peak.

BIG COMPANIES SHOW EARNINGS ABOVE YEAR AGO

Others Reduce Losses or Substitute Profits.

Several large companies reported yesterday that they have increased their earnings in various periods this year, as compared with a year earlier, or have reduced their losses.

The Parmelee Transportation company announced it reduced its loss in the quarter ended June 30 to $28,809, from $38,720 in the corresponding 1938 period. Loss for the six months ended June 30 was $53,976, against a loss of $73,144 in the first half of last year. Parmelee, through subsidiaries and affiliates, is the largest operator of taxicabs in the nation. It holds a stock interest in the Chicago Yellow Cab company, Inc.

Belden on Profit Basis.

The Belden Manufacturing company, a Chicago manufacturer of insulated copper wire and related products, had net income of $166,640 in the first six months of this year. This compared with a net loss of $121,911 in the first half of 1938. Earnings in the 1939 half were equal to 70 cents a share on the common stock.

The Clark Equipment company, maker of truck and tractor axle housings and transmissions, wheels and tools, had $500,191 profit in the six months ended June 30. This was equal to $1.83 a common share. In the first half of 1938 the company earned $151,258, or 36 cents a share. A comparison of this report with the first quarter results indicated that the second quarter profit was $256,400, against $125,048 in the second 1938 quarter.

HOME BUILDING DECLINES DURING NEW DEAL ERA

business recovery to the average level of the Republican years, there would have been built since 1933 some 3,618,000 more new dwellings than actually have been built under all the screwball ventures of the brain trust.

Living Standards Suffer.

"It is obvious that this New Deal deficiency of 3,618,000 new homes over a period of six years means only one thing—a generally lowered standard of living for the nation. With our population increasing at the rate of approximately 1,500,000 each year, and with an accumulated Roosevelt shortage of more than 3,600,000 dwellings during the last six years, we begin to glimpse the crippling effects of all these official brain storms regarding housing."

There is now pending before the house an administration measure, part of the lending-spending program, to increase the borrowing and lending power of the United States Housing authority, which lends funds for slum clearance by municipal housing authorities, from 800 million to 1 billion, 600 million dollars. The senate has approved the measure.

Postpone Action on Bill.

However, the house rules committee yesterday postponed until Monday action on this bill and another to liberalize the federal home loan bank act. Committee members said the latter has little chance of passage at this session. Passage of the USHA amendment is also in doubt as a majority of the committee is believed to favor pigeon holing the bill which would kill it for this session. In addition to raising the lending authority the bill would raise the low rent subsidy to housing authorities from 28 to 73 million dollars a year.

COTTON

Price changes in American cotton markets yesterday were erratic. There was selling early attributed to foreign account and some hedging pressure. On the decline mills and spot interests bought, and with weekend short covering active futures rallied as much as .10 cent a pound. A reaction came later in the session with closing trades .0[illegible] cent higher to .01 cent a pound lower.

Sales of print cloths in New York the past week are estimated to have exceeded 65,000,000 yards, or about three times the average weekly production by mills. Prices averaged slightly higher.

Spot cotton closed unchanged with New York, 9.44 cents; New Orleans, 9.15 cents; Houston, 8.90 cents, and Galveston at 8.8[illegible] cents a pound. Prices follow:

LONDON WORRIES OVER CURRENCY BATTLE IN CHINA

Regarded More Eventful than Arms Clash.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 22.—The currency war in China now is proving more eventful than the clash of arms, in the opinion of British banking and commercial circles trading in the far east. With the Anglo-Chinese stabilization fund suddenly holding aloof from the market, the Shanghai dollar broke drastically from 13 to 9 cents this week—the fifth major devaluation of the currency within two years.

Hachiro Arita. Negotiates with British.

The fact that the Shanghai dollar has been allowed to slide precipitately from the June level of 16½ cents is accepted in market circles here as indicating that the resources of the fifty million dollar stabilization fund, half of which was contributed by British banks under a treasury guarantee, now are virtually exhausted.

Experts Urge Caution.

Although the stability of Chinese currency is important for British trade, many London financial experts are urging that the treasury move cautiously before lending further support in view of the speed with which the original fifty millions were used.

With the Japanese tightening their control of Chinese export trade the London authorities argue that the bulk of the resources so far supplied found their way into Japanese pockets. Business quarters on the other hand sound a warning against abandonment of the Chinese currency stabilization program while negotiations between Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie and Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita are going on in Tokio. Abandonment of the program might be interpreted as a further sign of British weakness, it is held.

That the go slow policy is carrying some weight with the treasury is indicated by the fact that withdrawal of the stabilization funds from the market followed significantly on the application of new exchange regulations in North China, whereby all foreign exchange proceeds from the export trade of this area flow into Japanese controled channels.

Show Surplus Balance.

Most imports from the region, however, pass through Shanghai, which remains the only free port of any importance. For the first five months of this year Shanghai trade returns show an import surplus of close to $55,000,000. This deficit has to be made good from the stabilization fund and from Chinese national resources.

The strain on exchange reserves has been further aggravated by speculation and flight of capital despite the introduction of new regulations seeking to block bank deposits.

Another threat to the stability of the Chinese dollar lies in the possibility of a big slice of the silver reserves with which it is backed falling into Japanese hands. Fifty million dollars worth of silver belonging to the Chinese government is reported deposited in banks and one of the objects of the Japanese blockade of concessions is believed to be seizure of the metal.

Paris Fears Big Deficit.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 22.—The cabinet of Premier Edouard Daladier now is concerned over the possibility that France's new found but precarious economic equilibrium may be destroyed by the enormous expenses piled on the treasury as a result of the new rearmament program.

This program has so far involved expenses of fifty-two billion francs [about $1,388,000,000] for military credits in 1939.

Letters

[Letters of 200 words or less addressed to the financial editor will be printed in this column from time to time.]

Frozen Food Industry.

Chicago, July 10.—We noticed your article in yesterday's TRIBUNE regarding the status of the frozen food industry. While, factually, the information you present is correct, the situation is not regarded by frozen food men generally in as serious a light as your article seems to interpret it.

Regarding fruits, while roughly 83 million pounds were in cold storage as of June 1, about 64 million pounds of this amount consists of what is known as "cold pack" fruits—bulk lots used industrially by preserve manufacturers, ice cream makers and bakeries. Strictly interpreted, this merchandise would not come under the classification of modern "quick frozen foods."

Thus the "overage" on carton packed consumer and hotel size quick frozen foods, or frosted foods, amounts to roughly 19 million pounds, which is but a slight "overage" over the preceding month and a decrease as compared with a year earlier.

Quality frosted foods are always at a premium. It may seem paradoxical, but the fact remains that if a distributor were to decide to put in a line of frozen foods tomorrow, it is highly doubtful whether he would be able to get a complete quality line promptly.

It is true that there has been inferior merchandise packed, which is not popular, and which helps to swell cold storage carryover figures, but the demand is growing daily for good quality frosted foods. The blight of inferior quality merchandise, while unfortunate, is nevertheless a growing pain of a young and vigorous industry.

FOREIGN COPPER SALES SPURT ON PRICE ADVANCE

Commodity Markets Uneven in Week.

Friday's boost of domestic copper prices to 10⅝ cents a pound was reflected in yesterday's copper markets by unusual activity for a Saturday. Anaconda Wire & Cable and Phelps Dodge companies increased quotations on finished copper products ⅛ cent a pound.

Sales of the foreign cartel totaled 1,910 tons at prices ranging from 10.31 to 10.35 cents a pound, compared with Friday's sales of only 773 tons at 10.26 cents.

Reports from France said a French banking group has granted substantial credit to leading consumers to cover their recent purchases of 29,000 tons of copper in the United States and 21,000 tons in other countries.

Signs Sugar Decree.

President Laredo Bru of Cuba has signed a decree approving the sugar institute agreement to free 62,937 tons of Cuban sugar for the world market. The agreement was reached due to short supplies under the quota regulations.

Most New York commodity markets were closed yesterday. A feature of the last week's trade was the decline in cottonseed oil futures to new five year lows. Selling was influenced by sharply lower prices in allied markets, including corn and lard. Values made some recovery as the week closed, however.

Cocoa, hides, rubber, silk, and domestic sugar were moving upward as Friday's sessions closed. Coffee and world sugar displayed weakness, while all non-ferrous metals held steady. Prices follow:

developments in the other direction. Prices of live stock, grain, and some other farm products fell, in some cases to the lowest levels in five or six years.

Retail trade of all kinds last week averaged lower than in the preceding week, but continued to hold above a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported.

Automobile production declined in number of units, but not as much as the normal seasonal amount. Engineering construction awards and bank loans to business in Chicago and New York declined. The trend in bank clearings was irregular, with a drop in New York more than offsetting gains in some other centers.

Steel mills operated at 56.4 per cent of capacity, compared with 49.7 per cent in the preceding week and 36.4 per cent in the corresponding 1938 week.

Power Output Expands.

The new 1939 peak in electricity production was 2,324,181,000 kilowatt hours, or 11.8 per cent more than in the preceding holiday week and 11.5 per cent more than in the 1938 week.

The freight loadings rose to 673,812, the largest volume since the week of Oct. 29, 1938. The gain was 20.5 per cent over the preceding week and 11.8 per cent over the corresponding 1938 week.

Dun and Bradstreet said retail trade remained 7 to 12 per cent above the level of a year ago, despite the decline from the preceding week. It said consumer demand continued brisk for light summer apparel, vacation necessities, and some lines of house furnishings.

New Financing Increases.

The total of new financing climbed to $191,900,000, compared with $44,585,000 in the preceding week and $12,805,000 in the 1938 week. Industrial issues totaled more than 107 millions, the largest since Oct. 16, 1936. Stocks offered amounted to $48,932,134, the most since July 16, 1937. In the week ended June 8 security offerings totaled $222,000,000, but this included the resale of a large municipal issue by the Reconstruction Finance corporation and did not represent new financing. Registrations with the Securities and Exchange commission were said to indicate sizable offerings in August.

Reports on various lines of activity up to June or later continued to show improvement as compared with a year earlier.

Second quarter profits of the first seventy large corporations which made reports exceeded 88 million dollars, 6.4 per cent more than in the first 1939 quarter and 34 per cent more than in the second 1938 quarter.

Sears Sales Set Record.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced that its sales in the four weeks ended July 16 were the largest in the company's history for that period, and were 24.2 per cent larger than in the corresponding 1938 weeks.

The department of commerce said the daily average of sales of general merchandise in small towns and rural areas in June was the highest for any June since 1929 and 13 per cent ahead of a year ago.

The operating revenues of ninety-one class 1 railroads last month exceeded the June, 1938, level by 12 per cent. The Lake Superior Iron Ore association said consumption of Lake Superior ore in June was nearly double the amount used in the 1938 month.

Airplane passenger travel last month was the heaviest on record and showed an increase of 57.8 per cent as compared with a year earlier, the Air Transport Association of America reported.

Industry Index Higher.

The Associated Press composite index of industrial activity advanced to 90.4 per cent of the 1929-'30 average. It stood at 88.0 per cent a week earlier and at 69.2 per cent in the corresponding 1938 week. The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.

CATTLE FEEDERS IN DILEMMA AS PRICES DIVERGE

Replacement Stock Up; Beef Animals Lower.

The cattle feeding business, which has been profitable in the corn belt states during the last few years, has reached a precarious position as a result of the abnormally high cost of replacement stock filling the feedlots this summer.

This is the opinion of live stock men at the Chicago stockyards. They said yesterday there has never been a time when stockers and feeders sold so close to fat beef cattle at this season of the year as they did last week.

Farmers paid an average price of $8.85 per hundred pounds for replacement stock on the Chicago market during the week, which was 60 cents more than their price during the corresponding week last year and 70 cents higher than two years ago.

Beef Steers Sell Lower.

Returns from beef steers during last week averaged $9.20 a hundred pounds, off $1.35 from 1938, and $4.50 less than the price paid for slaughter stock two years ago.

Live stock men estimate that cattle feeders cannot equal the profits they made last year unless prices rise 25 per cent above present levels. They base their calculation of the margins which cattle feeders obtained for slaughter cattle in the last half of 1938 and 1937 over the cost of feeders in the first half of each of these years.

According to these estimates also, it would require an increase of 45 per cent in beef cattle prices to duplicate the profits of two years ago.

Must Compete With Pork.

Farmers have more cattle on feed this year than last year and they must compete for meat trade against the largest production of pork in six years. In view of this, experts in the trade profess little hope that they will do much better than hold together the money they have invested in stockers and feeders. They say an abundance of grain and prospects of continued low feed costs may help to offset the high initial cost, however.

Many farmers place the blame for the high cost of stockers and feeders on the vast accumulation of corn held under seal for loans by the government. They contend this has given a false aspect of the real amount of feed available to cattle feeders and has therefore encouraged cattle men on the range to demand abnormally high prices for thin stock.

Purchases of stocker and feeder cattle at the sixty-seven public stock yards during the first half of 1939 aggregated 1,066,113 head, an increase of 78,627 head, or 8.0 per cent, over a year ago. The number of calves purchased totaled 319,630 in the first six months of 1939, a gain of 114,717 head, or 56.0 per cent, over last year.

TICKER TAPE.

The ticker tape which records transactions on the New York Stock exchange is a continuous record of the hopes and fears of investors. Regardless of what economists may write and politicians may say, the "bloodless verdict" of the market place records the value of American industry.

A great many people have seen the ticker tape, but not many know the mechanics of producing it. This is how it is done:

On the floor of the stock exchange there are more than 100 exchange employés called reporters. When a sale is made, memos of the transaction are recorded by the reporters. These memos are given to assistants, who put them in pneumatic tubes which carry them to the fifth floor of the exchange building.

When several trades in an individual stock occur within a short interval of time, the reporter records them all on the same memo. These often appear on the tape as a string of transactions in the same stock. Such strings do not mean that these transactions have all been made in the same stock simultaneously, or that transactions have not occurred in other stocks while these sales were being recorded.

For the purpose of recording transactions, the trading posts on the floor are formed into three groups. Each group is composed of six posts. Memos sent by tubes lead to one of three stations in the tape making room, one station for each of the three groups of posts.

When a memo reaches one of the three stations, a tube girl places it on a moving belt which carries it before a type operator. She types the transaction as it passes her on the belt.

When active trading demands space saving, the tube girl may arrange on the belt two or more memos in the same stock in succession, instead of having them separated by memos on other stocks. Thus, again, separate sales on the floor will appear on the tape as a continuous string.

Each of the three stations is controled by a master unit. Ordinarily, the master unit will take one sale from each of the three stations in rotation, and transactions will appear on the tape in that order. When one station is extremely busy, however, more than one single sale may be transmitted. Printing of sales from the quiet stations is delayed.

While this system operates with speed and accuracy, sales in all stocks have not been made on the floor in the sequence they appear on the tape. Nor is the person who has put in an order "at the market" able to distinguish with certainty which of the transactions recorded on the tape is his.

SPEND AND LEND OVER 15 BILLION TO AID FARMERS

New Deal in 7th Year of Pouring Out Money.

invalidated by the Supreme court in January, 1936, the subsidies to agriculture consisted chiefly of benefits paid farmers for curtailing and destroying farm products. Thereafter the subsidies were paid under the guise of soil conservation. The subsidies reached their peak in a total of 713 million in 1935, then declined to half that amount in 1938. Now they are on their way up again to reach an all time high so far in the appropriations for this item alone, aggregating $975,975,000 for the 1940 fiscal year.

For soil conservation and use of agricultural land the allotment this fiscal year is 500 million, for parity payments to restore the farmers' prewar purchasing power the outlay is 225 million, for surplus disposal, including export subsidies, 203 million; and for payments under the sugar act of 1937, $47,975,000.

Many Million More Needed.

If the farmer is to regain his prewar purchasing power it will be necessary to multiply many times the 225 million appropriated this year for parity payments. Said Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace to a house committee recently:

"Of course you are aware of the fact that if you are to appropriate enough so that the payments, added to the market prices of these five crops [wheat, cotton, corn, rice, and tobacco], affected by the parity payments, were brought up to parity, the sum would be a very, very large sum. The 212 million dollars [appropriated a year ago], you are aware, was only a fraction of the sum necessary to attain that objective."

During the current fiscal year there will be 40 million to aid tenants to buy farms and 143 million for the Farm Security administration. If the President's huge spending-lending bill goes through there may be as much as 250 million to aid farm tenants.

Many Loans Outstanding.

Of the $5,502,240,198 loaned to farmers by the Farm Credit administration up to March 31 last, $3,173,713,995 was outstanding. Farm mortgage loans outstanding were 1,070,318, aggregating $2,694,003,947. Short term credit amounting to $2,541,068,973 was extended, of which $389,093,823 was outstanding. Coöperatives borrowed $627,848,586 and had liquidated all but $90,616,225.

The mortgage loans of the federal land banks are backed by their own securities, which are not guaranteed by the government. Land bank commissioner loans, on the other hand, cover chiefly second mortgages and are made on behalf of the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation, wholly government owned and controled. Of the 7 billion dollars of farm mortgage indebtedness on Jan. 1, 1938, the FCA, through these lending agencies, held approximately 40 per cent.

Subsidy for Interest.

The interest rate on mortgages held by these institutions now is fixed at 3½ per cent per annum by legislative fiat. The difference between this arbitrary rate and the contract rate now amounts to about 40 million dollars which congress must appropriate and charge to the general taxpayers. The reduced interest rate will expire July 1, 1940, unless congress again extends it. The total interest subsidy through December, 1938, aggregated about 148 millions and by July 1 of next year is expected to reach 240 millions.

Lower interest through these government institutions has been reflected in rates charged by private lenders on farm mortgages, a further gain of some 28 million a year to farmer borrowers.

In about 75 per cent of all cases loans were made in amounts sufficient to refinance the farmers' total indebtedness. In 25 per cent of the cases scaledowns were involved, the average scaledown amounting to about one-third of the farmers' debts prior to refinancing through FCA. Total scaledowns since May, 1933, are estimated at approximately 211 million, another saving to debt ridden farmers.

Interest Is Reduced.

The average interest rate charged by former lenders on debts refinanced through FCA was 6.2 per cent, while the average contract rate on land bank and commissioner loans is 4.9 per cent, representing a further interest saving of approximately 43 million, annually, which will continue through life of the loans.

As a result of the foreclosure of mortgage loans to farmers Uncle Sam has become the greatest agricultural landlord outside of soviet Russia. On May 1, 1933, the federal land banks held 20,545 foreclosed farms valued at $91,470,550. By March 31, 1939, the number of farms acquired under foreclosure proceedings was 79,451, valued at $314,492,213, for the land banks, and 16,195, valued at $40,484,399, for the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation.

Of this number the land banks had sold 54,942 farms, representing an investment of $208,606,365, and the mortgage corporation had sold 7,085, valued at $11,853,074. The land banks had on hand 24,509 farms, valued at $118,168,526, and the mortgage corporation 9,137, valued at $26,614,652. The losses on sales were $47,876,744 by the land banks and $2,491,221 by the mortgage corporation.

For many years emergency crop and feed loans have been made to farmers, averaging 25 million a year. Up to Dec. 31, 1938, the government had made 3,188,388 such loans aggregating $357,955,588, of which $241,828,221 had been repaid, leaving $116,126,767 in arrears.

In 1934 and 1935 the government made 300,614 drouth relief loans to farmers totaling $72,008,540, of which $17,244,783 had been repaid at the end of last year, leaving 225,729 loans, aggregating $54,763,757, outstanding.

Officials of the Commodity Credit corporation are none too happy over being required by legislative mandate

For Farm Aid

The money poured out to aid farmers in the form of loans, grants, and agricultural services since 1933, if converted to the more than 15 billion dollars' worth of gold it represents, would fill a huge silo of these proportions.

to make loans on cotton, corn, and wheat at prices higher than the current market. Because of this requirement the corporation's books on March 31, 1939, showed potential losses aggregating $194,419,878. This does not, of course, represent actual losses, since the corporation has the stored collateral and prices may take a jump on the market and reduce or wipe out the estimated potential losses.

Actual losses are somewhat more than 17 million. The Commodity Credit corporation has a request pending for an appropriation of $119,599,918 in order to maintain its capital unimpaired at the 100 million required by statute.

Loans Made on Crops.

Last year it was necessary to provide $94,285,404 for the same purpose. The corporation has authority under the law to issue debentures up to 900 million and have that volume outstanding at any one time. This, with its capital of 100 million, gives it 1 billion dollars. On March 31, 1939, the corporation had outstanding on its own account loans aggregating 391 million, while local banks throughout the country held loans aggregating 450 million, which the corporation had agreed to purchase, making a total of loans outstanding of 825 million. Recently the corporation authorized loans aggregating 50 million on wheat, which, with the 825 million outstanding, does not leave it much margin to play with. Hence the request for the $119,599,918.

The Commodity Credit corporation also makes loans on tobacco, hops, turpentine and rosin, peanuts, figs, prunes, raisins, wool and mohair, pecans and butter. No losses are estimated on peanuts, figs, prunes, raisins, hops, pecans, wool and mohair. A loss of $2,748,506, is estimated, based on market prices as of March 31, 1939, on the one butter loan of $14,847,431.

The average loan is less than $500. Some 3½ million loans have been made since the corporation was organized under the laws of Delaware on Oct. 17, 1933.

Among other things, the Commodity Credit corporation is now holding off the market under loans approximately 11½ million bales of cotton. Asked why the corporation did not sell some of this collateral to maintain its capital structure rather than come to congress, Vice President J. W. Goodloe said that it cannot dispose of cotton because of legislative restrictions.

More for Reclamation Work.

In addition to the third of a billion dollars expended by the reclamation bureau in the last seven years on irrigation work for farms in arid sections of the country there will be 90 million to expend in this fiscal year. Because of the difficulty farmers have experienced, particularly during the depression, in meeting assessments for water provided by the irrigation works congress has written off $17,117,514 of the charge. In addition since 1932 congress has granted moratoria on payments aggregating $11,109,561 of which $1,472,375 was due and unpaid.

Of the 1,500 CCC camps now in operation 70 per cent are supervised by various branches of the department of agriculture and 30 per cent by the department of interior. About one-third of the working personnel of the CCC is engaged on work of direct benefit to farmers and stockmen. For example the soil conservation service of the department of agriculture at present supervises the activities of more than 350 camps with a personnel of more than 70,000.

Some thirty-eight camps with 7,600 enrollees are working on the rehabilitation of drainage projects; forty-four camps with 8,800 enrollees are at work on reclamation projects, and ninety camps with 18,000 enrollees on grazing land jobs.

Half from Rural Areas.

Further, it is estimated that approximately one-half of the total number of CCC enrolees come from rural areas, whether they work on projects directly beneficial to agriculture or elsewhere. This necessarily means that of the approximately 500 million sent back home by enrollees, one-half went to homes in rural areas.

Built 2,780 small reservoirs.

Helped terrace 13,000,000 acres of crop land.

Built 4,520,000 small check dams.

Planted 1,500,000,000 trees on waste lands and in national and state forests.

Did gully tree planting on areas aggregating 352,100,000 square yards.

The rural electrification administration has carried on with $229,698,330 in loans made to 600 borrowers, most of them coöperatives, and is spread over forty-four of the forty-eight states. Approximately 225,000 consumers are receiving service from REA financed lines, and 400,000 others will have service available when all the lines for which loans have been approved are fully developed.

In addition to financing power lines some of the REA funds are used to finance individual wiring and plumbing installations. In twenty-six instances REA has financed generating plants where no wholesale power is available or where it cannot be purchased on reasonable terms. Eighteen of these plants are in operation. In two instances REA has made loans to build coöperative refrigerating plants containing cold storage lockers in addition to equipment for processing farm products.

Most of the places served by REA are farms and rural homes. An important few are community centers and business places—stores, alfalfa mills, creameries, churches, CCC camps, grange halls, and schools.

Millions More Asked.

For the fiscal year just started the REA has 40 million to lend. The President has proposed an additional 20 million in his new 3 billion, 860 million dollar lending-spending program and a total of 460 million over the seven year period covered by that program.

REA collections are good. During the month of June they were 90 per cent and REA officials are confident they will reach 98 per cent. As to the remaining 2 per cent they express confidence this also will be recovered although the interest thereon may be lost. REA lends its funds at the same rate the government pays for the money, making borrowers a very modest interest charge.

The estimate of 2 billion dollars for rural roads, chiefly the farm-to-market variety, is based on a total outlay by WPA alone of approximately 2 billion 400 million for highways, roads and streets, and bridges, culverts and other appurtenances, and does not take into account expenditures for these purposes by CWA and FERA. These expenditures, according to Harry L. Hopkins, who headed all these agencies, were predominantly rural. Expenditures by the FERA and the CWA for these purposes were not available.

Large Sums for Roads.

However, since WPA itself built or improved some 250,000 miles of rural roads, and Mr. Hopkins said a year ago that if the expenditures of FERA and CWA on such projects were included the total would be some 855,000 miles at that time, there is no room for doubt that CWA and FERA poured out enormous sums to get the farmer "out of the mud." In the same statement a year ago Mr. Hopkins estimated that 2 million rural residents had been served by these rural road projects.

In connection with its road work the WPA alone has built or repaired all over the country 52,600 bridges and 366,000 culverts, and nine out of ten are in rural areas.

Flood Control Aids.

The flood control and conservation projects of WPA are said to be of direct benefit to rural populations. For example, nearly 170,000 acres of land have been irrigated by ditches dug by WPA workers, while repairs and improvements on existing irrigating facilities have benefited agriculture on more than 2½ million acres.

About 27,000 small dams have been built to check erosion and to conserve the water of streams and rivers, and more than 50,000 acres of land have been reforested by WPA workers. The shelter belt, extending from the Canadian border down into Texas, about which there was wide discussion and no little criticism a few years ago, is being planted by WPA workers under the supervision of forest service experts.

Another activity of benefit to agriculture is the eradication of noxious plants and WPA has done the job on areas aggregating more than six million acres. Further, nearly three and a half million acres have been sprayed or otherwise treated by WPA workers in the warfare from year to year against grasshoppers, mormon crickets, tent caterpillars, the corn borer, the boll weevil, blister rust, destructive moths and other pests.

Many Farmers Given Jobs.

In 1938 when the drouth in the west was at its height the WPA stepped in and gave employment to large numbers of workers from July through December. Altogether nearly one million individuals were given employment temporarily under this program, at an estimated cost of 100 million dollars. In addition an estimated 160,000 needy tenant farmers and farm laborers in the cotton producing areas of the south were given employment on WPA projects between July and December, 1938, as a result of low prices for cotton.

The farm security administration, together with the resettlement administration, has dispensed something more than 720 million dollars in rehabilitation loans, relief grants, development of resettlement projects, which number 167, and various other activities coming within its jurisdiction. Development on all resettlement projects is virtually ended and the bulk of the funds made available to FSA now are expended in small loans to needy farm families to enable them to make a new start on the land.

Loans to 750,00 Families.

Since this activity was first undertaken four years ago loans have been made to 750,000 farm families. By April 20, 1939, the aggregate of such loans was a little more than 320 million dollars. Loans are made for periods of 1 to 5 years. While much of the money already loaned will not be due for years some 83 million already has been repaid.

FSA likewise is struggling with the migrant farm family, estimated to number 350,000. Most of these families have drifted to the Pacific coast states, including Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, where it is estimated that at least four persons are competing for every job available in agriculture. Often the migrants have no homes except roadside and ditch-bank camps, without sanitary facilities or water supply.

FSA has built a number of camps and equipped them with sanitary facilities, shower baths and other absolute necessities. A camp manager is in charge. In most cases tent platforms are erected on which the campers can pitch their own tents. In a few instances medical clinics have been set up in coöperation with county health authorities. FSA has expended some 5 million dollars to provide such camps.

Direct relief expenditures accounted for by FSA up to April 30 of this year had aggregated $92,919,472, the bulk going to farm families in the great plains drouth areas. Payments average about $20 per month. In cold weather they are much higher than in the summer time on account of fuel costs. From July 1, 1935, through April 30, 1939, 734,909 families received relief grants.

TEST CEMENT AS STABILIZER FOR EARTH ROAD

Springfield, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—The Illinois highway department is building its first cement stabilized earth road, a 2.9 mile stretch on the Logan and Menard county line twenty-one miles north of here. The construction is part of an intensive search for a design and for materials that will produce a cheap, all-weather surface for local roads in the prairies of central Illinois with their gumbo soil rich for farm crops, but poor for road building.

Stabilization, as the engineers call the process, is founded upon an entirely different principle than is surfacing, whether with slab or asphalt or gravel. In surfacing, the construction is an attempt to bridge the earth that in this corn belt section of the state becomes a sticky and virtually bottomless mire after a rain. In stabilization, the engineers attempt to hold the water content of the soil at a point of its maximum density.

Explanation for Chicagoans.

This reference to water content and its relation to density might best be explained to Chicagoans by reminding them of their beaches on Lake Michigan. The part of the beach where the sand is wet, but is drained, is hard. It has the water content of maximum density for this material. Where this content is low, that is, where the beach is dry, the sand is soft, foot treads are deep. Where the water content is too high for maximum density the sand also is soft; it's slushy.

Other soils than sand have similar characteristics. Loam too dry for maximum density becomes dust, and too wet for maximum density becomes mud. The amount of moisture for a maximum density is called its optimum of water content. This varies with different types of earth.

Seek Optimum Water Content.

The stabilization of an earth roadbed is an effort to obtain an optimum of water content. This involves soil physics, mechanics, and chemistry. The highway engineers are going into these subjects like scientists, carefully recording processes and results, and like practical builders, keeping detailed records of labor and material costs.

On this experimental job north of Springfield, soils are tested chemically and physically in the state laboratory. The test tubes disclosed that there were three variations in the gumbo but that all three types, typical of this section of Illinois, would be suitable for the same stabilization prescription.

The preliminary studies for this location determined that a mixture of 14 per cent Portland cement with 86 per cent native soil and a definite amount of water would get what the engineers sought. So in the field, the engineers staked the location and the grade, a gang plow broke the earth, a scarifier stirred it, a specially designed tiller worked in the cement, a grader shaped powdered mixture six inches deep and it was sprinklered from tank trucks.

Tractor Rolls Wet Dough.

Then a six ton tractor with nine staggered wheels with balloon tires rolled the wet dough, kneading it. At the proper consistency, a ten ton steel wheeled roller completed the processing. The smoothed earth and cement mixture was covered with straw. The straw was sprinkled so that evaporation will not be too rapid for the chemical reaction within the mixture. Seven days later, the roadway is to be opened to trafic.

The road builders also are working with oil, tar and salt in stabilization experiments in various forms and in various proportions. Gravel in this section of Illinois is expensive in that it must be shipped and it has not proved satisfactory in that it sinks into the deep gumbo mud.

The simple earth and cement mixture is as mooth as a table top, but for resistance to abrasion under heavy trafic the engineers are studying stabilization methods for surfaced as well as for unsurfaced roads.

NEWS AND VIEWS

"Be helpful to those around you" is the advice that M. E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet division of the General Motors corporation, recently gave the thirty-two students of the Chevrolet postgraduate school of modern merchandising and management. "You will eventually become the heads of your places of business as dealers," Coyle said. "I do not like the word 'boss' for those who head any establishment or department. I have worked for many people, and many people have been under my jurisdiction, and the ones I remember best are those who were helpful to me. That is the best advice I can give you—try to be helpful to those around you. Do this unselfishly. Be sincere."

The 100 Chrysler salesmen selected for the Chrysler 100 club left Chicago yesterday on a special train bound for the Golden Gate exposition in San Francisco. They will stop off at the Grand Canyon tomorrow and will reach San Francisco on Thursday where they will stay two and a half days. After seeing the west they will start back across the country for a visit to the New York fair which they will reach July 31. The club consists of salesmen who sold the most Chryslers at retail in the year ended June 30. Winners in the Chicago area are Sam Abrahamson, Hammond; O. V. Bing, Oak Park; William Umlauf, Chicago; John Ciesar Jr., Whiting, and Al Blomberg, Evanston.

The sixth annual exposition of the Automobile Accessories association will be held on the Navy pier, Aug. 7 to 10. Manager R. Garland Ames expects 3,000 or more buyers from thirty-two states to attend. He estimates that orders for about $5,000,000 will be placed. The association serves buyers for chain stores, mail order houses, distributors, jobbers, and independent accessory stores.

A 42 year old car sold for $300 last week. Fred W. Patterson, president of the Ajax Auto company, Oldsmobile dealer at 7800 Stony Island avenue, sold the car, an 1897 Olds. It is a one cylinder roadster, minus a top and windshield, it still runs. It was bought by a Johannesburg, South Africa, company for exhibition purposes.

Did you ever have trouble in long drives across open plains where strong winds come up suddenly and blow in hard, jerky blasts? L. K. Marshall, general service manager for Pontiac, makes several suggestions for overcoming this difficulty. He advises the driver to see that all parts and assemblies affecting the steering of the car be placed in good working condition for the correction of factors which may cause wandering, darting or drifting across head winds.

TRIP BY LAND TO MICHIGAN ROUGH ON THE MOTORIST

BY HAL FOUST.

It's 5 o'clock on a Sunday afternoon on the United States highway 31 bridge between Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, Mich. That's the best time and place for contemplating THE TRIBUNE's editorial plank, "A Motor Ferry to Michigan."

South bound across the bridge is a bumper to bumper stream of passenger automobiles with an occasional truck. The bulk of this trafic is headed for Chicago via the 95 mile route, much of it in congestion, around the foot of Lake Michigan.

At the dock near the bridge is the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt about to sail for Navy pier. Approximately 1,000 men and women excursionists, a large portion of them youngsters, are filing up the gang planks. Eight or ten passenger automobiles are entering a forward port in the hull.

No Room for Cars.

Other motorists are on the dock with their cars, wanting to substitute a pleasant four hours on the water for the tiring drive around the foot of the lake. There is no room for their machines. The S. S. Roosevelt, built in 1906, is not designed for this ferry service. Its capacity is limited to a dozen cars.

The Tribune road car, in the last two weeks, has twice joined the throngs of Chicagoans who find recreation on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan. Once the trip was made by water and once by land. The contrast can be written free of press agentry because there is no ferry service of the kind that is needed.

Pavements Overcrowded.

Leaving the loop by land on a Saturday morning, the pavements became slow and overcrowded south of Jackson park. Through the industrial district of South Chicago and of northern Indiana, where the smell of oil refineries blends with the smoke of steel plants, it was stop-and-go driving with the man at the wheel kept constantly on the job.

After jogging through Gary, there was no relaxation for the man at the wheel even after reaching the forty foot Dunes relief highway. There was too much trafic moving fast, city workers hurrying to summer homes or resorts in Michigan, and too much slow trafic, lumbering freighters and tarrying local residents. By the time Michigan was reached, the driver, at least, was in no mood to enjoy to the utmost the sunshine warming the clean sand of the dunes and their broad beaches.

Same Trials on Trip Home.

The same nerve wearing trials were experienced on the home trip by land. After a week-end in Michigan, intended for rest, the motorist drives in Chicago tired from the drive around the foot of the lake.

It's a different story in making the excursion by ship. After the car is driven aboard at the foot of Navy pier, those parties fortunate enough to be included in the limited accommodations for automobiles are free to loll about the decks, dance in the ballroom, or sip beer in one of the bars. Most folks just relax, watch the skyscrapers and the smoke stacks farther south gradually sink below the horizon and later watch the green topped dunes emerge from the blue ahead.

Rested Physically and Mentally.

The ship passengers arrive in Michigan rested, physically and mentally fit to appreciate a tour through forested state parks to a beach on Lake Michigan, to a cottage in a cool woods, or to a fishing boat on an inland lake.

On the return trip by water, there's a similar experience. The motorist may be a little tired from a day of unaccustomed outdoor activity when he arrives at the dock at Benton Harbor. But after he has eaten in the ship cafeteria and then lounged on the decks at dusk with the skies colored by a sunset while skyscrapers grow from tiny silhouettes on the horizon, he arrives in Chicago at 11 o'clock really recreated by his week end away from the city.

A modern ferry service, such as proposed in THE TRIBUNE's editorial plank, would accommodate a multitude of Chicagoans who would like to spend more time on the Riviera coast of Michigan. It would also accommodate the heavy year around commercial trafic of passenger cars between Chicago and Michigan. And it would handle much of the year around freight that now clutters the highways around the foot of Lake Michigan.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

RED LIGHT VIOLATION.

Chicago, July 18.—An undertaker's car bearing the name McNeil went through a red light on Laramie avenue at Madison street at 11:30 o'clock this morning. The driver blew his siren, as if to emphasize this trafic violation. This flagrant conduct is to be deplored. E. T. M.

NEED TWO LEVEL CURBS.

Chicago, July 14.—Charles Grant, in advocating reduction of height of near north side curbs, overlooks the fact that these high curbs save lives. A great number of pedestrians have been killed while on sidewalks by autos driven over low curbs. In some cases, the helpless victims have been crushed to death against the walls of buildings. These curbs are of proper height. As a safety measure all low curbs near street intersections should be raised to prevent autos or trucks, in a collision or to avoid a collision, being driven over the walk. F. R.

MIRROR AIDS TRAFIC.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 17.—In your Sunday edition a paragraph was devoted to a description of a system of prisms erected over the crest of a hill in New York which enabled the motorists to view the oncoming trafic on the other side of the hill. A picture was also included of such a device in use near Hartford, Conn. I thought it might be of interest to you to know that such a device has been in use for quite some time, just south of Minneapolis on U. S. 65, between Oxboro and Lakeville. ROY C. NEUHOUS.

TOO MUCH HORN.

Chicago, July 20.—I blame the au[illegible] makers for most of our accidents toda[illegible] When one buys a car the chief sales ta[illegible] is, she will do 90 or 100. Why? W[illegible] has to drive that fast? But the psycho[illegible]ogy of the thing is impressed on t[illegible] buyer and what happens? Speed, a[illegible] more speed.

Also the bright lights on cars of toda[illegible] The lights are too bright and in the ne[illegible] cars of too wide a range, also tilted t[illegible] high to shine right in the oncoming m[illegible]torist's eyes, thereby causing him to bli[illegible] and sometimes a split second means ete[illegible]nity driving a car. So if they cut do[illegible] the speed and do away with the sup[illegible] bright lights we will lessen the numb[illegible] of accidents.

The driver who uses bright lights [illegible] the city should be stopped some way. [illegible] a matter of fact, the regular drivi[illegible] lights are bright enough for any o[illegible] Drivers are supposed to dim their lig[illegible] when meeting another car, but tod[illegible] they do not. Truett will deliver his presidential address this afternoon, and the chairman at this first of the formal sessions will be the Rev. Lacey K. Williams, pastor of Olivet church, 3100 South Park way, and vice president of the alliance.

The Rev. Lacey K. Williams.

The congress brings together representatives from sixty nations and an attendance exceeding 50,000 delegates is anticipated. The chief topic of the congress will be a world-wide crusade of Evangelism, but important pronouncements will be made on religious liberty, separation of church and state, freedom of worship, the right to free assembly, and the freedom of the press.

Chicagoans to Speak.

On the chief topic—"Evangelism as the Primary Task of the Church"—an address on this subject will be given tomorrow by Dr. Charles W. Koller, president of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, 3040 West Washington boulevard. On religious liberty, addresses will be made by the Rev. Edward Catlos, pastor of the First Bohemian church, 2421 Millard avenue, and by J. J. Abernethy of Washington, D. C. That evening the congress sermon will be preached by Prof. A. T. Ohrn of Norway and a combined choir of Negro churches will sing spirituals.

The report of the commission on "The Baptist Contribution to Church Unity" will be read on Wednesday morning, and most of the sessions that will be sectional except that in the evening at the stadium. There will be a missionary demonstration, with moving pictures of the orient showing the work of American missionaries and of Africa by the British, at which the chairman will again be Dr. Williams.

Report on Conferences.

Prof. Edwin E. Aubrey of the University of Chicago will open the discussion on Thursday morning on the report of the commission on the Oxford and Edinburgh conferences held last year. A Young People's demonstration will take place on Thursday evening and four out of the speakers are from foreign countries.

The first Baptist World alliance congress was held in 1905 at London, England. The four subsequent were: Philadelphia, 1911; Stockholm, 1923; Toronto, 1928, and Berlin, Germany, 1934. It was at this last that Dr. George W. Truett was elected president. His successor will be appointed in Atlanta, and the speech of the president-elect will be given at the closing session on Friday night.

PROCESSION FEATURES NOVENA TO ST. ANNE IN BRIGHTON PARK

The noisy, busy streets of Brighton park will resemble the reverently hushed by-ways of a little French or Canadian town during novena time, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, when hundreds of men, women and children, eight abreast and carrying lighted tapers, will form a procession to St. Anne. The procession is a unique part of the solemn novena to St. Anne conducted by St. Joseph and St. Anne church, 3836 California avenue, and is a tradition of 35 years standing.

The Rev. L. F. De Celle.

This devotion was brought to Brighton Park by the French Canadians who had participated in such processions at the famous shrine of St. Anne de Beaupré in Canada. The St. Anne shrine in Brighton is one of the most important of its kind in the country and houses the largest individual relic of the saint in existence.

According to the Rev. L. F. De Celle, pastor of the church, a triduum to St. Anne may be started today at the 9:30 o'clock service in the morning or the 3, 7 or 8 o'clock service in the evening. The blessing of the sick will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The regular novena began last Monday under the direction of the Rev. Leo Farrell, head of the mission band for the Dominican order.

Barg, will present one of the sixth of a series of forest preserve concerts sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in coöperation with the board of Cook county commissioners.

The choir annually presents a musical production in addition to its regular activities. Recently the members have produced well known operettas, such as "Robin Hood," "Naughty Marietta," and "New Moon." Their most recent endeavor was a variety show incorporating scenes and selections from the "Desert Song" and the "Student Prince." Thus the group is able to sing both secular and sacred music.

WORK IS BEGUN ON NEW VIADUCT IN BLUE ISLAND

Work began recently on the Blue Island Burr Oak avenue viaduct which has been closed since the latter part of 1936. Being the only east and west crossing over the Rock Island railroad tracks between 119th and 131st streets, the closed viaduct proved a great inconvenience to residents in the northeast section of Blue Island.

The bid for construction of the overpass was let to the Thomas McQueen company of Forest Park for $472,388.52. Despite being a Cook county highway project, approval of the state highway department had to be obtained because gas tax funds are being used.

The viaduct will be a four lane highway from Irving avenue to Winchester street, supported by 13 spans, for a distance of 2,066 feet. Part of the funds, the amount that it would have had to outlay for repairs on the wooden viaduct, will be supplied by the Rock Island railway as a result of an Illinois Commerce commission hearing.

Glenn Rearick Confirmed as Gary School Trustee

Gary councilmen recently confirmed the appointment of Glenn O. Rearick by Mayor Ernest L. Schaible to the vacancy in the city school board due to the resignation of Donald Milliren. Mr. Rearick will assume office Aug. 1 as the first school trustee who was educated in local schools.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

MISS SHIRLEY HOCKING, 7658 Michigan avenue, is returning home from Mackinac Island, Mich., this week-end after attending the sixteenth national and fifth international convention of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Miss Hocking was the official delegate from her chapter at the University of Illinois at the convocation, which attracted hundreds of delegates from all over the United States and Canada from July 8 to 13. She is president of the Illinois chapter and will be a senior at the university next year.

Shirley Hocking. [Duncan Studio.]

A couple of lads named Bruce and Bob rode away on their bicycles a few weeks ago and didn't return to Our Town until they had pedaled 270 miles downstate. That the boys maintained a rather consistent pace is evident from the fact that during their first 110 miles they averaged 9 miles an hour and during the last 95 miles they only slowed down to 8 miles an hour. Their destinations were the homes of relatives in Peru and Eureka. Their full names are Bruce Howat of 2217 West 108th place and Bob Haedtler of 9558 South Claremont avenue.

SPEAKING of traveling, four June graduates of Loyola university traveled an estimated 89,000 miles during the last four years to obtain a higher education. The boys are not foreigners; they merely crossed and re-crossed the city daily for classes on the north side campus. Though carrying a heavy load of extra-curricular activities, each covered approximately 22,000 miles via elevated trains and automobiles. They are Leo Adams, 7040 Dante avenue, king of the senior ball and treasurer of Alpha Delta Gamma fraternity; Peter L. Conway Jr., 8015 Bennett avenue, president of Phi Alpha Rho, honorary debating fraternity, president of the glee club and a member of the Loyola News staff; Harold P. Sandquist, 9940 South Elizabeth street, star of intramural athletics, and Robert A. Riley, 8054 Jeffrey avenue, member of the debating squad.

Leo Adams.

William D. Neale and Edward A. Kreml will be upholding the honor of the south side among the plebes at West Point next year. Two of the 492 cadets enrolled in the 1943 class, they have been assigned to the 5th company by Brig. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, superintendent. Cadets Neale and Kreml and their classmates will receive an intensive course of instruction in military subjects designed to fit them for formal entrance into the corps of cadets during the next three weeks. William is the son of Vivian J. Neale of 7753 Constance avenue and Edward is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto J. Kreml of 1856 South Troy street.

ONLY a month ago Miss Maurine Willman, 5129 Harper avenue, was graduated from Loyola university. Today she is on the high seas with her husband, Dr. Paul Muller of Davos, Switzerland, bound for Paris and Davos, where they will make their home. Both bride and groom, who were married on July 6, come from backgrounds which emphasize the dentists' art. Mrs. Muller has been a staff member of the foundation for dental research of the Chicago College of Dental Surgery of Loyola, and her brother, Dr. Warren Willman, is associate professor of operative dentistry at Loyola. Both Dr. Muller and his father, who lives in Davos, are graduates of the Loyola dental school, and his sister, Heide, is also a practicing dentist in Davos.

Announcement of the awarding of glee club medals to a dozen boys and girls was made at the Beverly Y. M. C. A. picnic recently which was transferred from Dan Ryan woods to the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church because of rain. The winners are Richard Scheidt, Everett Haglund, Robert Putzlaff, Raymond Ruston, William Garrow, Eugene Jantz, Donald Bailey, Beverly Haglund, Alberta Hansen, Glenna Campbell, Patty Maier, and Peggy Biedermann. Points toward the awards were earned by promptness at rehearsals and regular attendance and participation in public appearances made by the clubs.

Employés of the Reo Packing company will hold their annual picnic next Sunday at Justice park, Archer and Keane avenues. The feature of the day will be a donkey race.

FOREST AREAS ATTRACTION FOR CITY'S THRONGS

Babel of Tongues to Fill the Air.

Even if President and Mrs. Roosevelt had not entertained the king and queen of England at an outing during the recent royal visit, a picnic still would be the typical American form of amusement.

Meeting on a common ground, 42,685 persons of diverse nationalities will gather today at 125 organized picnics in south and southwest side forest preserves. They will chatter in a Babel of tongues, eat special native dishes, and whirl in the colorful folk dances of the old countries. Yet they will also play baseball, pitch horseshoes, and compete with American humor in three-legged races, egg throwing contests, and fat men's races.

In addition to the special picnics, thousands of other family groups will flock to the forest preserves to eat their Sunday dinners at tables beneath the trees or to spend the day in the swimming pools and on the golf courses.

Considers the People.

"Although it is our first duty to preserve the native landscape in its original condition," says Charles G. Sauers, general superintendent of the Cook county forest preserves, "we must also provide for the recreation and pleasure of the people."

With this in mind, the forest preserves have been improved the last few seasons with parking areas, baseball diamonds, playing fields, open air concerts, dance platforms, fireplaces, picnic tables and benches, bridle paths, swimming pools, and golf courses.

So far this season 4,4.2 permits have been issued by the Cook county forest preserve office for outings in the wooded areas which were attended by 2,882,200 persons. According to Miss Marie Hurley, picnic permit clerk in the county building, the total number of permits given out last year mounted to 6,575. Indications this summer are that the number will be exceeded by 1,500. Permits are required for groups numbering more than 20. For smaller groups no permit is necessary.

Swimming and Golf Vie.

Swimming will be the favorite occupation today at the pool in the forest preserve at 159th street and Torrence avenue, while hundreds of Sunday golfers will seek recreation at the links in Palos Hills on 107th street, one-half mile west of Wolf road.

Dan Ryan woods, 87th street and Western avenue, however, will draw the largest crowd due to its excellent picnic facilities, baseball diamonds, bridle paths, and outdoor concerts. Forty-seven picnics are scheduled to be held there.

ANSWERS MR. CHODOROWSKI.

In the matter of the opening and widening of South Pulaski road [Crawford avenue] between the I. & M. Canal and Archer avenue [letter of Mr. Chodorowski, June 19, 1939], please be advised as follows:

The ordinance for this improvement provides for the taking of private property through condemnation proceedings, to be financed by special assessments against property benefited. The assessment roll filed in court [No. 550,349 Superior court] contains among other things about 1,700 lots or parcels assessed, located within ¼ mile east or west of Pulaski road. To have placed these assessments into collection during the years of the recent economic depression would have created additional hardships on a large number of people, and would have resulted in numerous tax sales.

However, an effort is now being made to lighten the burden of the property owners assessed, at least in some degree. An ordinance has been submitted to the city council which aims to make available a part of the motor fuel tax fund to aid in financing this improvement. Said matter is now pending in the finance committee.

The law department had been requested to proceed with the trial of this case in anticipation of such aid from the motor fuel tax fund. The construction of sidewalks and curbing is necessarily contingent upon the completion of the condemnation proceedings, which in turn is subject to the working out of an equitable plan of financing this project. We hope that this can be definitely accomplished in the near future.

Vice President,
Board of Local Improvements.

JACKSON PARK GOLF RACKET.

Every Saturday morning at the Jackson park golf course you will find a group of golfers sitting around for hours trying to get on the course.

If you go to book at 5:30 a. m. to play that same day you find the sheet filled with fictitious names—that fact being proved by the writing being the same on the daily sheet up to as late as 3 o'clock in the afternoon—yet if you go to the window and offer a dollar bill a ticket will be handed quietly to you in a very short time. This was demanded of me last week, but I refused to pay, and a little later I was called to the window and told I could have a ticket for 50 cents and I accepted. So also did three others, one of whom I learned later was the wife of one of the city's fire chiefs who had waited two and a half hours, the same as myself.

When we inquired why it was when a foursome called on time—which by the way is always fifteen minutes late—and were not there, if we could take their places, we received the startling information that they always allow one hour for late comers. But some other foursomes mysteriously appeared. All daid money on the table, yet not one of them signed the sheet on going out.

Last Saturday morning three threesomes went out within ten minutes, and in each case I applied for the fourth place and was refused, as they wanted to play by themselves, nor were they club members. Since when did golf become a dollar a game at Jackson park?

Since when were fill-ins done away with? Since when was an hour's grace allowed for late comers? And just why is the ticket allowed to exist on the park courses, and who pockets the extra 50 cents? DISGUSTED.

WEEDS FILL LOTS.

Weeds are growing in wild profusion on every vacant lot in Beverly Hills and nothing is being done about them. Many are over 5 feet in height. As every one knows, they provide a traffic hazard by screening the corners and also cause misery for hay fever victims. Certainly the city could put some of the unemployed to work cutting down these weeds instead of expecting neighborhood property owners and renters to suffer from the weeds or cut them at their own expense. The law provides that the city compel property owners to cut the weeds or, if the owner refuses, to send in a crew and assess the owner for the costs. Why isn't this law upheld?

MRS. L. L. D.

TELLS NEED AT BEACH.

Have you ever gone bathing along the lake shore in Burnham park, which offers practically the only swimming facilities for thousands of south siders who have no automobiles to drive elsewhere? If so, have your finer sensibilities impressed you with the crying need of more comfort stations for the use of bathers and picnickers? Why, sometimes the conditions are so positively shocking, so much so that I would hesitate to let a daughter of mine go there. Can't the park district spend some of those new millions from the pegged levy for the simple conveniences that will keep sewage off our beautiful lake front. MRS. H. S. W.

Bride of Yesterday

Mary Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Azzarello of 10631 South Campbell avenue, was married yesterday to Joseph T. Lavorci of 2813 South Union avenue, at St. Catejan's church, 112th street and Artesian avenue.

COUPLE'S DREAM OF WOODS HOME NOW A REALITY

Six Room Colonial House on Small Estate.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

When some one tells you that he has at last succeeded in making a dream come true—and that dream happens to be one you have always secretly cherished in your own heart!—your interest is naturally keen, and his story holds your attention.

Glenn Price of Libertyville can tell such a story. It centers around his "Heritage Hollow" on its own Candle Light lane. A truly delightful cottage and a light type home with white walls, green shutters; a spreading, low lying home on four acres of wooded land one-half mile northeast of Libertyville.

"As far back as 1930 we wanted a home of our own which should be more than a home," Mr. Price said. "We wanted a small estate, unpretentious but in a beautiful wooded spot. We felt that somewhere there must be the land for such a 'poor man's estate' as we called our estate long before the site was found.

Finds Wooded Site.

"We wanted it accessible to the city but with an atmosphere of remoteness to add to its charm, and we looked at many places. Some seemed too far from transportation, others too urban, others too expensive.

"Then at last in 1936 we found the spot. It seemed ideal to us for all our future requirements. We were not daunted by the wildness of it, but entranced by the fact that we must literally hack our way through a tangle of underbrush to where our house now stands. A thickly wooded spot with oak trees and walnuts and maples, and wild blackberry and elderberry bushes. It was August, 1936, when we first saw this tangle of briars and vines and woods and ferns, and the marshlands beyond of the Des Plaines river.

"We bought the land in October, 1936, and Mrs. Price fastened a handkerchief to a green twig to mark the site where our house was to be built."

That was something over two years ago. Now a very complete and finely adequate home has emerged, in the colonial manner.

Garage Linked to House.

Elmer Gylleck, A. I. A., architect, at 10 North Clark street, Chicago, has emphasized the horizontality of the design by adding to the square compactness of the six room house, a low porch which links home and garage, and a studio room at the right.

"We wanted a spread to the house, to carry out the impression of an estate," Mr. Price, explained. "And too, Mrs. Price and I have always wanted a covered runway in that home we were 'some day' going to build."

Large Picture Window.

Adjoining the kitchen is a breakfast alcove with its floor above the level of the kitchen floor in order to make it seem an individual unit. The walls are of natural pine, waxed, and the ceiling fixture is an ox-yoke which came from way down east.

At the left of the kitchen and dining room there is a small hallway which leads to studio and first floor bath. Luckily, as Mr. Price says, there wasn't space for a tub so they have the luxury of a shower stall. And of course this studio room, with a closet opening from connecting hall, could be used as an extra room for other purposes if wished. It has quite a nautical air, with its floor stained a deep blue-green, its ceiling a light blue green, its brass whale lantern—and a "fake" pirate's chest, a massive affair which looks as if it had seen in its early days some desert isle, but in reality it is a large filing cabinet, which Mr. Price made himself.

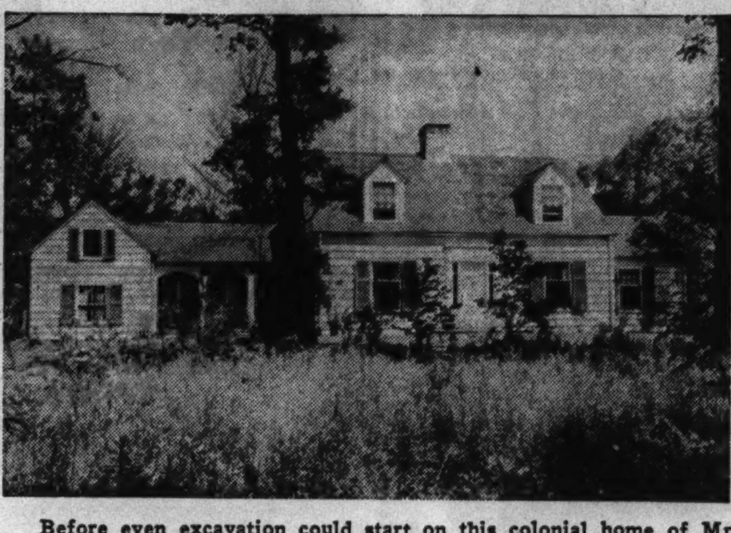
New Home on Four Acres



Before even excavation could start on this colonial home of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Price, Libertyville, Ill., a road had to be blazed through deep woods and an almost impassable tangle of wild underbrush. Quite an adventure—and one that many would like to take! Architect Elmer Gylleck, A. I. A., 10 North Clark street, Chicago.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, July 24.

Buy pot plants to fill in bare spots in the flower border. Begonias, fuchsias, English ivy, small palms, and holly and Boston ferns all do well in shade. Use geraniums, heliotrope, petunia, and other bedding plants for a sunny place. Be sure to destroy Canada thistles for they are one of the worst pests that can invade a garden or field. They grow from underground stems and should be dug out or kept down with the sickle. Burdock and yellow dock should be dug with the spade and destroyed. Transplant Oriental poppies when the foliage has died down.

Tuesday, July 25.

The gardener should make a compost pile whenever the materials can be obtained. Organic manures should always be procured whenever available and composed with soil for future use. It isn't too late to sow some kinds of vegetables for late use. Try a few rows of turnips, six weeks beans, Chinese cabbage, late cabbage, and cauliflower. During hot weather allow the grass to grow about 1½ inches high. Water the lawn thoroughly or to a depth of 4 to 5 inches and it will be unnecessary to water more than once a week. For grass, remove the nozzle of the hose, lay the end on a board and turn on the water. A much greater flow is obtained by this method. It pays to keep the asparagus bed well cultivated and free from weeds. An application of decayed manure or complete plant food will give strong plants for next season's crop.

Wednesday, July 26.

A strawberry bed can be made now and the plants will bear next season. Firm the soil around the plants and water until established. Mulch the old bed and keep watered. Keep the runners removed. Bag grapes for good clean fruit. Simply fasten paper sacks over each bunch. Don't allow plants to become defoliated by leaf eating worms. At the first sign of a worm, dust the entire plant with hellebore or spray with a stomach poison.

Thursday, July 27.

Keep the window boxes well watered. They also require plenty of food. Sprinkle a bit of commercial fertilizer over the surface of the soil and water it in. Pinch geraniums that are wanted for next winter's bloom. Do not allow them to flower for the object is to obtain a good, stocky plant with a goodly number of flower stems. This is an excellent time to visit gardens and make notes of the desirable flowers for your own garden. Remember that you can't grow everything in a small city garden. Plants must have room to develop or none will be good.

Friday, July 28.

Fruit that has fallen should be collected and destroyed. Order pansy seed for early sowing. Young seedlings are transplanted to a frame or bed and protected during winter. This enables them to make a fine start during the cool spring days.

Saturday, July 29.

Divide Madonna lilies as soon as the flowering period is over, not in spring. They shoud be planted early. Give roses plenty of water, preferably during the early morning. Sow delphinium seed while it is fresh and plump. Buy the best strains. Sow fresh hollyhock seed to obtain good stock for next season's flowering. Columbines also can be sown. Sow seed of all plants rather deep at this season. Press the soil around them and water. Some shade should be given until after the seed has germinated and a little shade thereafter during the hottest part of the day will be beneficial. Give dahlias copious amounts of water from now on.

CHICAGO LAWN CLUB PREPARES FOR NEW SEASON

Citizenship Departments Map Programs.

Like a Broadway production or a college curriculum, club programs out on the southwest side are carefully and arduously planned months ahead of time. During this summer members in the 3d district of the Illinois Federation of Womens' Clubs are forsaking their leisure time to arrange a complete activities calendar for the coming club season.

For example, five departments under the American citizenship division of the Chicago Lawn Woman's club will meet Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. H. T. Simpson, 2901 West 65th street, American citizenship chairman, to discuss outlines for next year's work. Heading the departments are: Mrs. F. R. Crawford, civil service; Mrs. C. M. S. Seybold, law observance; Mrs. H. E. Best, legislation, and Mrs. A. J. Berger, international relations.

Beverly Hills Woman's Club.

Mrs. Frederic Fenger, public welfare chairman, has announced the programs to be given by committees of her department during the coming season. The international relations division, headed by Mrs. A. M. Duller, will present Jack Slicer, American born young man who was reared in China, and Hubert Herring, interpreter, who will talk on "Better Relations Between the United States and South America."

Outstanding on the civics and civil service committee calendar will be an illustrated lecture by D. E. Mackelmann of the Metropolitan Housing council on "Challenge of Housing;" a talk on "How Are We Caring for Our Needy," by Mrs. Frank Specht, president of the Chicago Federated Charities, and a discussion of "The Government Is Your Business," by Mrs. Van Der Vries, Illinois state representative. Mrs. Blake Smith is civics and civil service chairman.

A parlimentary law class will be sponsored by Mrs. Delbert Smith, legislation chairman, on three mornings. Mrs. W. G. Suthers, state chairman of legislation and district parliamentarian, will be the leader.

Mrs. Arthur Kasehagen, state chairman of the division of community service and a member of the Beverly club, will present a lecture on "Face to Face with the Woman and the Child in the Specialized Courts." The law enforcement chairman, Mrs. Arthur Booth, will speak on "Community Law Enforcement."

An illustrated lecture on "Home First Aid and Disaster Relief" will be given by Roger Holden of the American Red Cross under the sponsorship of the public health and child hygiene committee of which Mrs. Alfred Biggs is chairman. Mrs. Biggs also will have as speakers during the year Dr. Guy V. Pontius, who will tell of the present status of the treatment of cancer, and Dr. Harry S. Huber, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Chicago, who will talk on "Allergy."

Chicago Lawn Juniors.

New board members who will assume duties during the coming club season are: Mrs. R. K. Miller, president; Miss Irene Fagerstrom, vice president; Miss Gladys Dorr, recording secretary; Miss Myra Hand, corresponding secretary; Miss Donalda Cline, treasurer; Miss Blanche Walker, philanthrophy; Mrs. Marjorie Keeler, American home; Mrs. Ann Painter, drama; Mrs. J. S. Fagerstrom, literature; Mrs. H. L. Kinsey, music, and Mrs. T. T. Chambon, art.

Others are: Miss Myrtle Turney, program; Mrs. A. R. Crane, social; Mrs. G. M. Allen, publicity, and Mrs. Marion Bitterman, ways and means. Mrs. W. A. Hansen, treasurer of the Chicago Lawn Woman's club, will act as sponsor for the juniors.

Englewood Juniors.

The sixth of a series of summer bridge parties will be held tomorrow afternoon in the home of Mrs. O. Irvin Fox, 8417 Wabash avenue. Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Donald W. Larson, Mrs. John P. Wright, Mrs. Laurence J. Whitmarsh, and Mrs. Marshall K. Smith.

Morgan Park Woman's Club.

Plans for participation in the golden jubilee year of the club have been completed by Mrs. Harry A. Bremer, American home chairman, and her committee. Programs sponsored by the committee will be on Oct. 11 when Mrs. E. F. Worst of Lockport will present a lecture on "Homespun"; Nov. 20 when Mrs. Herbert Reed of Lake Bluff will give new ideas for "Decorative Schemes for Special Occasions," and in March when Jean Pickett Cochran will talk on "Hobbies for Happiness."

Members of the American home committee include Mrs. A. B. Chadwick, Mrs. J. V. Gordon, Mrs. H. De Los Higman, Mrs. Thomas A. Hughes, Mrs. Chester T. Parry, Mrs. William M. Stuart, and Miss Winona Whitaker.

Helping Promote Church Picnic

Recalling the early days of Msgr. John F. Ryan's priesthood, young ladies of St. Bernard church, 66th street and Stewart avenue, donned costumes of the late '90s last week to advertise the annual church picnic, which will be held today at McDermott's grove, 119th street and Archer avenue. The outing is being held in observance of the fortieth anniversary of Msgr. Ryan's ordination to the priesthood. He has been pastor of St. Bernard church for the last twenty-two years. Dressed in the quaint costumes, which were donated by the Lester Costuming company, were (left to right) Miss Eileen McDermott, Miss Angella Cahill, and Miss Jean Cahill.

GOLFERS TO FETE DAVE M'INTOSH AT ANNUAL MEET

Pro to Be Guest at Own Course Wednesday.

Sixty-four year old Dave McIntosh, erstwhile caddy from St. Andrews, Scotland, will be special guest on his own golf course Wednesday when the Blue Island Golf association will hold its annual Dave McIntosh day at Oak Hills Golf club, 131st street and 82d avenue, Palos Park.

Dave McIntosh.

Born in the fishing port of St. Andrew's, Scotland, Mr. McIntosh spent his boyhood as a caddy on the now internationally famous golf links.

In 1897 he came to America to take the position of professional at Grand Rapids course, the first links in the state of Michigan. He was later the pro at Westward Ho for fifteen years, and then at Glen Oak course in Glen Ellen for twelve years.

A public tournament will be conducted Wednesday for both men and women. Card games will get under way at the farmhouse for nonplayers, and in the evening a testimonial dinner will be given for McIntosh.

CAMERA USERS MEET TO TALK OF THEIR HOBBY

New Club to Gather in Armour Square Park.

With the sun creating studies in shadow and light and the clouds blanched to a summer softness, camera fans of the south and southwest side are seen everywhere with their boxes and light meters. Serious about this hobby, many meet in organized groups to criticize and admire each other's pictures.

Adding to the list of camera clubs already in the district, a new group of fifteen adult amateur photographers will meet Tuesday evening in the fieldhouse of Armour Square park, 33d street and Shields avenue. All members reside in the park community and will study developing, enlarging, printing, and tinting of photographs.

The club will be one of twenty-four sponsored by the Chicago park district and will take part in the city-wide contest held annually among the clubs for every type of amateur work.

Club's Charter Members.

Summer scenes and studies taken in the park will be exhibited Thursday evening at a meeting of the Jackson Park Camera club in the Gladstone hotel, 62d street and Kenwood avenue. Most of the prints brought for appraisal and constructive criticism will be the result of the recent all day tour of Jackson park conducted by the club and the park district for amateur photographers throughout the city. Richard M. Stevens, 4753 Lake Park avenue, will have charge of the print discussions.

The Jackson group is planning a series of practical programs to be conducted by its members during August. "Photo Sensitive Emulsions" will be the topic of a talk by Charles Lindsay, 6557 Ingleside avenue, former president of the Lens and Shutter club, on Aug. 3. On Aug. 10, "How to Do It" will treat of another practical phase in photography.

Talk on Meters.

"The Proper Use of Exposure Meters" will be explained by an expert at a meeting of the South Side Cinema club Wednesday evening in Hamilton park fieldhouse, 72d street and Normal boulevard. Entertainment will be provided by a color film of the New York World's Fair shown by Charles Detrick and James De Haan.

Blue Island has gone Hollywood and recently organized its own motion picture company, called Premier Productions. The purpose of the organization is to give amateurs an opportunity to put into actual practice some of the work in which they are interested, including makeup, costuming, photography, set designing, and lighting.

Filming has already begun on a production entitled "Blue Island, 1939," which will show a day in the town. Buildings, organizations, and happenings of interest will be combined in the one picture.

Preparing Another Film.

A second production is being prepared which will feature the high school boys and girls. This picture will be sent to Lloyd Bacon, director of Warner Brothers studios, for criticism.

Members of Premier Productions meet weekly in each other's homes and material is purchased by weekly membership fees. The club has been organized into departments headed by Bradley Lysholm, makeup; Jeanne McGrath, costuming; Charles Pecor, scenario; Jack Whitfield, stage design; Melvin Smith, photography; James McGrath, lighting, and Ray Schreiber, properties.

Bride at Home

[H. Du Bois Studio.]

In a smart white sharkskin tailored costume and snug turban, Miss Marion Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Johnson of Los Angeles, Cal., recently became the bride of Charles Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hoffman of Hoopeston, in the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue. The young couple have set up housekeeping at 7923 Bishop street.

CHURCH CHOIRS GO TO CAMP FOR WEEK'S OUTING

Selected for the trip were ten members of the Eastminster choir, consisting of children from 8 to 12 years old, ten members of the Northminster choir, 12 to 15 years old, and an equal number from the Southminster choir of high school students. Several other young people are paying their own way.

The group is accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. James E. Congdon, 6400 Harvard avenue. Dr. Congdon has lent his motor boat for the party's use. His son James E. Congdon Jr., minister of the First Presbyterian church, Aurora, and manager of Camp Aurora, has placed at the disposal of the camp his racing sailboat, a speed boat, and row boats. Instruction in swimming and handling of boats is being given by life guards.

PLAY PROGRAMS OFFERED DAILY AT SETTLEMENTS

Provide for Children of Humble Homes.

They call them underprivileged, these children whose parents cannot afford camps for the summer or even carfare to the lake. They live in crowded neighborhoods and have to play in the streets.

There are settlement houses dotted over the southwest side where these boys and girls can take advantage of specially planned summer programs which provide fun and education.

At the University of Chicago settlement house, 4630 McDowell avenue, founded by the late Mary McDowell, famous social worker, there is activity every day for all ages. A play school brings out pre-school children from hot and crowded homes into a sunlit play patio where sand boxes and toys are numerous.

Baseball Is Popular.

Baseball is so popular that balls and bats keep rotating from one team to another in the Interclub Baseball league. In addition, boys have a general assembly every morning from 9 to 9:30 o'clock for a ceremonial campfire around which they take part in stunts and games.

Girls meet daily for rhythm dancing, orchestra, doll club, sewing, handcraft, and singing games. Thursdays are outing days for them. Both the girls and boys will combine to present a music festival with folk dancing, vocal numbers, orchestra, and community singing on Monday evening, July 31.

Free outdoor movies on the roof are a regular Friday night occasion, attracting as many as 200 children, young people, and parents. Street play precedes the movies, with the street and playground packed with action.

Real Vacation Time.

For the last forty-four years the Fellowship house, 831 West 33d place, has made summer time a real vacation time for the people of Bridgeport. A nonsectarian social settlement, it is located in the largest Lithuanian community in Chicago, about a mile north of the stockyards and on the edge of the Central Manufacturing district. Mrs. Alice Mauck is resident director.

The Fellowship program now is educational and cultural. Classes begin with the 3 year olds who come to play school, while their older brothers and sisters are busy with woodwork, Boy Scout troops, handcrafts, sewing, cooking, and dramatics. Then there are games, stories, baseball, volley ball, and horse shoe pitching.

Classes Are Offered.

Few changes have been made in the regular summer program of the House of Happiness settlement, 3052 Gratten avenue, conducted by Miss Isabel Pifer, head resident. There are classes in manual training, bone carving, glass painting, handicraft and gymnastics, also a newspaper project which is run by the children themselves and dramatics. For the girls there are sewing, cooking, handicrafts and ballet dancing.

CHICAGO'S RADIO STUDIOS PRODUCE NEW HEADLINERS

Stars Go East and West; Others Take Places.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

No matter how many radio headliners Chicago gives up to bigger and better contracts in New York and Hollywood, there are always plenty of promising newcomers to step into their shoes. And before long [this has happened again and again] they, too, are no longer fledglings and are on their way east or west.

Catherine McCune.

During the last few months the whole Fibber McGee company — Jim and Marian Jordan, Billy Mills, Bill Thopmson, Harold Peary, Harlow Wilcox and others—have gone to Hollywood; then Alec Templeton and Edna Odell followed them west; and lately Red Foley has headed for movieland. They say the WLS National Barn Dance troupe plans to move out there and make a picture sometime, soon, also.

Meanwhile, Clark Dennis joined Paul Whiteman in New York; Raymond Johnson and Betty Caine went to Radio City. And many another left the local fold.

Lots of New Names.

One hears many new names this summer that weren't mentioned so often just a few months back. Probably many of them will become much better known before another season rolls by. A few of the newer names that come to mind:

Evelyn Lynne.

Garry Morfit, the young master of ceremonies of the Bandwagon program [he also relieves Ransom Sherman on Club Matinée]; Elliot Lewis, romantic young leading man of the Knickerbocker Theater series; June Travis, long identified with pictures, and now the leading actress in the Waterloo Junction serial; John Archer and Alice Eden, the two young movie starlets of the picture Career, who are working in the Gateway to Hollywood Summer Theater; Margaret Hillies of Manhattan Mother; Gail Henshaw, headliner of Kitty Keene, Inc.; Whitey Ford, master of ceremonies, and Lew Valentine, who is radio's Dr. I. Q.

Group of New Singers.

Among the newer singers, besides Red Foley and Curt Massey, mentioned already, are: Michael Stewart, a fine basso, who not so long ago was a steel worker in Youngstown; Nancy Martin, who is said to have exceptional television possibilities; Pat Page, who got his crooning experience in Alaska; Lillian Cornell, who gave up opera for popular singing; Betty Barrett a promising 14 year old; Evelyn Lynne, who left an orchestra recently for NBC; George Goebel, once a boy soprano, but now grown up and having his second career on WLS; Rusty Gill, the Prairie Sweethearts — Essie Martin and Kay Reinberg; Harriet Brewer, who is doing more solo work nowadays; Ross Jordan, and Dorothy Davis who sings as "Sweet Adeline" and "Janette."

Tom Wallace is the chap who essays the rôle of Uncle Walter in the Dog House program; Tommy Mack, formerly of the Milton Berle company, is a Chicago regular this summer; Doris Dudley of John Barrymore's troupe appears in the Helen Trent serial; Leo Kempin is the new conductor of the Contented hour; Edna Stillwell assists Red Skelton; Bob Strong leads the Plantation Party orchestra; Caroline Ellis conducts a new network program.

Nancy Martin.

Among the newer actors and actresses are Leslie Woods, Mat Mueller, Jeanette McCready; Chuck Grant, Barbara Fuller, and Catherine McCune, all of Scattergood Baines; Toni Gilman of the Woman in White [her younger sister Lucy has made several pictures in Hollywood]; Bonnie Kay of Backstage Wife; Betty Ruth Smith, Bryan Morgan, Hilda Graham, Edith Perry, and Orrin Brandon.

There are others: George Neise, Charlottee Holland, Sam Wanamaker, Fern Parsons, Fern Head, Margaret Shallett, Janet Lane, and John Larkin.

W-G-N Broadcasts Music from Blackhawk.

Short Subjects: Johnnie [Scat] Davis, who left Fred Waring's orchestra a year ago for work in Hollywood, is back behind his silver cornet and leading a band of his own. With his new orchestra, which he has had on tour for several months, Johnnie opened at the Blackhawk restaurant Friday evening.

The orchestra is heard nightly on W-G-N and Mutual. The Davis band purveys a danceable medium between Bing Crosby's "Dixieland Swing," and what is termed "sweet swing." Betty Van is the girl singer with the orchestra.

News and Notes.

Talent scouts from M-G-M have been eyeing Chuck Grant, just 11, of the Scattergood Baines cast. . . . Jim and Marian Jordan [Fibber McGee and Molly] have been passing a quiet vacation in town. They moved to California last spring. . . . Jack Benny was in town, too, visiting relatives. He will go back to California by way of New York and a boat that will take him and Mary Livingstone through the Panama canal. While stopping at Waukegan Jack found the cactus he planted in front of city hall in salute to Fred Allen thriving.

A Fish for Fishermen.

When Andy Devine, Announcer Charlie Lyon, and Paul Rhymer, author of Vic and Sade, entered their train quarters the other day to take off for a Canadian fishing trip they found a large box in their quarters. Inside in floral wrappings they found a flounder, with best wishes from Fort Pearson, NBC announcer.

A lot of vacationers are going for those new portable battery pack radios for use in boats, at the beach and anywhere electricity is not available. Several manufacturers have brought out the new portable radios in models which can be plugged in as well as used with batteries.

Kay Kyser, summering in Beverly Hills, writes that he misses his Chicago followers. But he must remain on the west coast for some time.

While James Melton makes no pretenses to having a memory like Toscanini's [he knows the complete scores of hundreds of symphonic, operatic, and concert works by heart] he does know by heart 1,500 songs. These include classical, popular, and cowboy numbers, including the scores of five operas. But Melton can't trust his memory to keep an appointment!

Henry Grady's Address on New South to Be Aired

Henry W. Grady's famous speech on "The New South" will be recreated on the Gems of American Eloquence program on W-G-N at 10 p. m. next Friday. The speech will be recreated by Forrest Lewis. A dramatic cast will present a picture of conditions and circumstances leading up to the oratorical event. The program will be broadcast from the main audience studio of W-G-N under the direction of Blair Walliser.

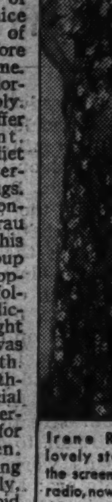
Watch Fat Go!

If you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—
First . . . eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second . . mix ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strict diet lists, strenuous exercises or taking drugs. Yet!—in a test conducted by Dr. Damrau of New York, with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds was registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating; and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.



Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

Try This Amazing Welch's Tomato Juice
If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add ⅓ water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

SEEING IS BELIEVING!

SMOKERS . . . everywhere . . . are comparing cigarettes by just watching them burn! One leading cigarette, compared to others, burns much slower! It's C-A-M-E-L! Camels win in this comparison by a wide margin. The reason: Costlier tobaccos . . . carefully blended . . . in a cigarette made to burn slowly, completely and smoke cool, mild!

Recently, a group of scientists made this interesting laboratory test on a bigger scale. 16 of the largest-selling cigarette brands were tested impartially. CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME FOR THE OTHER BRANDS. (Camels were remarkably consistent. Cigarettes of some brands smoked twice as fast as others right from the same pack.) IN THE SAME TEST, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME FOR ALL THE OTHER BRANDS.

Camel is the cigarette of costlier tobaccos . . . a cool, mellow smoke, more appealing in taste, and always so uniformly delightful!

SMOKING IS BELIEVING!

CAMEL'S SLOWER BURNING (COMPARED TO THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE OTHER 15 BRANDS TESTED) GIVES YOU THE EQUIVALENT OF 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK! YOU ECONOMIZE WHILE ENJOYING SMOKING PLEASURE AT ITS BEST!

TRY Camels for a really thrilling smoking experience . . . fragrance, ripe taste, mildness! Camels give everything you want in a smoke . . . including ECONOMY!

Camels have more tobacco by weight than the average of the 15 other brands tested. Besides, Camels burn slower than any of those other brands. And by burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands, Camels give you the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack!

Camels give you even more for your money when you count in Camel's finer, more expensive tobaccos. Buy shrewdly! Buy Camels . . . America's first choice for a luxury smoke every smoker can afford!

HELP WANTED—MEN.

Salesmen.

BUSINESS IS GREAT.

Does that sound strange to you, when every one else is crying depression? Well, listen to this.

1938 was by far our largest year and to date this year we have broken every monthly record.

I have been in this business a quarter of a century and I have never seen business better. What do you suppose the reason is?

I will tell you. Our business is absolutely depression-proof. Our electrical units are such that people need them, buy them; which makes plenty of work for all.

Come in and let me show you our latest products. Let me explain our merchandising program which is so sound and so workable that former mechanics, school teachers, carpenters, lawyers, farmers, etc., who have never sold anything before in their lives are earning and receiving $50, $75, yes, over $100 per week in advanced commission and bonus alone.

The chances are our products are used in the homes of your neighbors and the business houses of your neighborhood as we have thousands upon thousands of customers.

We are completing our force for our great fall campaign. If you are able to start at once, honest, and reliable, between the ages of 24 and 50, and can live on approximately $30 a week while learning, you will be granted a personal interview.

All applicants will be thoroughly schooled in position for sales, installation, collection or service. Apply Monday, 2 p. m. sharp, Suite 400, Maryland Bldg., 63d and Maryland-av., 1 block east of Cottage Grove.

There is no competition. The price is the lowest ever known. Commissions liberal. Our reputation is world-wide. For 30 years, we have been the undisputed leaders in our field. Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

Flowering Trees.

July 22, 1939.

THE wild flowers growing in the woods and fields in Chicagoland, from the earliest spring beauties to the colorful asters of autumn, are an annual source of pleasure and study for outdoor fans. But the trees which bear beautiful flowers in the spring often do not get their just share of attention. Many trees have unusually large and showy flowers; others stress mass production of blossoms. Wild crabs and the haw trees are in this class.

One of the most attractive landscape features of a midwestern farm may be the number of flowering trees which grow on it. The DuPage county farm has a wide variety of these trees. Among them are:

1. Horse chestnut. Not a common tree on the farm, but it takes number one position because its large white flowers are so spectacular. On large trees the flowers, shaped like candelabrum, are 8 to 12 inches tall.

2. Catalpa. Catalpas compete with horse chestnuts for conspicuous flowers. Their bunches of white blossoms are prominent during June. They are numerous on the farm.

3. Black locust. There are many of these useful trees in one corner of the farm. Their flowers, which are very fragrant, appear late in the season.

4. Wild crab. The flowers of this tree are so attractive that horticulturists have developed doubleflowered trees for ornamental planting. This decorative and useful tree is common on the farm.

5. Hawthorn. There are four species of hawthorn on the DuPage county farm, and all are showy when they're in blossom in May. The fruit of the haws, particularly the common red haw, is used by the farm women for making delicious jelly.

6. Wild cherry. There are two species on the farm, the chokecherry and the wild black cherry. Both have fragrant and attractive flowers late in May.

7. Basswood. Not common on the farm, but several specimens have attained considerable size. This tree has countless white flowers which attract the bees.

NEW REDUCED LOAN RATES

EFFECTIVE AT ONCE

Monthly Rate Now

2½% on balances of $150 or less.

2% on that part of the loan in excess of $150.

HOW TO REPAY

$5 per month, plus interest, for each $100 borrowed, repays a loan on our famous TWENTY PAYMENT PLAN. Interest is charged only on the unpaid balance of the loan and therefore gets less each month. For example, on a $200 loan the interest is $4.75 for the first month and gradually decreases to $.25 the last month an average monthly charge of only $2.58. The charge permitted by law averages $3.11 monthly. Obviously, then, on a $200 twenty months loan Commonwealth's monthly rate of 2½% on loans of $150 or less and 2% on balances above saves you $10.50.

SAVE 16%

of Lawful Maximum Charge

These rates apply to ALL types and classes of loans. You get this same rate whether you borrow on your auto, furniture, or just your personal note, or whether you repay in 1 or 20 months. You cannot afford to pass up this saving.

Applications received by personal call, letter, or telephone will receive immediate attention.

Survey Shows Fewer Apartments Are Vacant in Chicago than During Last Year

OCCUPANCY NOW 95%, ACCORDING TO SWAN-LORISH

Families Moving In from Other Cities.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Better rental and building conditions are disclosed by two surveys made public yesterday—one by Fred M. Lorish of Swan-Lorish, Inc., and the other by the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association.

Fred M. Lorish.

The Lorish study of apartment conditions revealed a gain in occupancy this month over the same month last year, with rents remaining firm.

The bankers' association semi-annual survey of the mortgage and real estate fields showed a big increase in the building of new single family residences inside the Chicago limits.

Covers 10,000 Flats.

The Lorish statement is based on a midsummer survey covering more than 10,000 apartments operated by several big Chicago real estate firms.

The most significant fact disclosed by the survey is that there are approximately 25 per cent fewer vacant apartments in Chicago today than in July last year.

Occupancy of apartment buildings is again on the upward trend, Lorish said. In July, 1937, it had climbed to 97 per cent. It then fell sharply in succeeding months and by July, 1938, it had declined to 93 per cent. Since then occupancy has been gaining until it is now 95 per cent, Lorish said.

"It is highly gratifying that vacant apartments are being absorbed during this off season," Lorish said. "When the thousands of families who have taken summer residence at lakes and resorts return in the fall, a shortage is likely to occur in some types of apartments."

Rents Remain Stationary.

That more than 80 per cent of new tenants in apartments are not from other flats was shown in an analysis made by Lorish of 122 new occupants secured by the Lorish firm during June.

"It was shown that fifty-four were newly married couples renting their first apartment," Lorish said. "Thirty-two were moving into Chicago from elsewhere. Fifteen families had been living with relatives or other families.

"Only twenty-one families were moving from other apartments. So it will be seen that more than 80 per cent of these new tenants were not vacating other apartments. Similar experiences are reported by other management firms."

Renting Is Active.

Although the survey shows that sales have been lagging for the last thirty days, renting has been active, especially in connection with corporate personnel changes which have brought many people into Chicago from other cities.

Lorish said that the Illinois Central railroad had asked his firm to locate apartments for sixty families on the south side. These are employés of the auditor of disbursements whose office has been moved from Memphis to Chicago.

"For several years we have been reading a great deal about the increase in suburban home building activity while the great area of Chicago has been a conspicuous laggard in this regard," said George H. Dovenmuehle, president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association.

"During the first half of 1939, according to figures compiled by the executive office of the association, there has been a sudden increase in construction of moderately sized homes within the city limits."

Homes in New Glenview Development

These are three of the five houses to be erected immediately by the Swain Nelson Realty company on Swainwood, a new residential project to be developed on the 326 acres now occupied by the nurseries of Swain Nelson & Sons company in Glenview. Mason Rapp of Rapp & Rapp is the architect of the above homes, which will cost from $10,500 to $12,000.

CHICAGOANS BUY TWO FARMS IN NEARBY COUNTIES

C. A. Noreen, a painting and decorating contractor, living at 5901 Wilson avenue, yesterday bought a 200 acre farm in Du Page county, one and one-half miles north of Eola. It was sold by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance company.

The Northern Illinois Realty Service, of Aurora, which negotiated the sale, also sold 200 acres in Kane county, one mile southeast of Kaneville, for the Prudential Insurance company of America to Harold E. Woodford, vice president of the Perkins Products company of Chicago.

Crystal Lake Acreage Will Be Marketed

Approximately 400 acres of home sites adjoining the grounds of the Crystal Lake Country club are to be marketed by a corporation known as Country Club Properties, Inc., it was announced yesterday. F. J. Soiret is president. J. W. Van Alstyne is director of sales, with offices at 120 South La Salle street.

More than 300 building sites along the shore of Crystal lake are to be disposed of first. Later a 160 acre tract maintained as a game preserve by the club will be sold. The club and golf course still are in the hands of a receiver.

Plan 30 Homes This Year.

There are today more than 100 all-year homes on the property, it was said, ranging in value from $5,000 to $85,000. About 90 per cent of these homes are occupied by Chicago business men who commute daily.

"The company has a building program calling for construction of approximately thirty homes this year," said Van Alstyne. "We contemplate building more than one hundred residences during 1940. Ottokar Cerny will design all of our homes.

Seven Under Construction.

"During the last year eleven homes were erected on the property for individuals. At the present time seven more are under construction."

The lots range in size from 60 by 208 feet, the smallest, to five acre home sites, it was said. The larger part of the property is less than two blocks from the lake, Van Alstyne said. Restrictions provide that no home may be built on a site of less than 10,000 square feet, and each home must contain at least 20,000 cubic feet.

Advertising Firm Buys Building on West Side

W. L. Stensgaard and Associates, advertising companies, yesterday bought the seven story building at 346 North Justine street, which it had been occupying for the last five years under lease. The price paid the Mallen Estate, Inc., owner, was $71,910 according to Hart & Whetston, only brokers in the deal. The building has 85,000 square feet of floor space. Officials of the advertising company abandoned plans to move headquarters to Buffalo, N. Y.

SEARS TO HAVE NEW STORE IN HIGHLAND PARK

Sears, Roebuck & Co. have leased a new store in Highland Park which will quadruple their present space. A building at 517 Central avenue is to be rebuilt according to Sears specifications, with a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of 175 feet. According to T. J. Carney, president, the new Sears store will carry a much larger line of merchandise than the present unit at 554 Central avenue.

Dovenmuehle, Inc., is making a $60,000 loan at 4 per cent to finance construction costs. H. and R. Anspach of Highland Park were brokers and will manage the property. Title is held by the First National Bank of Highland Park, under trust No. 122.

To harmonize with the architectural design of the new Sears store the remainder of the property extending west for half a block will be remodeled.

East End Park Hotel Is Leased for 10 Years

The ten story East End Park hotel, at the northwest corner of Hyde Park boulevard and East 53d street, has been leased for ten years by George Goldberg from the East End Park Hotel corporation. Officers of John T. Wheeler & Co., who represented both lessee and lessor, said the minimum rental guarantee for the term is $450,000. The building contains 135 apartments and four stores.

Pays $64,000 for 31 Flats at Kimball-Carmen Corner

The thirty-one apartment building at the northwest corner of Kimball and Carmen avenues was sold yesterday by the State Mutual Life Insurance company to K. Mann for a reported $64,000. John J. Kern, Inc., represented the buyer and A. Deemar represented the seller.

Buys North Side Studio Apartments and Offices

Swain Nelson Nursery to Be Subdivided.

Ground will be broken within a few days for the first five houses in a new residential development near Glenview. The 326 acre landscape nursery of Swain Nelson & Sons Co. at Glenview, established 83 years ago, is to be gradually made into a subdivision of homes costing from $9,000 to $25,000, according to announcement by Hubert S. and Gerald F. Nelson, vice presidents.

Site of new subdivision.

The new project, to be known as Swainwood, is to be marketed by the Swain Nelson Realty company, which is owned by the Swain Nelson & Sons Co. Lots will be in acre, half, and third acre sizes. Each home will be landscaped. The first section to be developed consists of about 14 acres, containing thirty-eight home sites.

Will Be Heated by Gas.

Mason Rapp of Rapp & Rapp has designed five different houses, to cost from $10,500 to $12,000, of five and six rooms. These will be built immediately, with the expectation that many more will be erected during the summer.

Swain Nelson.

Seymour G. Nelson.

With the exception of these five homes, all the remaining construction will be built to order. All homes will be heated by gas.

According to Seymour G. Nelson, 81 year old president of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., there are more than a million pieces of landscape material on the property.

The company, it was said, will transfer its nursery activities later to another site farther out in the country.

Roads to Be Winding.

Swainwood has been designed by Gerald F. Nelson, graduate landscape architect. Roads will be winding and hard surfaced, with many dead end drives. Near the center of the project and surrounded by Swain Nelson land on three sides is a small municipal park where the WPA has been working for two years or more on a swimming pool and a field house.

The Swain Nelson nurseries were started in 1856 by the late Swain Nelson, grandfather of Seymour and Hubert Nelson, vice presidents. The concern is said to be one of the largest of its kind in the country.

Featherweight Midsummer Hats Favor Large Brims That Curve Gracefully in Flattering Eyelines

Seasonal Headlines and Some Felts That Point to Fall

At right: Brilliant top color for any summer costume, this cartwheel of Milan straw. Brim curves down over the eyeline and accents the shallow shaped crown. Veiling over the brim.

Below: Scalloped, upsweeping Breton sailor in soft felt. Exaggerated edge is new, as is the very different high crown. Effective in black and several contrast colors.

At right: Important fashion trend for fall, this off-the-face beret with the accentuated high flare directly in front. It's another early autumn find in black and colored velvets, proving that the popularity of the beret never wanes. Tucks and soft shirrings are important.

By RHEA SEEGER

BLOODLESS battles may wage over the skeleton footgear, arguments wax fast and furious over the proper process of sun-tanning, but, come summer, the cartwheels spring up like a Gargantuan mushroom field. Every one who knows the cool, dark eyeline comfort of floppy midsummer hats hurries to get under one at the first high temperature reading. Rough straws, smooth linens, even chiffon felts rate popularity prizes among the shoppers because of the feather weight, the flattering lines, and the becoming colors.

Simple affairs this season stress the beauty of a graciously curved down brim. High shaped crowns not only create the necessary height but combine with the wide brim to assure that much-desired dash and snap. Crownless numbers are few, but contrasting crowns of thin silk chiffon net, linen net, coarse lace, ribbon, or fish net attached to the straw brims are this season's contribution as something delightfully air-conditioned.

Leghorns, just about as romantic creations as possible for summer dresses, come with sooty black velvet ribbon bows, bands, and streamers. Others are banded in forest or emerald green, while dozens can be found trimmed with a fetching band of cobweb black lace, with roses or flowers perched directly in front like a twin headlight.

Chalk white straw hats are tremendously important because they may be worn as an accent color with every dress in a summer wardrobe. These are plentiful this summer in cartwheels, in prim little old-fashioned straight sailors with back streamers, and in tinier affairs such as turbans and pillboxes. Rough and smooth straws, linens, starched coarse laces, double nets, and eyelet embroidery are other materials used for these undeniably flattering models.

Airy, transparent black cartwheels come in double nets, filmy organza, stretched chiffons, horsehair, and similar effects. Most of these are wired around the outside to give them a straight line, while others, softer in outline, keep their original shape because of several layers of the thin materials. All are superflattering, easy to wear, and comfortable in strong sunlight.

Paragraphs have been written in praise of the suntan or sunburnt straws. Unquestionably they are record-breakers for good looks, for their obliging color tint, that harmonizes as well with street clothes as with more dress-parade costumes, looks as good on brunettes as it does on blondes or coppertops.

From one outstanding collection of midsummer hats we've sketched the cartwheels and a few of the forthcoming felts indicative of the fall season.

Ogre Type of Mother-in-Law Disappearing

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Recently we had a closeup view of what we choose to call a real mother-in-law menace.

We are not, let it be understood, of the clan who believes that by the mere process of becoming a mother-in-law the older woman becomes a threat to peace and happiness. Indeed, we have seen and heard of and from too many young women who, in critical in-law situations, have only themselves to blame. Their code right from the start is wrong. They approach that older woman, the woman who molded the character of the young man presumably idolized by his bride, with resentment, a traditional resentment, perhaps, but nevertheless resentment. It is a deep-rooted prejudice, dating back, we understand, to a time long ago when a son's bride was but another addition to a family unit, not the personality in her own right that is her privilege today.

We explain the traditonal resentment not to extol it. On the contrary, it is offered to portray how emotionally backward is the young woman of today who enters marriage with this chip on her shoulder. She is a hangover from another day, not in keeping one whit with modern woman's advanced thought and behavior toward her own sex.

In all of our modern literature woman's attitude toward woman is extolled as an outstanding expression of her better development. Yet, in the attitude toward that other and older woman, the mother-in-law, too often the younger woman shows she has made no progress whatever in the sense of living and letting live.

Our observation is that, on the whole, the modern mother-in-law proves herself to be the more advanced in this special field of domestic relations. She practices the art of living and letting live. She often will refuse point blank to give suggestions when they are courted. Under no circumstances will she consider moving in with the young couple or permit them to move in with her. And what makes this modern older woman the mother-in-law success she may rightfully claim to be is that she has her own interests to pursue, even though she has to manufacture them in middle life just to escape any possible in-law complications.

Which brings us around to the mother-in-law menace introduced above. O, yes, disagreeable mothers-in-law do exist. Our foregoing remarks do not mean that the trouble-making woman is extinct. You cannot read divorce statistics or those of domestic courts without knowing full well that she does exist, and in as menacing a form as ever were existent.

Rarely do we give personal interviews, but on a recent occasion such tears and pressure were brought to bear that we relented and let the woman in to talk. She turned out to be the mother of the bride. After tears and hysteria were quelled this mother-in-law story came out, but every word uttered served not to influence us against the young husband, but to have deep sympathy for him. Such a tirade of abuse poured forth over this young man's treatment of "her girl." "She's all I have in the this world, all I live for, and it breaks my heart," the woman confided, "to see my beautiful girl not getting the appreciation due her, for she has education of a superior quality as well as looks."

The charges reported against the young man were ridiculous. He was stubborn, had to have his own way in everything. He never complimented the beautiful daughter. Belittled her, to hear the mother tell it. The big trouble, it turned out, was that son-in-law put his foot down emphatically on a house purchase step in which mother-in-law was to put down the initial payment, keep the property in her name, while the young pair would take over the rest of the payments. In time, when mother-in-law passed on, the deed would revert to the young people.

Whether telling the woman, as we did bluntly, that she was not only a bad mother-in-law but a bad mother, too, will have any effect, we doubt. She was wounded at the charge. "How can you say that when I live for my girl?" she demanded.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

Tired of your summer clothes? If you are, it means you need a few new frocks. Such additions to your collection need not mean great expenditure, because with the aid of these patterns and some inexpensive materials you can have three new dresses without your budget feeling the strain.

Left, a flattering shirtwaist frock with soft lines. The neckline may be worn buttoned up or open, rever fashion. The sleeves are short and squared, and shirring beneath the shoulders gives softness to the bodice, which has contrasting buttons down the front. The skirt is paneled and plaited, with a sleek line at the hips, width at the hem. Both silks and cottons, as well as linens, are perfect for this trim frock.

Center, a frock with full skirt and slim hipline. The heart shaped neckline is collarless and the sleeves are slightly puffed. Clever darts mold the waistline and around it is a contrasting belt of leather, fabric, or ribbon. Sheers of all types make up beautifully and other soft, drapable materials do, too.

Right, the too often overlooked surplice lines in a sheer and flattering summer frock. The long collar is of organdy edged with ruffling, more of the same treatment being used on the sleeves. The flared skirt is smooth at the hips. Horizontally patterned materials, as illustrated, are particularly excellent choices.

Style No. 3265 is designed for sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 4⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Style No. 2823 is designed for sizes 12, 14, and 16, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Style No. 3201 is designed for sizes 12, 14, and 16, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅞ yard of contrasting.

Style No. 2822 is designed for one headsize only. It requires 1 yard of 39 inch fabric.

Each pattern costs 10 cents.

Patterned Rug Attractive in a Large Room

"Clever Tricks in Decoration," a new booklet by Claire Winslow, explains methods of making a large room appear smaller, and a small, difficult-to-decorate one appear larger and more attractive. Price, 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

By Claire Winslow.

It's not too early to be thinking about that new rug you are going to purchase in the fall. It will represent a considerable investment and deserves your attention.

If you decide on a floor covering of definite design and color remember the following points:

1. Everything in the room must follow the tones of the rug. It will decide your color scheme. It cannot be ignored.

2. The design will make your room seem larger or smaller, depending on the size, character and color.

3. The border, also, can increase the apparent size of the room or diminish it.

The three points just mentioned refer to oriental rugs and to any floor coverings that have clear cut designs or patterns. Many women forget when purchasing them that from that day on the rug must be considered in any color scheme they may desire. Of course, this limits the number of tones that can be used in the room.

Plain toned rugs and carpets, on the other hand, are more flexible in the decorating scheme. Because they are all a single color such as wine, or eggplant, or gray, or blue, or beige, or green or brown they dictate only one color that must be included in the color scheme. This means that from year to year you can change your whole living room plan—the wall tones, the draperies and the upholsteries, keeping only one color in mind that must blend, the color of the rug.

This fact, of course, accounts for the great popularity of broadloom and of the self-tone and textured rugs and carpets. All-over foliage designs in two tones of the same color—tone on tone, as they're called—are having a great run of fashion.

And the last year has seen a definite revival of interest in patterned floor coverings. For Victorian bedrooms, for example, nothing is more appropriate than a floral rug or carpeting. And for both formal and informal French rooms nothing will ever take the place of patterned floor coverings.

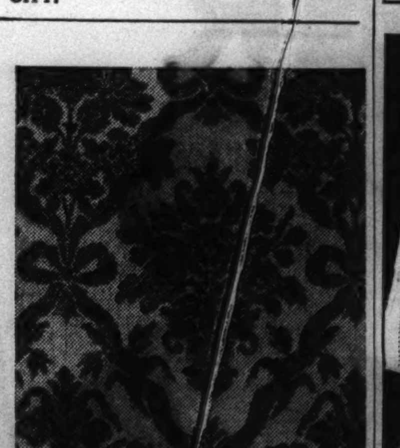
We have in mind a rug planned especially for a living room done in the Empire and Regency periods. It has a dark background with a tiny self-tone dot and the pattern is a beige laurel leaf done in a lattice effect across this ground. Such a rug is highly decorative and will relieve the monotony of plain walls and plain toned upholsteries, yet because it combines only a few colors is a flexible unit in the color scheme.

The pictures today are of floor coverings with rather definite designs. They are worked out in pleasing, soft colors, however, and are charming in rooms where large floor areas benefit from decorative interest of their own. They can be used in either living or dining rooms with furniture of the traditional type. They are products of a nationally known rug manufacturer and are available in stores throughout the country.



These two types of patterned floor coverings add decorative interest to a large room. They are intended for use with furniture of traditional lines.

English Women's Prison to Have No Bars or Walls

A prison for women, without walls and iron bars, is to be built at Stanwell, Middlesex, about 15 miles from London. Prisoners will spend most of their time in the open, learning dairy farming and gardening, and will live together in their cottages according to age and individualities.

Sally's Young Guests to See Rooney Picture

By Sally Joy Brown.

[Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Tribune Charities, Inc.]

Mmmm! Mmmm! Maybe you boys and girls think that I haven't some good news to broadcast today!

It's time to announce our next party, which will take place one week from Thursday, July 27. I was trying to decide on which of several good things to select, when I heard about a new movie that's coming to town, and my mind was made up in a hurry because I knew you'd never forgive me if I passed up this particular film.

United Artists theater is reopening, and they've selected a humdinger, to use one of your favorite expressions, to mark the occasion. It's a picture they know positively will be welcome, because everybody loves the particular series of which this is the latest. I know you children will like it, because it features a number of your favorites. By this time some of you may have guessed it, so I'd better not wait a minute longer to tell you that it's the latest of the famous Hardy series, "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever."

It's your old friend Mickey Rooney's newest film. I'm not going to tell you any more about it just now, because I know that, that's sufficient to make any boy or girl want to come to this party.

If you do, here's an opportunity to be one of a group of 100 boys and girls who will see the picture as my guests. Any child is eligible to try for an invitation, and all you have to do is prove to me that you'd have a really good time if I invited you. Write a letter, telling me why you'd like to be included in this group. You don't have to worry about your troubles with spelling or anything of that sort, I just want to know if you'd like to be my guest at this particular party.

You must also remember to tell me your full name. Don't sign your letter just "Jimmy" or "Patsy." Give me your address and tell me your age. Those three little items are important, and you can't possibly be a winner if you forget to include them, so keep your wits about you when you're writing. Each child must write for his own invitation. You can't have any one else do it for you, nor may you ask for invitations for any one else. Those who want to come must earn the invitations by writing the required letter.

Be sure to send your note in plenty of time to have it on my desk by next Thursday morning. If it's not here then, you're out of luck, because that's when the winners will be selected. Their names will be announced in next Sunday's TRIBUNE, so get right to work on that letter and mail it to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Transfer Pattern Adopts Roguish Kitten Family

By Nancy Cabot.

The kitten family is the latest member of the animal group to be drafted for duty on a hot iron transfer pattern of days-of-the-week towels. They also may enjoy their outdoor activities on a carriage quilt or as motifs of decoration on pockets of suits and dresses. The skater is a colorful figure of red and blue, and those enormous whiskers are embroidered in black. The head and tail may be the color of the orange angora breed of cat.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the six kittens, No. X-542, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Recent issues of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE have contained descriptions of all of the single postal cards issued for domestic use in the United States during the nineteenth century. The first postal card for international use, or at least for use between member nations of the Universal Postal Union, was brought out in 1879. This was printed in blue on buff cardboard and measured three inches high by five and one-eighth inches wide, those being the dimensions also of the domestic cards of the period. The design shows a liberty head facing left within an oval band which contains the inscription, "Postal — Card — Two — Cents." The words of this inscription are separated by numerals of value at the sides and by the monogram "US" at the top.

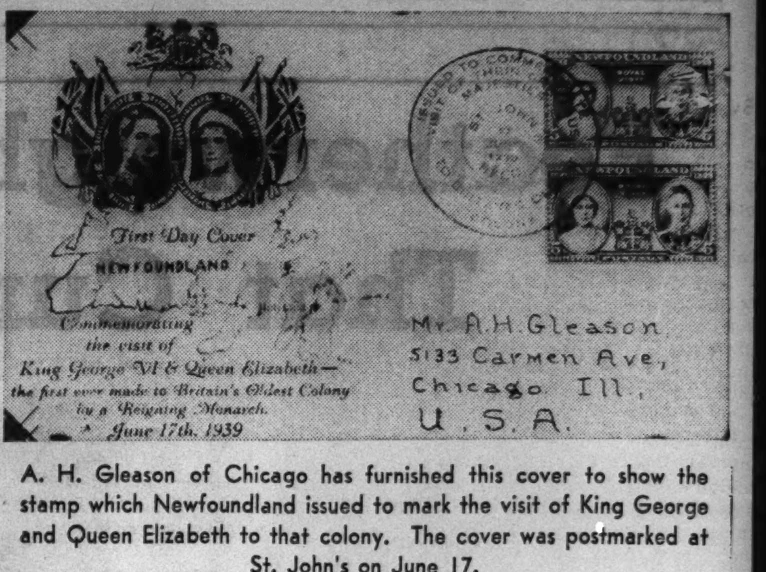
Since this card was designed for foreign use the principal inscriptions are given in both English and French, thus, "Universal Postal Union" ["Union Postale Universelle"], and "United States of America" ["Etats-Unis d'Amerique"]. The minor inscription, "Write only the address on this side," appears only in English, since it is a warning directed to the user only. The entire card is framed with an ornamental blue border.

In 1897 the size of this card was increased to 3½ by 5½ inches, and it is listed as having been printed in blue on cream cardboard. It is difficult to distinguish between the buff cardboard of 1879 and the cream of 1897, especially since both are susceptible to fading or darkening under different conditions.

In 1899 the international card underwent a more radical change or series of changes which consisted of a reduction in size to 3¼ by 5½ inches, the omission of the ornamental border, and finally of a change in color from blue to black. The cardboard of this issue is listed as buff.

The 2 cent black postal card remained in use for about thirteen years, and was replaced in 1911 by a red card bearing the portrait of Grant. This will be described in a future issue of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

D. D. Berolzheimer, an authority on the postal cards and stamped envelopes of the United States, states that the postal card with paid reply on the same face, which was illustrated in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for July 2, is well known as an essay and may be had in thirty or more color combinations in unused condition.



A. H. Gleason of Chicago has furnished this cover to show the stamp which Newfoundland issued to mark the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to that colony. The cover was postmarked at St. John's on June 17.

This essay was not accepted by the postoffice department and consequently should not have been permitted to pass through the mails without a postage due charge. Ordinarily it would be said that it was canceled by favor, but where two postmasters are involved it is perhaps nearer the truth to say that the first was too indifferent to determine whether or not the card was legitimate, and that the second decided that a card which was good at Quincy, Ill., ought to be equally good at Chillicothe, Mo., and thereupon passed it through his office.

The Collectors' club bulletin for June, 1939, states that a resolution proposing the name of James Smillie, dean of American stamp engravers, as an artist to be honored in the Prominent Americans stamp series, has been forwarded to the postoffice department and that Ramsey S. Black, third assistant postmaster general, has assured the club that their suggestion will be given careful attention. Mr. Smillie is recognized by the American Bank Note company as the premier miniature engraver of all time. Among many designs which he executed for stamps are the vignettes of certain bicolored stamps of the 1869 issue, notably the 15 cent and 24 cent values. The 24 cent value shows the painting, "Signing of the Declaration of Independence." The entire picture on the stamp occupies a space only one-fourth of an inch high by three-eighths of an inch wide, but Mr. Smillie so faithfully reproduced the original painting with over fifty persons depicted that five in the foreground may be easily recognized.

Newfoundland Stamp.

The visit of the British royal couple to Newfoundland was marked by a special 5 cent stamp in dark ultramarine, and all covers bearing this stamp which passed through the St. John's postoffice on June 17 received an impression of the large circular handstamp shown in the large illustration. Another special handstamp was provided at Holyrood postoffice, where the king and queen disembarked from the ocean liner. This contains the inscription "Royal Landing," and is shown through the kindness of Dick Sheppard of Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

Cachets and Covers.

William P. Gabel, 10600 Thrush avenue, Cleveland, O., announces cachets for the following events and anniversaries in August. Birthdays of Presidents Hoover and Harrison, Aug. 10 and 20; 125th anniversary of the burning of Washington, Aug. 24, and the national air races at Cleveland. Send covers stamped and addressed but unsealed, with 1 cent each for forwarding, to reach Mr. Gabel ten days before the event.

Beg Your Pardon.

In the list of 16 stamps which the Canal Zone will issue on Aug. 15, the 18 cent value was inadvertently omitted. Following the 14c and 15c, Gamboa, the sentence should read "18c and 20c, Pedro Miguel Locks," etc.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

There are a number of ways of changing the color of a wood floor when a desire for variety comes into the domestic picture. One of these ways is by the use of specially manufactured floor stains. First aid treatment should be given to a floor first by painting with a mixture of boiled linseed oil and turpentine to prevent any unevenness of color. The use of a wide brush is advised to insure a successful piece of work, and a point to keep in mind: make the first application of any stain a little too light, rather than too dark. It is simple to make a light tone darker, but not so easy to lighten a dark tone of stain.

Indoor climate control is made up of six comfort factors: two of these belong exclusively to summer comfort—cooling and dehumidification; two are exclusively winter factors—heating and humidification; and the other two, motion and cleanliness, are all year round benefits. Cleanliness of indoor air which is achieved by the use of various type filters, means a reduction of dust, pollen, soot and other impurities. This cleansing of indoor air is an important point in air conditioning accomplishments. There are units available which will give you any one of the six features of modern air conditioning—or all of them.

Slovak Stamps Withdrawn.

Here's a story about stamps that sounds more like a motion picture than actual true fact. Only a few weeks ago [you can count it in days] Slovakia issued a set of four new postage stamps commemorating 20 years of General Stefanik's death, a national hero of Czechoslovakia. Horror of Horrors—the stamps show General Stefanik in a French Army uniform [he played an active part in the World War]. A few hours after the stamps went on sale the entire issue was withdrawn, and according to the report of our correspondent, proceedings were instituted against the authors of the issue. How many of these stamps were sold in the few hours before they were withdrawn we don't know, but while our supply lasts we'll send this complete unused set of four new Slovak stamps showing General Stefanik in French uniform [face value is 40h, 60h, 1ks, and 2ks] to new approval applicants for only TEN CENTS. Not more than 1 set per person. We cannot guarantee against a price rise for more than 1 week. HARRISON STAMP COMPANY, Dept. D. Harrison, N. Y.

Play Up Your Type, Is the Tip of Una Merkel

Petal soft hands for housewives is the interesting subject of Antoinette Donnelly's booklet, "Handmade Hand Beauty." Get a copy today. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 5 cents. Postpaid, 7 cents.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

The moral of today's little beauty tale is that you just may be better off in the long run if you're not a high voltage beauty, and don't try too hard to be one.

Take Una Merkel, or let Una take herself and us for a little ride on her merry-go-round, so to speak. Una says:

"Not all of us rate a gold star on our dressing room door, figuratively speaking. But most of us can win rave notices in our own private orbit if we stick to our types, put on a good performance, and learn what is wise to play up and play down."

You'll notice that many of the featured players on the screen survive the more glittering stars who flash on and off. These less high voltage beauties keep a steady following at the box office because of a wearing quality, a naturalness and a charm which are as comfortable to watch year in and year out on the screen as they are in private life.

Probably we could cite no better example than Una Merkel herself, who is not beautiful according to screen standards, but who has survived many starred beauties on the screen to whom she has played supporting rôles. Her success is her naturalness, certain eccentric features which provoke appeal, a talent for comedy [the "good fairy's" superb gift] and a southern accent, all of which add up to make her a lasting screen favorite.

If you want some specific tips on playing up your type, here are some helpful hints from Miss Merkel which will put you on the right track.

Incidentally, we like the idea of "the supporting rôle" in beauty and what it conveys. It means dignifying and giving everything you have to a rôle without trying to emulate in any way the star performer. Thus caste, what is to prevent you from getting plaudits on your own? For your audience won't put you through any grilling comparison to an incredibly lovely being. You'll win purely on your own merits. And what sweeter compensation than that, my dears!

But on with Una and her suggestions. Although Hollywood is famous for making over types and adapting them to popular demands, Una has managed to keep her ingenue appeal intact.

If you incline toward the naïve, the fresh faced, the unworldly, wear dresses instead of suits, suggests the popular star, pastels instead of bold colors, curving instead of sharp, angular lines. Wear ruffles instead of stiff collars, negligees instead of mandarin housecoats, soft, blurred effects instead of severe ones.

"Avoid a 'painted face' look, lips like exclamation points, headed lashes, and false fringes on your lids. Pastel makeups will be more flattering than bolder colors. Casual, little girl hairdos in floating bobs are gamine effects and better for you than stylized coiffures. Choose hats that express the same feeling.

"But, perhaps, you have every reason to shove sophistication to the hilt—striking features, unusual face molding, definite coloring, and a dynamic personality. If so, wear bold colors and challenging black. You are the type who can come into the midst of starched cottons and floppy hats in a shiny black gown and a hat touched with insanity and look as svelte as a Russian spy. You can wear daring lines in your clothes, glittering fabrics and dramatic accessories.

"Give your conservative clothes a dramatic flair with accessories Choose fabulous gloves, bags, or a well intentioned chunk of jewelry.

"As for makeup, it can brighten a dim face like an artist's gold wash and, if used with practiced skill, can look unmade-up. Experiment with rouge to brighten your eyes as well as your skin. Use a camel's hair brush to revamp your mouth. It can be done well enough to escape even a gimlet eye. If you wear a dark powder for a healthier, more natural looking skin tone, see that it is alive and warm, not dirty."

Bed Jacket Is Simple to Knit, Pleasure to Wear

By Jean Macdonald.

Knitted bed jackets are items which must be included in every woman's wardrobe because one never knows when one will have a most important visitor during a temporary indisposition. It is so gratifying to have the right garb at the right time, and it takes no time at all to knit this dainty yet not too fragile bed jacket. It may be made of finest pink angora, and could even be worn as an evening jacket—it is of such delicate beauty.

For instructions in knitting the bed jacket, No. X-305, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

It's the wise woman who treats her feet with understanding of their importance to health and beauty. They demand respect, good care, and the kind of shoes that support them adequately in their role of foundation for the entire body structure.

In a recent article on foot health, a woman physician issued a little warning that seems to us quite badly needed right now. About shoes she says: "Fit the feet, not the eyes."

Shoes, like hats, are getting just too, too whimsical. They're rather fun to look at, and even fun to wear on occasions if you like to impress the populace, but a great many of them are not the kind of shoes that will preserve or maintain foot health.

If you want to keep youthful in appearance, in energy and yes, even in spirit, you must give your feet the intelligent consideration they deserve. They'll exact punishment from you eventually if you don't!

For your frivolous hours, when you dress, even to the toes, for the costumish effect rather than comfort, there isn't much harm in frivolous shoes. But for the day in and day out foot diet, do wear shoes that equalize your weight. High heels, for instance, throw all the weight on the fore part of the foot and, in the doing, throw the entire body out of alignment. The bodily structure is immediately disorganized, with heart, lungs, abdominal organs and nerves in improper position. As you can imagine, the cumulative effect of such abuse of the physical structure is not conducive to health, much less to beauty!

For the daily grind wear shoes that fit, and shoes that are flexible Wear a sensible heel and one large enough to keep you from rocking. If you have foot defects, let a specialist be your guide. Buy hosiery that is long enough, quite a bit longer than the longest toe. When the weight is distributed in walking, this slack will be taken up.

Keep your feet flexible by simple exercises. When you have leisure, wiggle your toes, turn them up and down, describe circles with the foot, swinging from the ankle. When you're dressing, walk around the room on your toes, or go up and down on them for a few minutes each day.

Don't file your toenails down too closely at the side. And remember that infections are very easy to pick up. Don't dig too much. If you have an ingrown nail, the doctor or chiropodist can fix it, and can teach you how to avoid such painful things in the future.

When your feet are very tired after a hard day, dip them into hot and cold water alternately, then massage them gently with a good foot cream and finish off with a refreshing lotion. When you bathe always spray your feet with cold water at the finish. It's good for circulation.

Remember, above all, that feet are not just additions to the bodily structure. They're its physical foundation, and must be treated with respect.

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in The Chicago Tribune.

It's a Help to Me, Says——

Mrs. Ray Croft, Chicago: I've found it is easy to melt my chocolate for desserts if I put a few squares of it on wax paper and slip it into a low oven for a few minutes. This saves effort of cleaning sticky pans and eliminates possible scorching.

Alice J. Jones, Milwaukee, Wis: I always use a little vinegar to moisten my stove polish. It gives the stove a brighter finish—in a shorter time.

Lettie T. G., Chicago: I keep freshly peeled apples, pears and peaches from turning black by dropping them into a pan of cold water into which I have added a few drops of lemon juice.

Linne Vilander, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago: To remove those pinkish stains from white leather purses—which sometimes come from handling—I use a soft cloth moistened with ordinary nail polish remover and rub gently with a circular movement. After trying many soaps and liquids I find that nail polish does the trick.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

The youngsters probably would say: "Perish the thought." But wise mothers entertain the thought willingly that school days really are not so far away, and clothes for the reluctant scholars must be made well ahead of time. We're offering a style today that should meet with mothers' approval, because it is easy to make and simple to keep in condition. Silks, cottons, and lightweight woolens all make up well in this simple pattern.

The neckline is high and round, and allows for variation in the type of collar adopted. The older the girl, the more she will like the version of the dress sketched at the right. Its collar is a plain shirtwaist one, with cuffs to match on the short puffed sleeves. There is shirring under the shoulder yoke, and there are buttons in typical shirtwaist style down the bodice front. A contrasting leather belt, preferably to match the buttons, is used, and the plaited skirt has plenty of flare.

For the pocket on the waist, may we suggest a monogram pattern? It assists you in putting your daughter's name on her frock. The number is E-11171, and is available for 10 cents extra.

There's another pattern offered for good measure. Also available for 10 cents extra, it helps you make a stuffed kangaroo toy. There's a baby kangaroo in the mother's pouch, as you will see if you look closely. The number of this design is E-11198.

Style No. 2620 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Types of Fruit Preserves Are Analyzed Today

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

What differentiates a jam and a butter, or marks a conserve a conserve and not a preserve or marmalade, sometimes is hard to define. In general, the types of fruit preserves may be distinguished thus:

1. A jam is a spreadable mixture of mashed cooked fruit and approximately three-fourths as much sugar. It may be as thick as jelly, but the best jams are soft and not of jelly consistency.

2. A butter has a finer texture than a jam. The fruit pulp usually is put through a sieve after mashing. A butter also is less sweet, the proportion being on the average ½ cup of sugar for each cup of pulp.

3. A marmalade usually is made entirely or partly of citrus fruits, has a tarter flavor than the other preserves, and consists of identifiable pieces of fruit cooked in sirup until clear. The sugar ratio is ⅔ cup to a cup of fruit and juice or water. The consistency may be jamlike or jelly-like.

4. A preserve is made from a single fruit, left whole or in large pieces, canned in a sirup which may be thick or thin, depending upon preference. The fruit is clear and retains its shape in the finished product.

5. A conserve consists of several fruits, chopped or cut into pieces, with raisins, nuts, or both, in a thick sirup which gives it a marmalade consistency and appearance.

RASPBERRY AND APRICOT JAM.

2 cups clean raspberries
2 cups fresh apricot pulp
3 cups sugar

Combine raspberries and apricots. [Peel apricots and cut the fruit in small pieces to measure.] Add sugar and mash while heating over a low burner. When the mixture is juicy and hot bring to a rapid boil and boil, stirring frequently until the mixture thickens, about fifteen or twenty minutes. Test by dropping small portions of the mixture onto a saucer. When it begins to hold shape, remove from heat. Avoid overcooking, remembering that the jam will thicken more upon cooling. Pour into clean, hot glasses and seal at once.

APPLE AND BLUEBERRY BUTTER.

2 cups sieved blueberries
2 cups sieved apple pulp
2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Crush blueberries, heat gently until juicy, about two minutes, then put through a sieve and measure. Wash and cut up apples. Cook until tender with as little water as possible. Put through a sieve. Add sugar and lemon juice. Cook quickly until the mixture is thick and clear. Pour into clean, hot glasses and seal.

Add cloves, cinnamon, and allspice for a spiced butter. Tie the whole spices, a teaspoonful or so of each, in a loose cheesecloth bag and cook them with the jam. Or add the spices in powdered form, in minute quantities, to satisfy your own taste for spiciness.

PEACH AND ORANGE MARMALADE.

3 oranges
Juice of ½ lemon
⅔ as much sugar as fruit pulp

Cut the peel from an orange and a half into fine pieces, cover with water, and boil until tender. Drain. Cut peaches and oranges [discard remaining rind] into thin slices and add lemon juice. Measure fruit and add two-thirds as much sugar. Heat gently to the boiling point, then boil rapidly, stirring frequently until thick and clear. Pour into clean hot jars and seal.

PLUM PRESERVES.

1 quart plums
1 cup water or fruit juice
1½ cups sugar

Use small plums. Wash and prick skins. Make a sirup by combining water and sugar and boiling for five minutes. Add fruit, cook very gently until tender. Cool rapidly. Let plums stand for an hour in the sirup to plump. Remove them to clean jars and reheat the sirup to boiling. Pour over the plums and seal.

PEACH AND CANTALOUPE CONSERVE.

2 cups diced peaches
2 cups diced cantaloupe.
3 cups sugar
Juice and grated rind of 2 lemons
¾ cup blanched, chopped English walnuts

Combine all ingredients except nuts and cook until thick and clear. Remove from heat, add nuts, and pour into clean hot jars or glasses.

American Naval Nurse Is Awarded a Haitian Medal

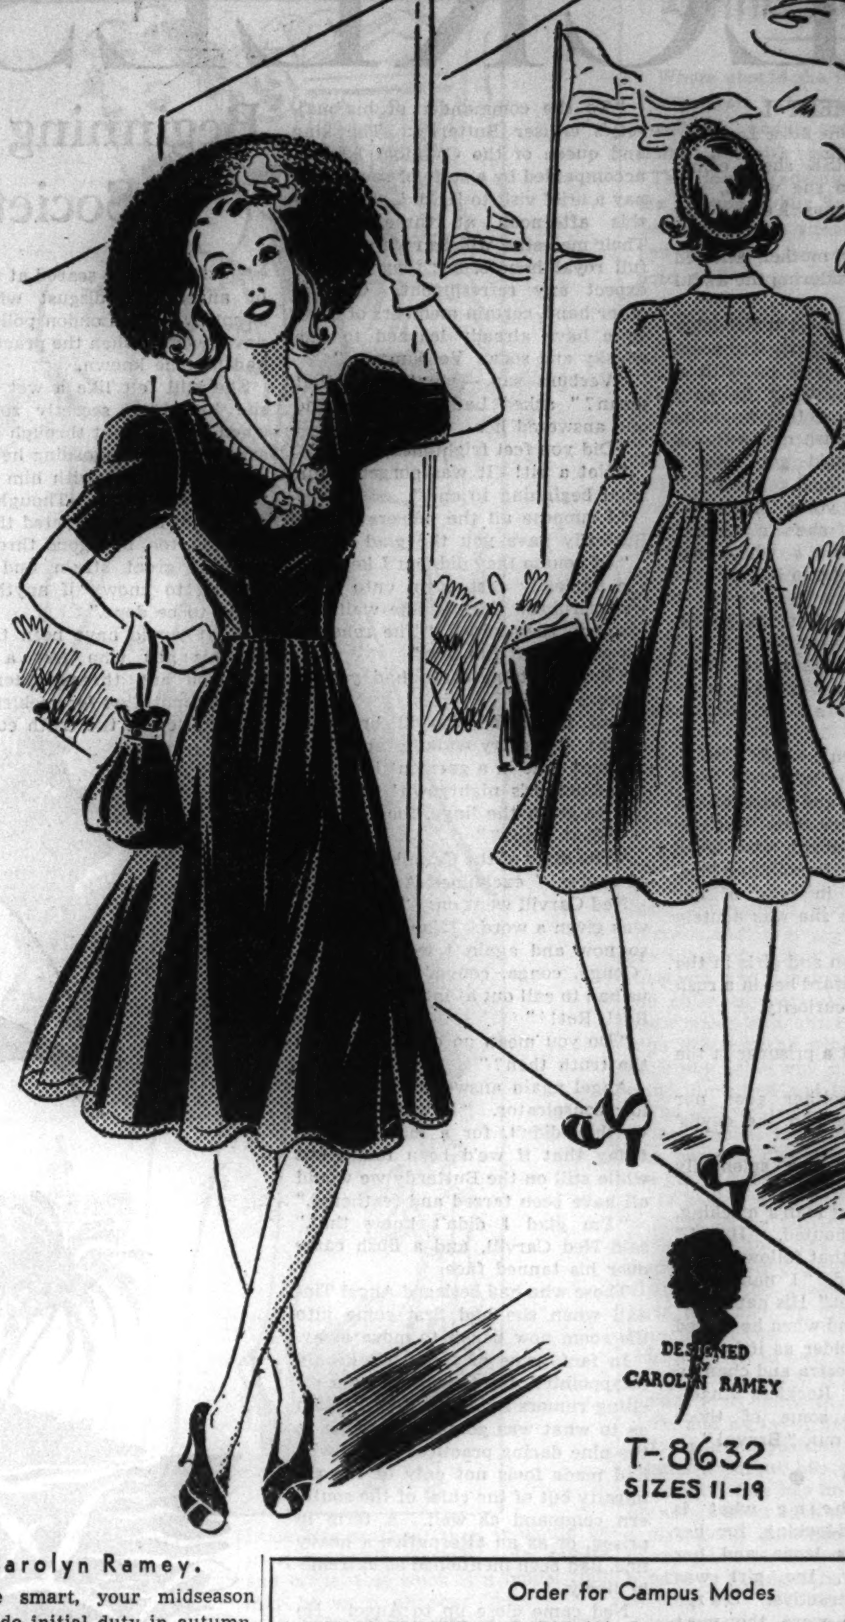
Sour Cream Dressing Is Delicious Over Tomatoes

This new sour cream salad dressing is delicious on tomato or lettuce salad: Mix ½ cup thick sour cream, ¼ teaspoon each of paprika and dry mustard, 2 tablespoons of vinegar, and 3 tablespoons of chili sauce or catsup. Beat with a fork, chill, and serve. This makes four portions.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed



By Carolyn Ramey.

If you're smart, your midseason frocks can do initial duty in autumn. Dark colors and medium weight fabrics are the formula for both comfort and smartness. One of the most popular materials for this two-birds-with-one-stone fashion recipe is silk jersey. Black is an outstanding favorite, frosted with white accents which may be varied with pastels at any time.

I'm going to be on duty for plenty of rushing parties, come September, so I decided that I had better get my fall wardrobe lined up for campus days. I made a jersey frock, which I've sketched. I think you'll like it as much as I do.

The V neckline has a white pique collar trimmed with self fabric plaiting. The flowers at the base of the neckline are made of the pique, too. [It's easy. Simply cut petals of the material and sew them together. Don't bother about hems. Mother Nature didn't put any on roses!]

The snug bodice gives way to a gathered skirt. Straight lines are almost unheard of in jersey dresses. The stuff calls for draping. This shirring is not too-too, however. It's flattering to the hipline.

There are other fabric ideas for this dress, if you choose. Crêpes that are soft make up well, and sheers are especially suitable.

Style No. T-8632 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Size 15 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅜ yard of contrasting.

RECKLESS ANGEL

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

Beginning the Story of an Impulsive Heroine Who Defies Society with Her Pranks Until She Is Involved in a Murder Case

INSTALMENT I.

(Copyright: 1939: Marie Belloc Lowndes.)

"OF COURSE she'll come; she said she would, and she always keeps her word."

"I wonder your mother allowed you to ask her, considering the awful hole she's in."

Lady Iris Nevill, the childish-looking girl who was giving her first cocktail party, drew herself up with a quaint but unmistakably haughty little gesture. "My mother would be the last person to wish me to throw over a friend who'd got into a scrape!" she exclaimed.

Then a boyish voice broke in: "She can't come if she's a prisoner in the Tower. That's where my father says she ought to be."

"What bosh!"

"It's lucky for her that her guardian is a cabinet minister."

"He won't do anything to help. He told some one last night that he hoped they would all be sent to prison."

"What an old brute——"

"Hush! Here she is."

She was hatless, and there was a brilliant smile on her face. But one man there, Ned Carvill, who loved her with a fierce, understanding love, told himself that in spite of her merry, defiant look she was acutely nervous.

All the young men and girls in the big room surged toward her in a rush of excitement and curiosity.

"Hello, Angel!"

"Then you're not a prisoner in the Tower?"

"You've been neither good nor careful, but you've had the devils' own luck!"

"I think you were splendidly plucky."

And then a young man's mocking, malicious voice shouted, "Hush!" And in the silence that followed that same voice intoned, "I name this child Reckless Angel." His name was Gerald Bartram, and when he waved his long cigaret holder as if he was conducting an orchestra and chanted "Reckless Angel! Reckless Angel! Reckless Angel!" some of those around him called out, "Bravo!"

WITHOUT being what is called good-looking, for her mouth was large and her features irregular, the girl was extraordinarily attractive. Dark-fringed gray eyes were the most arresting feature of her now dead-white face, and the masses of fair hair she wore like an aureole seemed to set her apart from her shingled friends.

"Do tell me what it's all about, Mr. Byrne. What's her name, and what has she done?"

It was an American girl who asked the question, and the man who had brought her to this party answered in a low tone: "Her name is Angela Tindall, but she's always called Angel. She's a little over twenty, and she has lived for almost a year with another girl in a converted coach house in a byway of Mayfair called Queen's Close."

"Then she's a regular bohemian?"

"I wouldn't say that, for she's a great-niece of old Lady Julia Ling, the one great Victorian hostess left in London. All the same that nickname Reckless Angel' will stick—for she's always doing wild, foolish things. She coaxed an army airman to fly her over London at night, and she crossed the channel in a rowboat last year, and held the tiller while two men rowed."

"What has she done now?"

"She was the only girl concerned in an affair planned by an eccentric chap called Angus Tarr who is famous for his practical jokes. This time he chose for his victim nothing less than the British navy."

"The British navy?" echoed his companion incredulously.

"Yes, and Angel coaxed him to let her in on it. Listen! She's just going to tell us about it."

But instead of telling her excited audience "all about it" Reckless Angel said laughingly, "I can't tell you a thing——"

"You'd better tell us what really happened, for all sorts of stories are flying about."

Now, she knew that to be true, and suddenly she exclaimed, "You tell them about it, Ned——"

"Don't be a fool! Or if you must be, why drag Ned Carvill into it?" was hissed into her ear.

Like a flash she turned around. Who among the young men close to her had uttered that rude rebuke? There was nothing to show. She felt angry, and bewildered, too.

Meanwhile "D'you mean you were in it, too, Ned?" cried out a shrill voice. The whole crowd focused its gaze on the dark, good-looking young man who had stood still and apart while all the others were swaying around Angel Tindall, although from the moment she had come into the room his eyes had been fixed on her.

"Yes, I was in it, too," he said coolly.

"I suppose that's why you've been hiding yourself the last two days?"

Ned Carvill glanced at the effeminate-looking youth who had made that suggestion. "No doubt that's what you would have done, but as a matter of fact I haven't been hiding myself." So bitter, so scornful was the intonation that the youth crumpled up. "I beg your pardon," he said awkwardly.

"I'll accept your apology this time."

"What's all this fuss about a telegram?" asked a young married woman inquisitively. "We all tried to get it out of my brother, who is working at the admiralty, but he wouldn't say a word."

Carvill smiled. "Would you like to know exactly what was in the telegram?"

"Wouldn't I just?"

He took a crumpled piece of paper from one of his pockets and in a pompous, official kind of tone read out:

"To the commander of his majesty's cruiser Butterfly: The king and queen of the Cannibal Islands, accompanied by a suite of seven, will pay a brief visit to H. M. C. Butterfly this afternoon at three o'clock. Their majesties will be received with full royal honors, but they will not expect any refreshment. On the other hand, certain members of their suite have already learned to like whisky and soda. Verbum sap."

"Verbum sap.—what does that mean?" asked Lady Iris. But no one answered her.

"Did you feel frightened, Angel?"

"Not a bit! It was gorgeous fun from beginning to end."

"I suppose all the officers on the Butterfly gave you the glad eye?"

"Of course they did, but I kept my eye modestly cast down onto their well scrubbed deck." She waited a moment, then added, "The rehearsals were great fun, too."

"But what on earth had you to rehearse?"

And then Ned Carvill broke in again: "You try walking about for the first time in a garment like your grandmother's nightgown! And we had to learn the lingo, too."

"What lingo?"

"The lingo of the Cannibal Islands, of course!" exclaimed Angel gayly.

Ned Carvill went on: "Each of us was given a word. Mine was Conga, so now and again I would mutter, Conga, conga, conga.' Another of us had to call out at intervals: 'Rot! Rot! Rot!'"

"Do you mean no one tumbled to the truth then?"

Angel again answered for her fellow conspirator. "It was lucky for us they didn't, for a man told me today that if we'd been found out while still on the Butterfly we would all have been tarred and feathered."

"I'm glad I didn't know that," said Ned Carvill, and a flush came over his tanned face.

Those who had besieged Angel Tindall when she had first come into the room now began to move away.

In fact, some of them felt keenly disappointed, for there had been exciting rumors flying all over London as to what was going to be done to the nine daring practical jokers who had made fools not only of the admiralty but of the chief of the southern command as well. A term in prison, or as an alternative a heavy fine, had been mentioned as extremely likely.

Ned came close up to Angel. He took her elbow and moved aside with her. "If there was any real risk of our being tarred and feathered it was beastly of Angus Tarr to let you run such a risk," he said in a tone of suppressed anger.

"It wasn't his fault, Ned, truly it wasn't. I begged and implored him to let me be in it! Even at the last minute, when we were stepping out of the two cars, he said, 'Do let me pretend my dear little queen feels ill and can't go on to the cruiser.' As if I'd have missed such a series of thrills."

He looked around to see if any one was listening to what they were saying, but by now all the men and girls had broken up into groups or were enjoying the cocktails and soft drinks out on a buffet at the farther end of the room.

"Did any one come to see you yesterday?"

"Yes, a man came from the admiralty."

"Did he try to frighten you——"

"If he meant to frighten me he failed," she said shortly. "But it was he who told me we would have been tarred and feathered if the commander of the Butterfly had guessed the truth."

"Did the admiralty man mention me?"

"Of course not," and she looked surprised at the question.

"D'you think they're going to do anything about it?" He couldn't keep the sharp anxiety he felt out of his voice, and again Angel felt surprised.

"I'm sure they're not, Ned, but I don't mind telling you that I was afraid they would."

In a very low voice she added: 'You know how awfully angry Aunt Julia is with me! But even with her blood must be thicker than water. for today, just before I left home, she sent a note around by her snuffy maid to say the government had made up its mind 'to let the disgusting matter drop'—as she put it."

Ned Carvill felt much more than relieved, though his face remained impassive. He had gone through two days of acute suspense, made all the worse because he had to pretend that he faced the possible result of the crazy thing he and his friends had done with the same light-heartedness as seemed to do the other practical jokers concerned.

He and Angel had been so absorbed in what each was saying to the other that they had not seen a man named George Adair saunter up to them.

Addressing Carvill, he observed: "Have you forgotten that I've promised to introduce you to that Argentine chap this evening? I expect he's waiting for us now, so we ought to be off." Then he looked at the girl. "Look here, Reckless Angel, you really mustn't lead Ned astray again! You forget he's got to earn his living. If that idiotic affair had gone into the French papers he might have lost his job."

Angel Tindall said nothing to that. She didn't like George Adair, and she resented his use of her nickname. It seemed strange to her that Carvill and Adair were friends.

She left them and joined her hostess. Lady Iris' eyes were shining. "You're a darling to have come to my party! Every one was longing to see you. Why, you're a regular heroine, Angel. I should have died of fright."

Angel felt touched by this artless flattery. All the same she told herself that what she had dared to do had been a plucky thing, whatever stuffy old people might say. Still even she had felt scared at the wave of anger and disgust which had swept over the London political and naval worlds when the practical joke had become known.

She still felt like a wet rag, and she had been secretly sorry that when Ned had put through his usual call to her that morning he had persuaded her to go with him to a picture this evening. Though torture would not have extracted the admission she, too, had gone through two days of great strain and anxiety waiting to know "if anything was going to be done."

What would have been the effect on this girl who was a quarter ashamed and three-quarters proud of her reputation for reckless daring had she learnt the truth concerning her friend, George Adair? Had it done nothing else it must have brought her up against certain hard realities of life of which she was as yet ignorant, for though she would have angrily denied it, Angel Tindall really did know practically nothing of the ugly, seamy side of life.

Carvill and Adair were half-brothers, a fact utterly unsuspected by any of those who thought themselves their intimates. And during the last twelve months they had proved themselves the most brilliantly successful jewel thieves London had had for years. Each of their exploits, thanks to Adair's astute intelligence and cool, calculating mind, while causing a measure of perplexity to Scotland Yard, had always up to now been attributed to one of the international gangs which operate all over Europe and after long or short innings are invariably caught at last.

IN ONE respect the brothers were singularly fortunate. Carvill, through his now dead father, had Dutch relations, and among them was a jeweler highly respected in the international precious stone trade. This Dutchman accepted without inconvenient questions whatever was brought to him at intervals by the young man he called his English cousin, and he often gave Ned Carvill close on the wholesale value of the booty. For really fine gems the Dutchman was willing to pay fancy prices, for he was European buyer for an Indian rajah who was gradually investing the whole of his private fortune in flawless jewels.

As the two passed through the oak-paneled hall a long, low racing car drew up before the front door, and a tall man who, if he could still be called young, yet looked older than any of the young men Lady Iris Nevill had asked to her cocktail party, hurried across to the room where that party was now drawing to its close.

The newcomer's name was Lord Bridlington. He was immensely rich, and Ned Carvill had lately become aware that this peer and Angel Tindall had formed one of the sudden friendships which were common in her set. But, though a bachelor and, in addition to being a great parti, attractive to women, he was known to be in the firm clutches of a certain Mrs. Woolryche, a society woman a good deal his senior, and a separated wife with no chance of ever getting a divorce. She had annexed him when he was a boy of nineteen, and it was believed with cynical amusement that he had remained faithful to her ever since.

All the same, could a look from Ned Carvill's fierce, smoldering eyes have killed, Lord Bridlington would have dropped dead.

A few seconds later the brothers were standing in the small paved square of which Park House forms one side. Ned, like many a daredevil, had in him a romantic streak, and he still felt thrilled at having been received as a guest in one of the few private London palaces which have survived the war. That Angel Tindall belonged by birth to the British aristocracy, a thing by which she set no store at all, meant a great deal to him.

Adair was very different and had a far more cynical nature. In that care-free and on the whole secure society of young socialites in which they now both moved Ned was far better liked than George, and those among them who had time to spare a thought for any one but themselves wondered why they so often hunted in couples.

Each of them had slipped separately, or so it had seemed at the time to those about them, into a London set which impinged on many worlds, including those of the stage, art, and big business. As they both appeared to have money, Adair being "something in the city," while Carvill was undoubtedly the representative of Trianon, a French automobile firm which specialized in exceptionally finely built cars, they had been at once accepted at their own valuation.

They did not share an apartment, as some man friends did, but they lived in adjacent streets off Piccadilly, and Ned had just been elected to a good club, of which he often shared the amenities with George.

His half-brother was the only human being Adair had ever cared for. He had a cold, calculating, ruthless nature, and since the age of eighteen he had lived by his wits, moving from one European capital to another.

But he was under no illusions as to the risks he ran, and there had been a time when he had intended that Ned should remain a good boy and follow the narrow path. With that end in view he had obtained for him a post in a business house in Paris. But Ned had come to hate the dull, respectable life this entailed, and so the two had joined up at last together in London. There the younger man had soon shown himself to be an apt pupil and a well nigh perfect accomplice.

The two had not met for a couple of days, as George had been away, spying out the land in the neighborhood of Longlands Manor, the famous country house where they knew they would soon form part of a coming-of-age party.

It was a fine late May evening, the sky above the stone-paved little square was full of stars, and neither of them spoke for awhile. George sensed that the sight of Lord Bridlington had violently disturbed his younger brother, and he felt sorry.

As a nearby church chimed out a quarter to eight Ned said in a cross, aggressive tone: "Any time would have done for your Argentine. You needn't have dragged me away yet——"

"I'll break it to you that my Argentine, as you call him, won't see us till tomorrow evening. But I've two or three important things to say to you, dear boy, and I want us to have a bite together in some quiet place. I've had nothing to eat since morning."

"I can't come out with you tonight," said Ned sullenly. "Some of us are going to a film."

"'Some of us' boils down to Angel Tindall, I suppose? Young Bartram is a clever chap to have invented that nickname. 'Reckless Angel' is exactly right."

He felt that Ned deserved a scolding, so he went on, "I'd give a good deal to know what you see in that wild girl."

"A clever, fearless girl like Angel could be of great use in our line of country. Without knowing it she has helped us quite a bit already."

George kept hidden the horror which had overwhelmed him on hearing that remark. He said quickly, "You mean over the Grosvenor square deal?"

"Don't pretend you don't know. By the way——" There came a change in Carvill's voice.

"Yes, Ned?"

"You did send that ring back, didn't you?"

"Yes, and the greater fool I! Scotland Yard doesn't believe in the sentimental bloke."

Ned Carvill said nothing to that, but he went on eagerly: "You owe your Longlands visit to Angel. She told Lady Crofton you were a splendid dancer and didn't mind who you took on in the way of a girl."

"That's far from true." Then the elder brother said firmly: "I want to be absolutely clear about Angel Tindall. Have you said or even hinted anything to her?"

"Do you mean about us?" Without waiting for an answer Ned exclaimed, "Of course I haven't——" and then he added the little word which can mean so much and so little—the little word "yet."

A tremor ran through George Adair. "Plenty of girls have loved you, and you haven't hung back, have you?"

"That's different. That wasn't love. I'd die for Angel Tindall any day."

George was stirred in spite of himself.

"Tell me what you know about her."

"Her friend, Lucy Morton, told me all about her—so it's true."

"Hum!"

Ned said angrily: "You never have a good word to say for anybody. Lucy Morton adores Angel."

"I wonder you don't adore Lucy. She is a good-looker and no mistake. But now go ahead and tell me all about Reckless Angel."

Ned Carvill longed to convince his brother that Angel Tindall would make a perfect third to what they sometimes half in joke called their syndicate. He ardently wished to marry Angel, and he actually thought he had a good chance of doing so. But it would be out of the question unless he could persuade her that the way he and George earned their living was a kind of Robin Hood affair.

Eagerly he began his story: "Her father and mother parted when she was a baby, and she was tossed about from one of her grand relations to another, a miserable little cuckoo in all sorts of well feathered nests."

"Not a promising beginning," interpolated George dryly.

"When she was about seventeen that hateful old woman, Lady Julia Ling, gave her a look-over and suggested she should go as a kind of glorified nursery governess to some little German princess. She stood it for a year, and then she escaped and got back to England. Then Angel and Lucy Morton joined up, and as she has only got about three pounds a week, she's always awfully hard up. Only this morning she told me she'd do anything to get some money."

"Being hard up is apt to broaden the mind," said the other grimly. "All the same, I don't trust women. They're so apt to blab."

"Not any more than men," said Ned defensively.

George Adair shrugged his shoulders. He had spent all his grown-up life abroad and had little mannerisms which were much more foreign than English.

"Well, so long, old chap! I suppose you're in a hurry to join your film party. I hope she'll wait for you."

"I'm sure she will." But now it was Ned who lingered. He was honestly fond of George, and felt he was being selfish, so, "Did you have a useful time at Longlands?" he asked.

"I stayed at the village pub, and by great good luck managed to get the lie of the house, though it's a huge place, and if Mrs. Woolryche is in the party, and I believe she will be, we shall pull off something bigger than ever before. Your Dutchman specially mentioned her emeralds, didn't he?"

"He'll give twenty thousand pounds, or, as he put it, a hundred thousand dollars, for them."

"Good man!" exclaimed Adair.

"Don't forget that we shall both owe our week-end at Longlands to Angel."

"Of course, I know that your Reckless Angel can be very useful to us without knowing she's useful. She's proved that already. But she might be a serious complication now and again, even if she took to the job like a duck to water."

The fact that his young brother had fallen madly in love with this English society girl made him feel seriously uneasy. All the same he said kindly: "Run away now and have a good time, my dear boy. I'll try and like your girl better."

AND then from Ned Carvill's lips there suddenly issued a stream of fierce and awful oaths. He had just seen Lord Bridlington and Angel Tindall come out of Park House and hurry along side by side, indeed very close together, to the long, dark car, which its owner always drove himself.

The car slithered across the stone-paved square, crossed a wide roadway, and turned into Hyde park.

The man by whose side she was now sitting had insisted on Angel slipping on a light coat of his own. It had been a glorious day, yet now it was a little chilly.

Neither of them had spoken yet. Indeed, Angel was afraid to speak, afraid of betraying while yet exulting in the bliss that flooded her whole being.

She had known from a paragraph in a gossip column that Brid, as he had asked her to call him, had come back to England this morning from a three weeks' trip by air to North Africa. All today she had thought of him and longed for him, wondering, with an ache at her heart, when they would have a chance to meet.

Like all human beings blessed or cursed with great possessions—and a conscience—Lord Bridlington always had a good deal to do after coming back to London, and he also had another woman, as well as his mother, Angel knew he would consider it his duty to see.

She had had a vague hope that he might be at the cocktail party. But when Gerald Bartram had exclaimed in mock-solemn tones, "I name this child Reckless Angel," she could have cried with relief that Brid had not been there to hear him.

And then, when he had suddenly appeared through the door, the girl had almost given a cry of joy. Ten minutes later he would have found her gone, for Ned Carvill, relying on her half promise, would have taken her away to see a new film and on to supper. But God had been kind to her and had allowed her friend to come in time.

Lord Bridlington had not come straight across to where she stood talking to her chum and housemate, beautiful Lucy Morton, who was a hard-working mannequin at a fashionable dressmaker's. Such was not, at any rate with this special girl, that gentleman's technique.

He had talked a while to his little cousin, Lady Iris, and then he had made his way with leisurely steps up to where Angel Tindall was standing a little apart from the few girls who were still there.

"Are you free this evening? Can you come out for a spin in my new French car?" His lips had scarcely moved, and she had nodded her assent.

And now here they were side by side, and to be with him "were happiness enow."

They had been friends now for about four months, but he had never made love to her, and at first she had felt piqued and surprised that the only man she had ever met who roused in her a certain kind of emotion did not appear drawn to her as other men almost always were. But very soon their unusual relationship had acquired a special and even a delicious flavor for them both.

He was also the only human being of whom she had ever felt afraid. Had he been in England at the time she would not even have thought of begging and imploring Angus Tarr to let her play a part in his now famous—some would have called it his infamous—practical joke.

Lord Bridlington, clever though he had been up to now in concealing it from her, was well aware that he had fallen fathoms deep in love with a girl who was everything, if reports spoke truly, of which he disapproved. His ideal of young womanhood had always been the gentle, rather shy, while yet affectionate type he knew still existed, though for reasons well known to himself he had always avoided the kind of happy, simple family which even now includes, especially in the world to which he belonged, that particular sort of daughter and sister.

Not only had Bridlington, a shrewd man of the world, fallen in love with Angel at first sight, but as the time went on he loved her more and more and in a deeper and more tender way. Yet he knew that friends they must remain, and nothing more than friends, because, according to his code of honor, he owed himself as lover to the woman whom he believed had given up her life to him for sixteen years.

But so-called platonic friendship can be delicious between a man and a maid, and he had let himself drift. Then there had come a day when he had come to know that they were "being talked about," or so he believed, in the set where he had perforce to seek her out. This was the reason he had gone on that air trip with a party of man friends. They were to have been away five weeks, but, pleading urgent private affairs, he had flown home a little after half way through the time.

All today he had tried to find out where the girl he had run away from was to be found. But he had failed, and it was his mother, who spent her life in hearing and repeating the talk of the town, who had told him, without her being aware of it, where Angel was likely to be.

He had heard, only half listening the while, the story of the Angus Tarr affair, and then had fallen on ears the words: "There was actually a girl mixed up in the disgusting business. Though she's a great-niece of that old witch, Lady Julia Ling, she took the part of the sham queen! Her name is Angela Tindall, and I hear she's the bosom friend of silly little Iris Nevill. That child is actually giving a cocktail party at Park House this afternoon. O, Brid, what is society coming to? Sometimes I feel thankful you've never married!"

"Each of us was given a word. Mine was conga. So now and again I would mutter, 'Conga, conga, conga.'"

Child's Fears Cause Parent Some Anxiety

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:" [begins today's letter] "I am the mother of two little girls, one nearly 8 and the other 4½.

"I have always delighted in their company, and have never felt that they were problem children. Of course, as with all children, there is a time when they develop an annoying habit or two, but I have found that in a short time they outgrow these habits.

"Now, however, I'm up against something that does not seem to be growing better as time goes on. That is the subject of fear. I, myself, have never frightened my children with stories that are fearsome, nor have they heard from us such words as bogeyman or ghost; yet these are the things they are so frightened of. I think the older daughter conveys her fears to her little sister.

"They are afraid to remain in the house alone for even five minutes. I have never in my life locked them in and gone out so that one might think they awakened and were frightened. My little one has grown so bad lately that she will not remain outdoors without me, even though she has all her friends and many of the women from the house watching her. In fact, lately she will not even stay in a room alone.

"She is not afraid of darkness particularly; she is just afraid. At night I put her to bed in a dark room and she goes right to sleep.

"Although the older child will not remain in the house, of course I have no difficulty with her outdoors, but she will not visit any other child's home."

It is discouraging when you have done nothing to create fear in your children to notice such marked signs of it as this mother describes. Too many of us who are parents have similar experiences, the difference being in the degree of fear, or in the way the fear is shown.

What it all sums up to is this: that we cannot draw a magic circle about our children, keeping fear without. More in these days than in times gone by does the outside world impinge upon our children's consciousness. Directly and indirectly into our homes come the fear inspiring realities, and unrealities, of life: by radio and the printed page, the child next door, the neighbor across the street, the talk on the school playground; even the moving picture we consider not suitable for our own young child is relayed to him in substance by his playmates. We may ban what is terrifying, but some of its gets through just the same.

So, we find that to most children during their early years come fears that are not of our making.

The problem that confronts us then, the fear being there, is just how much we can do about our child's fearfulness and what shall that be.

One thing we can be almost assured of and that is that our child will outgrow his or her fears. This is not saying that having outgrown the fear he possesses now he will never have another. Fear inspiring situations arise all through life. But the young child in normal health who feels a deep security in the love of his parents will grow out of his early fears.

I say this so definitly because parents are apt to think fearfulness is not normal and that, because a child may fear the dark or perhaps think often of burglars since his little friend's house was entered, he will be the prey of fears all through his life. This is not so.

But of course, having said that children normally have fears and normally outgrow them, we have not said enough. So, taking for granted that we've been wise in inspiring no fear ourselves, the next thing to consider is what to do when there are signs of fear.

Since fear of the dark is one we've talked about quite recently, let us go on to talk of other fears and take today's letter as an example.

First, let me emphasize this: that ridicule is not the way to banish fear. To say "how silly you are—there's nothing to be afraid of," does not solve a real fear problem. To shame a child—"a great big girl like you. afraid!" does not, either. Nor does forcing a child to do the feared thing. And now let us go on.

One of the most devastating things that can happen to a fear [since they thrive under cover] is to take it out of its dark lair and hang it on the line, out in the sunshine and sweet fresh air of clear words and the reassuring eyes of an understanding mother or father. More often than not it will melt away. But whether it does or not, just looking it in the face will help.

So, the writer of today's letter would do well to ever so gently but ever so persistently get from her older daughter some knowledge of the cause of her fearfulness. It may be a definite thing the child has seen, heard, or experienced; it may be intangible, which will make the process take a little longer.

It is possible that a visit to the teacher may be required if mother is not successful; or it may need the observing of her child's companions. Having learned what the fear is, she must then combat it by explanations or by removing whatever repeated stimulus there may be for this fear; by building up a substitute interest or activity; or by any other device that occurs to her.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

In a game so complex as contract bridge there are many thousands of bidding situations. Most of these can be classified according to type and grouped under one general principle or another. Some require their own independent treatment. As each difficult problem arises in the course of the bidding a player will discover that despite his knowledge of bidding principles he does not quite know what action to take.

The following situations, specifically, cause much trouble:

The Forcing Pass. In one of the rarest of the beautiful bidding situations, a pass is used as a forcing bid.

This occurs when one partnership has by a series of strength showing bids definitly established the fact that it holds the balance of power. At some point later in the bidding an opponent makes an obvious sacrifice bid—designed to accept a penalty of less value than the impeding game or slam. A pass by the next player must be construed as forcing. He does not know whether the best course is to double for penalties or to bid again, and he wishes to leave the decision to his partner, who may be in a better position to judge. For example:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 clubs	3 diam.
3 spades	4 diam.	4 no trp.	5 diam.
6 clubs	6 diam.	Pass!

North holds:

♠A 6 ♥A K ♦7 3 2 ♣K Q J 8 4 3

North knows the grand slam can be made in clubs if South holds the club ace and a void in diamonds, and that otherwise it will be necessary to double six diamonds and collect whatever penalty is available. When the bidding comes around to South he must either bid six spades or seven clubs or double, but he must not pass.

In rare cases the fact that there is a part score turns a pass into a forcing bid.

In the following situation, East and West have a part score of 40 and North-South have a part score of 60.

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 spade
Pass	1 no trump	2 clubs	Pass!

Obviously, East would not have opened the bidding fourth hand if he intended to let his opponents play at a two club contract and get a game if they made it. West's no trump takeout may have been a trap bid and East passes to allow West to make a penalty double of two clubs if he wishes to do so. If West cannot double, he must bid something.

Genuine Bids in the Opponents' Suit. A bid in a suit the opponents have already bid is usually a conventional forcing bid rather than a genuine suit bid. But there are rare cases in which a player wishes to play the hand in a suit which has already been bid against him. A bid in the opponents' suit expresses a desire to play in that suit when the player [or his partner] has:

[a] Previously made a takeout or penalty double of the opponents' suit.

[b] Passed at a previous opportunity, provided his partner has also passed. For example:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Double	Pass	1 spade
Pass	2 hearts

West has a genuine strong heart suit and is willing to play the hand there.

South	West	North	East
1 heart	1 spade	Double	2 diamonds
Pass	Pass	2 spades or
1 heart	1 spade	Double	2 diamonds
2 spades

In either of these cases the two spade bid shows a genuine spade suit. North's suit must be very long and strong in the first instance; South's suit in the second example is probably only a fair four card suit, for North's penalty double has implied that he holds strength and probably length in spades.

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	Pass
Pass	2 spades

In this example were it West's purpose to make a forcing bid, he could have bid two spades over one spade immediately. Evidently, he first made a trap pass of one spade, having a strong spade suit and hoping for a chance to make a penalty double of a spade contract later. Since this opportunity was not offered, he now wishes to play the hand in spades himself.

The typical case is one in which a player can pass an opposing slam contract and take a chance at beating it; or make a sacrifice bid and accept a small penalty.

South	West	North	East
1 heart	1 spade	3 hearts	3 spades
4 clubs	4 spades	4 no trp.	5 spades
7 hearts

West holds ♠K 10 8 7 6 4 3 2 ♥Q 8 6 ♦none ♣8 2. West's queen of hearts has a good chance to win a trick and defeat the grand slam. On the other hand, the opponents' vulnerable grand slam gives them 2,410 points if they make it. West, not vulnerable, can surely avoid this by bidding seven spades, at which contract he is unlikely to be defeated more than 300 points. He bids seven spades.

A Sacrifice Double. In match point duplicate games, where every 10 points count, a player can often gain by doubling a contract which he knows his opponents will redouble and make with an overtrick!

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	1 heart	Pass
3 diamonds	Pass	5 diamonds

East holds ♠9 7 6 3 ♥10 4 ♦8 6 2 ♣J 10 8 5. West's consistent passing, plus the strong bidding of North and South, convince him not only that his opponents can make a slam, but that South will surely bid six diamonds at his next opportunity to bid. Therefore East doubles five diamonds.

South is far more likely to redouble than to take out a doubled contract of five odd into a small slam in the same suit. For all South knows, East has a good defensive hand and can come very close to defeating even the game contract.

If North-South bid and make six diamonds, not vulnerable, they score 920 points; vulnerable, 1,370 points.

If they make five diamonds redoubled with one overtrick, they score 900 points not vulnerable and 1,300 points vulnerable.

The net gain of East's double, if South redoubles, will be 20 points or 70 points, depending on vulnerability.

The bidding [North-South vulnerable]:

West	North	East	South
3 hearts	Pass	Pass	4 spades
Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the heart king. Dummy's ace was played and East ruffed. A club was returned. Declarer won and drew East's trumps, then led the ace and another diamond, hoping West had the king. Unfortunately, East had that valuable card and declarer lost his contract, having to concede, in all, one heart trick, one heart ruff, and two diamond tricks.

Could the contract have been fulfilled? If so, how?

Answer: Yes, fulfillment of the contract is simplicity itself. All declarer has to do is duck the opening heart lead and the heart continuation, cheerfully conceding these tricks to West. Then, if a third heart is led, dummy ducks again and declarer ruffs. In this way, the heart ace is preserved against East's ruff, and after declarer draws trumps, he uses it for the discard of a diamond.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Requests for items which vary from the small and inexpensive to those more costly and difficult to obtain are presented today. In nearly all cases we have numerous similar requests on file, and we hope that, if readers have such items available, we can fill a number of needs.

Miss P., a case worker on the northwest side of the city, has been trying to obtain a day bed or a cot for one of her families, consisting of a widowed mother and six children. The father died two years ago, and since that time the children have become undernourished and now are under the care of medical agencies. The eldest son, 19, is working, but his earnings are very irregular. He has had to assume the major responsibility for the family and has become discouraged. Due to the present shortage of relief funds the agency is unable to care for their needs.

Mrs. T., on the south side of the city, writes:

"I am the mother of premature twin babies and am very much in need of a carriage for them. My husband's salary never can provide it, and I will be most appreciative if some reader has a discarded one I could have."

A medical worker in a large dispensary on the south side of the city sends the following appeal on behalf of Miss B.:

"Dear Miss Brown: We ask your aid in obtaining a wheel chair for a patient who has been under our care for a year. She has spinal paralysis and at present is able to take only a few steps. As her illness is progressive, it shortly will cause the complete loss of the use of her limbs.

"Her vision also is seriously impaired, and she is, therefore, unable to occupy her time in reading or hand work. She does have access to a back yard, but finds it extremely difficult to walk from the front of the house.

"The patient is only 33 years old and will have a normal span of life. She was very active prior to her illness and has found it difficult to be cut off from activities and associations with others.

"We are anxious to obtain a chair, as we believe this will assist her in keeping up her courage. We are seeking your assistance as a final recourse in the hope that you will be able to add a little happiness to this girl's life."

The patient was the support of her family until four years ago, when her health broke and paralysis developed. She lives with her parents, and the family is receiving assistance from a social agency. She always has hoped to be able to return to work, and her employer held her position open for several years, until no hope remained.

I believe the mere facts of the case are sufficient to prompt any reader able to help to do so immediately.

Another invalid sends her own plea: "Dear Miss Brown: I am wondering if some one interested in collecting stamps could share some duplicates with me? I am a shut-in and have just taken up this hobby. I am alone a great deal, can't see to read for any length of time, and my radio is out of order. Sometimes the days seem endless, and I surely would appreciate your help. What joy it would be to have something to do! H. L."

The address will be provided to interested readers.

Contentment

By Eleanor Jewett.

I lie in the grass
And I stare at the sky
And I watch the soft
White clouds floating by

Like some sort of lamb
From a Mother Goose rhyme—
And I have a perfectly
Wonderful time!

The lambs trot along
In their pasture of blue
And I lie and watch them
With nothing to do.

Parisiennes in Spangles Defy Threat of War

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.] — The war of nerves keeps on in Europe. Dictators are boasting that they can dish it out, and Parisiennes are proving that they can take it. They act as if they didn't have a thing in the world on their minds except the new hats. They come and go night after night through corridors in which big piles of sandbags are stored ready for air raid fires, and on the walls of which big posters with evacuation notices are pasted.

Theaters which put on their big shows in summer, concerts, night clubs, galas, and private parties make the summer hectic with movement, and the clothes I see around are a big something in the show. Most nights we can hear the drone of prowling airplanes overhead but, just to be nonchalant, women are wearing evening hats that have sheer brims dipping down to the chin, and making sky searching a hit or miss business. Or they show their coolness by making evening styles the most fragile, frilly, and decorative that they've been for years.

Balenciaga's dresses of stiffest satin or faille, with huge Goyaesque skirts, like the Spanish Infanta wore to have her portrait painted, are getting around. Paquin's stencil printed batiste dresses, very like something Queen Alexandra wore in Edwardian days, are part of the picture. All the dresses are cut so that waistlines look positively brittle, they are so small and snappable. Many of them have whalebones inside girdles to keep this line slimmer than ever.

Evening necklines are extreme. They vary from high neck collars to Lelong's daring bodice that's just a scarf around the neck and down the front to the waistline, leaving the center front, sides and back nude. There are many low cut, square, heart shaped, and round lines, as well as new looking deep V shaped lines. Small sleeves with very low necks are worn a great deal.

Heavy, flashy jewelry still is the big chic for evening. Chanel's barbaric gold necklaces—they look like they weigh as much as a horse's collar—are stunning with black dresses. Many strand necklaces of ruby and pearl beads are new looking. Spectacular earrings are worn by lots of women. Weighty, jeweled clips and brooches are very smart, and fantastic dog collar necklaces are striking and new.

Evening silhouettes that seem prophetic are Mainbocher's, with skirts flared at the back but having no bustle; Alix's dresses with draped back or front skirts, and Jeanne Lanvin's very slender line dresses with split skirts. It looks like narrower evening skirts, but with drapery or segregated fullness, would come in by fall, a matter I have mentioned to you before this.

For dancing, however, skirts will keep on being full. They look different because they begin from a lowered waistline. One Mainbocher evening gown worn by Lady Mendl [the former Elsie De Wolfe] is made of pale and deep blue tulle, covered with matching spangle embroidery, the skirt worked in panels in the two colors. The waist is hip length at the back and dips up to normal at the front.

Another example of the gathered skirt with a lowered waistline is an evening gown worn by Mrs. Frank Jay Gould. Mainbocher made it for her, and it is white tulle, with spray-like stripes of white and silver sequins up and down the skirt and the brief bodice. The stripes are worked criss-cross on the front of the very wide girdle.

Molyneux has devoted clients, such as Baronne de Rothschild and the duchess of Kent, who are wearing his high waisted evening gowns this summer. One is a sample I have seen everywhere. It is made of white chiffon, with big coin dots of blue for a pattern. The empire waist ends below the bosom, and the gored skirt begins there, the gores widening below the hips to make the skirt wide.

The duchess of Windsor's favorite summer evening wrap is a reefer made of rose colored net with stripes of pastel colored spangles running horizontally. Mainbocher made it.

Crochet Cuddle Doll Is Ideal Toy for Infants

By Ellen Bruce.

Cuddle toys have enjoyed a vogue which was unheard of 40 or 50 years ago. These soft crocheted dolls possess all the charm and characteristics of their more sturdy brethren, but are positively harmless to the infant who decides to pound the hapless creature or throw it with all the power in his tiny arms. The single crochet and loop combination again have united to create one of the most amusing and decidedly lovable dolls of the season.

For instructions in crocheting the white cuddle doll, No. X-304, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Lack of Sophistication Is Charm of This Jumper Frock

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—All Paris modes are not sophisticated. Designers are aware that certain of their discriminating customers like the more conservative type of thing. One of the most feminine and ingenuous styles is the jumper dress, and there are surprisingly many in Paris this season. One of the loveliest I have had copied for our pattern.

V lines predominate in the bodice, allowing the buttoned or stud front shirtwaist blouse to be fully visible. The straps have buckles at the shoulders. Around the waist is a narrow leather belt, and the gored skirt has graceful although moderate flare.

The jumper of the original costume is of black and white finely checked taffeta. The blouse is of soft crêpe.

Plain shades and checks share popularity for a dress of this type. Even moderately sized plaid would be suitable. Mixtures, silks with "body," cottons, and linens all make up well. The taffeta selection is a particularly fortunate one, because it makes the frock less seasonal than it would be in a washable material. In taffeta and crêpe, this frock is a model that may be worn all year long.

Style No. 5304 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3 yards of 39 inch material for the jumper, with 1⅝ yards of 39 inch fabric for the blouse.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 113 West 19th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be careful to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Parents Fail in Social Duty if Child's Unruly

By Helen Bartlett.

There are hundreds of responsibilities that parents undertake in the matter of bringing up children—obligations to the children themselves, mostly. But not to be neglected are the social responsibilities to the friends, relatives, and neighbors that those parents also should observe. Children may become a burden, and there may be days when even doting mothers find that the little darlings get in their hair, but that doesn't give parents the right to ignore them, let them get out of hand, or "sic" them onto the neighbors.

In the majority of cases people are quite ready to be exceedingly tolerant of the behavior of a child because they realize a child of only a few years hasn't been steeped in the laws of civilization long enough to behave automatically with the tact and good taste that would be expected of an adult. While friends and neighbors are more critical of a child than the parents may be, they are tolerant and forgiving if the offenses are those of natural spontaneity, enthusiasm, and exuberance. But when the child is completely spoiled, unmanageable and untrained, tolerance soon flies out the window. And it is understandable why such children become unwanted and unloved.

The tragedy is that the child is not to be blamed for being a nuisance. The parents who neglected him are the guilty ones. All he knows is that he is having a good time because he is doing as he pleases, and he can't understand that the world was not made expressly for him, or that he is disturbing the pleasures and comforts of somebody else by his inexhaustible tricks.

In addition to owing it to her child in order that he will learn the complexities of living in a crowded society, and also will develop a personality and disposition attractive to others, a parent has a responsibility to society. She has no right to bring up her child in such a way that he is a disturbing influence or a nuisance to any one else. She cannot shirk the burden of taking care of him by pretending to "put him on his own." Experience will teach him all the things he should know in time, but it is a painful process and in the meantime he has been a boor.

A little early training properly applied will make life pleasant for the mother and the child, although he doesn't know it. And the neighbors will have no right to complain.

Coach House Theater Opens Second Summer Series

Six Brand New Comedies to Be Presented

By Cecil Smith.

The Coach House theater at Oconomowoc, Wis., which is rapidly becoming the pride of the middle west among summer theaters, started off its second season in festive vein last Tuesday. The opening bill, of which I shall have more to tell further down this column, was the first of six brand new comedies presented this summer by Thoda Cocroft as her contribution to the encouragement of native drama.

The Coach House theater is located on the expansive, wooded P. A. Valentine estate, within a good hefty stone's throw of the shore of peaceful Oconomowoc lake. The playhouse itself is precisely what its name indicates—a one-time coach house and stable transformed into a summer theater. The auditorium, seating 198 people on chairs stenciled with the name of the Eagles' club of Milwaukee, evidently was originally the storage room for carriages and equipment. A part of this space, fairly wide but not quite as deep as one might wish, has been built up into a stage.

The backstage arrangements are picturesque. The star dressing room has been fashioned by hanging curtains between posts separating stalls that look about the right size to house Shetland ponies. Along another wall of the big backstage room run the larger stalls intended for the horses. There remains, however, no nostalgic trace of horseflesh. In the space in the middle of the room some of the players make up at tables right out in the open. During the daylight hours the tables are removed, and the scenic designer works at his carpentering and painting.

I would not have you think that there is anything ramshackle about the Coach House. I am no connoisseur either of stables or of big Victorian estates, but I had not realized that fashionable nineteenth century horses were kept in buildings whose woodwork and interior construction were quite so handsome.

In such gracious surroundings it is impossible to shake off a sense of well being which no theater critic should have as he approaches a first night. Still, even though my usual urban responses to the dramatic art were lulled to sleep in this genial place, I am reasonably sure that I was within my professional rights in enjoying Miss Cocroft's opening performance.

The play, "Hero Come Home," was written by Dorothy Dow Fitzgerald of Chicago. In the Marjorie Montgomery Ward Baker prize competition the piece did not receive first prize, simply because the judges thought "Ducks and Drakes" a better play. Miss Dow has hit on an interesting idea for her comedy, however, and has treated it with enough sparkle to provide a modestly amusing evening.

Penelope—the Greek wife who waited faithfully at home until Odysseus returned after twenty years' adventure with Circe, the Sirens, and other mythological charmers—is Miss Dow's heroine. But she is not the Penelope we are used to. As Miss Dow imagines her, she is pure woman, scheming transparent femininity. By her own admission she was faithful to Odysseus for forty minutes after his departure—until the first suitor came in search of her attentions.

Odysseus [or Ulysses, if that sounds more familiar] returns unexpectedly, as was to be expected, and finds his wife in a clandestine meeting with one Axanthus. There is no use telling in detail the device by which Penelope extricates herself from so awkward a spot without losing either her husband or her head. Miss Dow finds a way for her to twist Odysseus around her finger, and the final curtain falls on an embrace of the reunited pair, with Penelope inquiring coyly, "When are you going away again, Odysseus?"

After a slow start with too much sheer exposition of the Penelope legend for the benefit of those who have forgotten it, the comedy moves along at a good clip. Its humor is mostly on the gag side, but some of the gags are right good. Naturally the script suffers from inevitable comparison with "Amphitryon 38," which treated a classic story with sharper edged modern wit and at the same time discovered philosophic overtones in which "Hero Come Home" has no interest. Miss Dow has not quite written a professionally acceptable play, but she has shown promise of being able to in the future.

Miss Cocroft was fortunate enough to secure Margaret Waller to play Penelope. Any one who saw her Masha in "The Sea Gull" recognized her as a skilled actress of distinctive emotional power. As a comedienne, she is thoroughly infectious and likable. It is not surprising that much of her technical method stems from Lynn Fontanne, whom she has had so much chance to observe and admire. Her playing is far and away above the level of mere imitation, however. Her approach to the character and the lines possess the pungency of individuality and creative imagination.

Most of Miss Waller's supporting cast behaved in a workmanlike manner. Two young actors seemed to have unusual talent — Tom McDermott, who had already made creditable contributions to the Federal theater's Shakespeare repertory; and Leon Drew, a self-possessed, intelligent juvenile [and that's a rarity indeed].

This week the Coach House theater presents its first prize play, "Ducks and Drakes," by Eleanor Carroll Chilton and Herbert Agar. The premiére comes Tuesday evening, and performances will be given nightly through Saturday. Margaret Waller again plays the lead. The cast includes Don Koehler, Tom McDermott, Harold Douglas, Florence LaCour, Dolph Nelson, and Hal Stuart.

A visit to the Coach House theater provides a pleasant summer outing. Draper hall at Oconomowoc, a mansion dating from the sixties, now transformed into an excellent hotel, offers its high ceilinged rooms, good food, and view of the lake to those who wish to stay over night. The drive to the Coach House takes less than three hours from Chicago. The most efficient route is as follows: Route 41 [Skokie highway] to route 100 [a short distance north of the Milwaukee county line]; route 100 [a belt road circling around Milwaukee trafic] to route 19; route 19 to route P, two or three miles west of Nashotah, the last town before Oconomowoc; route P and a side road marked by arrows to the Coach House theater.

COACH HOUSE STAR

Margaret Waller stars in the first two productions at the Coach House summer theater, Oconomowoc, Wis. Both are new, prize winning comedies, "Hero Come Home" and "Ducks and Drakes."

Charlotte a 'Wow'

Charlotte Greenwood, visiting Australia for the first time, made a tremendous hit when she opened in "Leaning on Letty" at the King's theater in Melbourne a few weeks ago. She was referred to by the critics as having had "one of the most complete personal triumphs that any visitor has enjoyed for years," and as being a "wow."

"Leaning on Letty" is the comedy-melodrama adapted by Wilbur Daniel Steele and Norma Mitchell from their "Post Road" and presented at Chicago's Selwyn theater during the 1936-'37 season with Miss Greenwood as the star. Three of the cast who played with her here and the stage director remained with the company during its subsequent American and English tours and are still associated with the production during its engagement "down under." They are Romaine Callender, Charles Martin, Isabel Withers, and Russell Fillmore. Martin Broones, personal representative and composer-husband of the star, has likewise stayed with the troupe, and one of his songs, "Moon Melody," is still part of the show.

Drama Notes

This department has received a chastising note from Chester P. Holway, a public spirited citizen of Milwaukee. "How," he inquires, "can we get you interested in the summer theater in Wisconsin?" The rebuttal is, alas, too simple. How, Mr. Holway, can we get your summer theaters to inform us, just a wee bit ahead of time, what they are doing? Your attention is called, by the way, to remarks about the Coach House theater in another column. In your letter you call this group "semi-amateur," which is a questionable advertisment for the current productions, given with Equity casts.

Your attention is also called to the fact that we always announce the week's bill of the Port Washington players, who are the only ones, except for the Coach House theater, who ever tell us anything in time for us to pass it on. This week they are giving "The Pursuit of Happiness," the comedy about bundling by Lawrence and Arminie Marshall Langner. We don't know what is going on this week at Fish Creek or with the Belfry players at Williams Bay because neither you nor any one else has let us in on the secret.

Milwaukee is planning to take up the stock company idea this fall. The Pabst theater, ordinarily dark most of the time between concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will house the productions.

Myron Fagan promises to direct and produce not less than five plays, with Hollywood luminaries in principal rôles. Already signed are Elissa Landi, Edward Arnold, Glenda Farrell, and Lionel Atwill. Mr. Fagan also hopes to close contracts with Pat O'Brien, Myrna Loy, Margaret Sullavan, and Warren William.

The movies have got Orson Welles at last, after two years of trying. The young director of the Mercury theater has agreed to make one picture a year for RKO-Radio. He stipulated before signing his contract that he should choose his own subjects and maintain his own production unit.

The number of plays on Broadway is now reduced to eleven, even with "The American Way" resuming performances at the Center theater. "Leave It to Me," has closed temporarily, and will reopen for a short stretch in New York before beginning its fall tour. "Outward Bound" has finished its New York run, and its cast will also lay off until time to tour. "I Must Love Some One," an untidy piece about the private lives of the Floradora girls, written by Jack Kirkland and starring Gypsy Rose Lee, has called it a day, at least for the time being.

The Legitimate Theater corporation—the outfit that hopes to reinstate the country-wide "road" by sending out four touring companies in Broadway successes, now boasts 116 bookings. Seventeen of these are one night stands in picture theaters. "What a Life" begins its journeys at Peoria on Oct. 9, with a cast that may possibly include Jackie Coogan and Frank McGlynn. "Golden Boy" starts off Oct. 13 at Richmond, Va., with Donald Wood in the former Luther Adler part. At Providence, R. I., on Oct. 16, Eva LeGallienne and Earle Larimore initiate a two-play repertory of "Hedda Gabler" and "The Master Builder," between which local subscribing managers are expected to choose. The last of the four, "On Borrowed Time," is dated into Detroit on Oct. 23.

New Season to Bring Back Old, New Favorites

By Robert Sylvester.

New York.—[Special.]—Having put its best foot firmly forward, the Producing Playwrights' company looms as the most important and interesting single factor on the schedule of the coming season—a season which in all probability will start later than usual, but which is due to bring back any number of old and new favorites. With an enviable first year record of three hits against one error, the Playwrights are ready for their sophomore year with two scripts completed and three more nearly ready.

The Playwrights are among the few managements not hanging back and waiting to see what the other fellow does first and what he gets out of it. Confident and competent, the five writers-producers plan Sidney Howard's "Summer Night"—title currently in process of transformation—and will hop right in with Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo" as soon as the Howard play reaches the boards.

Nor are they pausing there. Mr. Howard is half through his dramatization of Carl Van Doren's "Benjamin Franklin," and Anderson and Kurt Weill, his partner in "Knickerbocker Holiday," is polishing the musical which will probably star Bill Robinson.

Then, too, the first draft of Elmer Rice's "Siege of Berlin" is ready, and any day now the Playwrights expect to get some air mail from England, where the Robert E. Sherwood who won them a Pulitzer prize with "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" is hard at work, and S. N. Behrman is hard at work, too.

As was the case last season, when all the Playwrights' productions—"Abe Lincoln," "Knickerbocker Holiday," "No Time for Comedy," and "American Landscape"—proved both individual and provocative, the news scripts on the Playwrights' schedule rank high on the list of productions most calculated to catch the theatergoer's fancy. Their production list again is varied to the tastes of the general public, and not pointed toward any one class of playgoer.

Following the Playwrights' schedule, the most important prospects of the new season are the first two plays in the Eugene O'Neill cycle of eight which detail the history of America. O'Neill, in virtual seclusion for seven years, has denied that he will come east this summer, but intimates that he'll be here in the early fall and admits that the Theater Guild "might" have the first of his plays on the stage early in 1940. Production details have been settled; Lawrence Langner and Teresa Helburn will produce the first two for the guild.

The advance listing for the early season also furnishes some old, favorite, and familiar names. John Barrymore will be an early arrival in the acting lark called "My Dear Children" which has been knocking 'em dead on the road; Vicki Baum, of "Grand Hotel" fame, will have her "Saturday Night" on a Broadway stage before the first frost; Mae West returns in her own "Up The Ladder," and Helen Hayes is even now heading east in the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur "Ladies And Gentlemen." Alexander Woollcott will take to the road in a vehicle by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, and Booth Tarkington's new version of "Poldekin"—now called "Harabash"—may arrive with the vanguard. Both Dorothy Parker and Ernest Hemingway, who haven't sent the theater much in recent years, are on the early term list, too. Miss Parker with "The Happiest Man," Max Gordon's opener, and Hemingway with his Spanish war drama, "The Fifth Column."

The musicals, which had a highly happy time of it this past semester, are well represented. First on the docket probably will be the George Abbott-Richard Rodgers-Lorenz Hart-George Marion "Yale Bait," full of rhumba dancers and Latin talent. Rodgers and Hart are also at work on a musical for Vera Zorina—a script which will have her at the butler's ball. Joe Cook is to return and so is Earl Carroll. And so are Buddy De Sylva and Irving Berlin, who are working together at such times as Mr. De Sylva isn't working on another show with Cole Porter. And labor stage is planning to continue in the Broadway show business with a new revue called "Labor Pains." Also, there'll be a new edition of the phenomenally successful "Hellzapoppin."

Abraham Lincoln, who last season replaced Social Significance as the most popular dramatic theme, promises to hold his theatrical eminence. Paul Horgan's "Follow Me Ever" is on Brock Pemberton's list, and "Mrs. Lincoln," by Ramon Romero, is the property of Vincent Price and Edith Barrett. Both plays deal with Lincoln's last years.

Last week brought both good and bad news from theatrical exhibits at the world's fair. The good news is that Gilbert and Sullivan in swing time is playing to all sorts of good trade; the bad news is that the four streamlined Shakespeare plays—well acted, splendidly directed by Margaret Webster, and offered to the fair public at movie prices—are a failure.

Every one who saw the Shakespeare plays was convinced that the small Globe theater, at the Merrie England village, had one of the fine, artistic, and "natural" shows for all and sundry. Added weight was lent this conviction by the finer record similar productions enjoyed at Chicago, but the fair public wouldn't attend in sufficient numbers, and the theater operators are currently dickering for something with "more legs and flesh."

Whether or not legs and flesh are the answer is still doubtful, since the fair visitors, whose tastes are still to be reliably charted, aren't hurrying to buy tickets for the nude girly shows on the midway, either. It's hard to tell who has had more call for bitter complaints—the sponsor of the Bard or the sponsors of pure, unadorned, white flesh.

Yet the fair's two remaining legitimate and expensive theatrical productions continue to play to breathlessly good business. Billy Rose's Aquacade, which needs no further analysis here, will probably set an all-time record for attendance at any entertainment production, and "The Hot Mikado," the Gilbert and Sullivan classic in swing, is playing to virtual capacity and building each day. Why the fair visitors took these shows to their bosoms and skipped the Shakespeare plays is one of those tantalizing mysteries of show business.

The new season promises an extra large quota of plays written by actors. Robert Morley, who took the town by storm in "Oscar Wilde," has a comedy called "Short Story" which is being tried in the summer theaters. Dorothy Hall's "Tomorrow Is Today" is also being experimented with in the barns. George M. Cohan, who's an actor first and a playwright-producer second, is polishing his "Puy De Dome." Robert Thomsen's "Carriage Trade" is on George Abbott's list. Charles Laughton hopes to have his own version of "King Lear" ready for spring and Eddie Dowling, who hasn't let producing interfere with his acting, is busy with a comedy of his own.

SCAT AND CATS

"Scat" Davis, known also to music, stage and movie fans as Johnnie, has his own band of swing cats on the orchestra stand at the Blackhawk restaurant, carrying on the room's long established swing tradition.

Vaudeville

Continuing its recent vogue for stage dramatization of popular songs, the Chicago theater this week has an elaborate dancing spectacle by the Evans ballet, based on the current hit, "Sunrise Serenade." The ballet also offers "Dansant Française" and a Hungarian fantasy with Rudy Wagner, pianist. On the rest of the program are Fortunello and Cirilleno, Nan Davis, Steve Evans and Captain Tiebor's trained seals. "Daughters Courageous" is the current film, featuring the Lane sisters and John Garfield.

Esther Ralston seen in the first three productions at the Civic theater earlier this summer, shares headline honors at the Oriental theater with the Slate brothers, a knockabout comedy trio. Supporting acts are Spec and Spot, Buddy and Sis Roberts, Hope Lawrence, Verne Buck and his orchestra and the twelve dancing Sweethearts. The two films shown are "Exile Express" with Anna Sten and Feodor Chaliapin, and "The Gorilla" with the Ritz brothers.

Esther Ralston.

"Literary Indigestion," a vaudeville skit with Harry Savoy and his "company," is the feature attraction at the State-Lake theater. Others include the Wen Hai troupe of five Chinese dervishes, Al Samuels and company, the Five Ames sisters, Plato and Jewel, Texas Tommy and his Wonder Horse, and Helen Honan. Warner Baxter plays the title rôle in the "The Return of the Cisco Kid," on the screen.

Air Conditioning.

Ten thrill concessions provide natural air conditioning for Riverview Park patrons. Most thorough of them is the Chutes, a toboggan ride that ends in the park pool. Three airplane type rides and the five coaster rides manufacture their own breezes. The "Pair-o-chutes" provides an exciting change in altitude.

Violin Concerto

Alban Berg's violin concerto will be introduced to New York next year by Antonio Brosa, playing with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra under John Barbirolli's direction. The soloist probably is the first to perform this exceedingly difficult work, with the exception of Louis Krasner, who had the privilege of playing it for the first time anywhere and of introducing it to various musical centers, including this city. Mr. Krasner played the concerto with the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Dr. Frederick Stock last season.

Mr. Brosa is a Spaniard now permanently settled in England. The string quartet which bears his name and is headed by him was heard locally at a 1930 festival sponsored by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge.

Blue Fountain Room Features Novelty Trio

A novelty trio built upon a sound musical theory is providing the Hotel La Salle with an answer to the problem of summer doldrums. Milt Herth, for many years a radio and theater organist; Dick Ridgely, drummer, and Bernie Leighton, pianist, are the musicians who are playing nightly for Blue Fountain room patrons.

While utilizing to the full the rather sedate tonal strength of the electric organ for classical effects, Herth does not forget the bit of jitterbug that inhabits most night life seekers. His swing arrangements prove as danceable as though they were played by a fully equipped orchestra. Herth explained this when he revealed that in arranging his numbers he varies his own playing to approximate the contribution of the usual brass, wind and string instruments. Leighton, who is said to have pigeon holed a Yale scholarship in order to pursue a musical career, blends his own very considerable keyboard talent into the orchestrations, coming up now and then with a brilliant solo passage. Ridgely's drumming effectively sets the rhythm and occasionally provides startlingly energetic interludes. His xylophone solos, with Leighton's piano offerings, are too infrequent high points of the Herth trio's entertainment.

Griff Williams and his orchestra have successfully "dug in" at the Trianon ballroom after a holdover engagement at the north side sister room, the Aragon. The Williams aggregation has set some sort of a record as a return engagement band on the south side.

Eddy Howard.

Playing in the Aragon now is Dick Jurgens, Pacific coast boy who has adopted Chicago as home. Jurgens currently is getting credit from his vocalist, Eddy Howard, for having plugged Eddy's tune, "My Last Goodby" into the high national rating it now enjoys.

L'Aiglon restaurant, back to normal musically now that Ennio Bolognini, the whimsical cellist with wanderlust, has returned from his concert rovings, has added the talents of Doriss Wittich, pianist, who guided the musical destinies of Yar restaurant until it closed for the summer. Miss Wittich, a concert pianist, appears nightly in solos and with Bolognini's International Gypsies. Continuing their solos and duets are Mary Williams Kilpatrick and Eusebio Concialdi.

Carnival nights are in swing on the Beach Walk of the Edgewater Beach hotel. Scheduled to open with the annual midsummer Carnival night last evening, the special shows feature the dancing of Stuart and Lea, familiar to Beach Walk patrons. Lawrence Welk and his band full of entertainers and Harriet Smith's Lovely Ladies supply the colorful background. Stuart and Lea at present are featuring a spectacular number, "Bolero of the Capes," danced to the whirling melodies of Malaguena.

Wednesday night on the Walk is Arthur Murray night, with the currently popular group dance, "Underneath the Spreading Chestnut Tree," providing a diversion that brings the audience into the show.

Another new singer for Bunny Berigan's orchestra has made her appearance in the Panther room of Hotel Sherman's College Inn. Blonde Betty Robbins has a fresh voice that complements neatly the swing singing of Ellen Kaye in Berigan's musical collaboration with Muggsy Spanier's ragtime band in what is called the "Cavalcade of Swing."

Bon-Air's new show has a previously unannounced act—Dolly Arden, dancer. Benny Fields, Dean Murphy, Georgie Tapps, and Mario and Floria, with the Belles of Bon-Air, complete the bill.

The Night Watchman:

Along with the All-Star football game, Chicagoans can anticipate for early fall the arrival of piano playing Fats Waller in a loop hotel, Tommy Dorsey at another, and comedian Jack Haley at an outlying spot. . . . Nikko, the facially expressive dancer who just closed at Bon-Air, paid for strenuous activity with a wrenched back that put him in a north side hospital. . . . Pedro d'Leon is being held over at the Balinese room through July. . . . The Stevens hotel, withholding the Continental room reopening until Labor day, seems doubly lonesome without smiling Tom Montgomery, who has turned individualist. . . . Novel effects produced by Enric Madriguera's orchestra at Bon-Air can be credited in part to the way he orchestrates his girl trio's voices into routine numbers, as if they were instruments. . . . New York is getting a good look at Chicago's glamor singer, Maggi McNellis, lately of the Balinese room, Pump room, and Colony club.

Lily Pons to Sing in Grant Park Tomorrow Night

Diva's Husband, Kostelanetz, Will Conduct

By Edward Barry.

The Grant park band shell will be the scene tomorrow evening of as ambitious a free concert as these parts have lately heard. Lily Pons, the famous little French coloratura, will appear as soloist on a program conducted by her husband, André Kostelanetz. The orchestra will be that of the Chicago City Opera company.

Born at Cannes, on the French Riviera, in 1905, Miss Pons emerged as a singer only after she had studied two other subjects. As a very young girl she entered the Paris conservatory for piano lessons, later she took to the stage and played ingénue rôles at the Varieties. At the age of 21 she studied singing seriously and made her operatic debut three years later at Mulhouse in Alsace. The opera, curiously, was "Lakmé," still one of her best liked vehicles.

After further European experience Miss Pons made her Metropolitan opera debut on Jan. 3, 1931, in the name part of "Lucia di Lammermoor," another work which has remained firmly in her rèpertoire. Since that time Miss Pons has made innumerable concert, opera, radio, and movie appearances and has established herself in the respect and affection of a wide world. Her charm of manner and her personal beauty have conspired with her musical ability to produce this happy result.

André Kostelanetz is a Russian whose experience as a conductor began in czarist times. During the last several years he has been a dominant figure in American radio, planning and conducting large scale programs which have been as remarkable for the imagination which went into the arrangements as for the meticulous care displayed in the actual performances.

The Pons-Kostelanetz romance occupied a fair amount of America's attention during 1937 and 1938. It was climaxed by the marriage, which took place in June of the latter year.

Other personalities of the Grant park week include Jerzy Bojanowski, Polish conductor, and Valerie Glowacki, Polish soprano. Both of these artists have been heard in Chicago performances of the Polish opera, "Halka."

Edward Dudley, a young Ohioan with operatic ambitions and with a term as pupil of Florence Easton to his credit, makes his Grant park debut Tuesday. Olive Arthur, Ilma Bayle, Maria Noelte, and Emery Darcy are also scheduled for solo appearances this week. Mrs. Noelte is the wife of Dr. Albert Noelte of Northwestern university.

Besides Kostelanetz and Bojanowski one other conductor will make his 1939 lake front debut this week. He is Ulderico Marcelli, who directs Saturday evening.

FACES BUSY WEEK

Maria Noelte, coloratura soprano, has a busy week ahead of her. She is singing on Wednesday and Thursday with the Illinois Symphony orchestra and on Friday at Grant park.
[Rosel Photo.]

Notes of Music and Musicians

The series of free al fresco concerts played by the Illinois Symphony orchestra in Wilmette's Washington park amphitheater will be continued on Wednesday with Izler Solomon conducting and Maria Noelte, soprano, as soloist. On Thursday this program will be repeated in Hutchinson court on the University of Chicago campus.

Except for the soloist's numbers the program is composed of American and Russian items. They include Henry F. B. Gilbert's Comedy Overture on Negro Themes, Kalinnikoff's Symphony No. 1 in G minor, Tschaikowsky's Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet," Robert Sanders' popular barn dance, "Saturday Night," and the Russian Sailor's dance from Glière's ballet, "The Red Poppy."

The soloist will make her first appearances as a singer in and about Chicago at these concerts. Previously she has performed here as a pianist. The wife of Dr. Albert Noelte, noted resident composer and teacher, she has concertized with him on numerous occasions, particularly in the orient. At these concerts she will sing Saint-Saëns' "The Nightingale and the Rose" and two arias, "Caro nome," from Verdi's "Rigoletto," and the "Bell Song" from Délibès' "Lakmé." On Friday night she will sing in Grant park accompanied by the Woman's Symphony orchestra under Rudolph Ganz.

News about the activities of singers in the popular San Carlo Opera company has come in from various sources. Several of them are keeping in trim with appearances at the Cincinnati Zoo park. Those who have or are going to sing in the summer opera season there are Norina Greco, Lucille Meusel, and Anne Roselle, sopranos; Aroldo Lindi and Sidney Rayner, tenors, and Coe Glade, mezzo-soprano. The performance of Miss Greco was of particular interest since she sang a rôle new to her, Marguerite in Boito's "Mefistofele." Mr. Raynor was the Faust in the same cast.

At Philadelphia's Robin Hood dell Bianca Saroya, prima donna of the San Carloans, sang the title rôle in "Aïda" with the Philadelphia orchestra under Alexander Smallens. And at New York's Lewisohn stadium a performance of the same opera had Lyuba Senderowna cast as Amneris.

Taking a respite from the opera stage is the baritone, Stefan Kozakevich. On a summer tour of the middle west he is giving no less than twenty recitals of Russian songs.

Gladys Swarthout, the American mezzo-soprano who has been engaged for the rôles of Mignon and Carmen at the Civic Opera house next fall, will probably be joined by her husband in the productions. He is Frank Chapman, a baritone. During recent years he has managed the business end of Miss Swarthout's career. His return to musical activities was marked by joint appearances with his wife in opera at the Cincinnati park.

The program of free concerts at the various park band shells continues unabated. Tonight the Chicago Woman's concert band will play in Jackson park. Lillian Peonish conducts this organization which features several wind ensembles in novelty numbers. The soloists are three: Esther Hardie, soprano; Jenya Poldi, contralto, and Genevieve Kaleth, trumpet. Col. Armin F. Hand and his American Legion band hold forth this evening in Lincoln park. Rosalinda Morini, soprano; Henry Thompson, tenor; Richard Stross, cornetist; Benny Dugoll, baritone, and Edward B. Straight, drummer, comprise the extensive list of guest performers. On Friday night Glenn Cliffe Bainum and his band will be heard in the shell at Garfield park. Earl Payne, trombonist; Raymund Koch, baritone, and Lilyan Sacks, soprano, will appear with the ensemble. All concerts begin at 8 o'clock.

Hans Lange, associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, is conducting the annual summer series of outdoor concerts played by the Little Symphony in Washington university quadrangle, St. Louis. At the first concert, July 3, music by Haydn, Mozart, and Dubensky was featured.

The second series of "Starlite Concerts" offered by the Tulsa Symphony orchestra at Skelly stadium, Tulsa, Okla., is being conducted by Jerzy Bojanowski, who is appearing at Grant park tonight. There are six concerts in the series; they began on July 11 and will end on Aug. 15. Last summer's programs were likewise directed by Mr. Bojanowski. Last spring he toured Europe as conductor of the Polish Ballets and as a guest conductor in numerous continental cities. When the Polish Ballets came to perform recently at the New York World's Fair he accompanied them.

Dr. Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra; Henry E. Voegeli, business manager of the same organization; Serge Prokofieff, Russian composer, and their respective wives spent July 4 together in Moscow. According to word from Mrs. Stock and Mrs. Voegeli the Soviet capital is an unusually beautiful city.

Some of the more prominent artists who are now set to appear during August in Grant park are Maria Kurenko, Russian soprano now residing in Chicago; Jean Tennyson, soprano of the Chicago City Opera company, and Lawrence Tibbett, popular American baritone. Mme. Kurenko sings on Aug. 2 with Ulderico Marcelli and his orchestra, Miss Tennyson on Aug. 12 with Walter Steindel and his orchestra, and Mr. Tibbett on Aug. 21 with Cavallo's symphonic band.

When the Hyde Park golden jubilee is celebrated from Sept. 14 to 17, a mass community songfest will be held near the Rosenwald museum of science and industry in Jackson park. Izler Solomon, conductor of the Illinois Symphony orchestra will lead a jubilee chorus of 600 voices in a program of American music and "swing" portions of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado." The first rehearsal of the chorus will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the University of Chicago's Mandel hall. Any one from the city wishing to participate may register with the managing director of the Hyde Park Golden Jubilee, Nick John Matsoukas, 1454 East 57th street. The occasion commemorates Hyde Park's annexation to this city fifty years ago.

Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini, former stars of resident opera companies who have set up a local opera school, are now in Italy with a group of their students. Two of the latter are already scheduled to make their debuts in Italian opera houses.

A young Canadian tenor, Joseph Victor Laderoute, will appear as soloist with both the Chicago and Detroit Symphony orchestras next season. In this city he will be heard in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, to be performed on Dec. 7 and 8.

Tri-Cities' Plans

Unusual and festive programs have been chosen by the Tri-Cities [Davenport, Ia., and Rock Island and Moline, Ill.] Symphony orchestra and its conductor, Oscar Anderson, to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the organization next season. The trio of soloists engaged at this point are Jascha Heifetz, violinist; Rose Bampton, soprano, and Robert Casadesus, pianist. A contest will be conducted in the fall to find two local artists, a singer and an instrumentalist, for appearances on the last two concerts.

Four Operatic Stars Sing at Ravinia Friday

By Cecil Smith.

With the advent of Artur Rodzinski, famous conductor of the Cleveland orchestra, the Ravinia festival enters its final fortnight Thursday evening. Mr. Rodzinski conducts the Chicago Symphony orchestra in eight concerts, bringing the season to a close Sunday afternoon, Aug. 6. This afternoon Vladimir Golschmann bids his Ravinia audience farewell.

The biggest event of the Ravinia week is the gala performance on Friday evening. Mr. Rodzinski and the Chicago Symphony orchestra, collaborating with four prominent operatic soloists, will present a concert of excerpts from stage works by the two great Richards—Wagner and Strauss.

The singers are Grete Stueckgold and Susanne Fisher, sopranos; Suzanne Sten, mezzo-soprano, and Eyvind Laholm, tenor. Miss Sten, a fresh arrival from central Europe, makes her first Chicago appearance on this occasion. If advance publicity reports may be believed implicitly, there is no vocabulary quite adequate to describe her beauty, her voice or her musicianship. And even though it may be discreet to discount a bit of the enthusiasm of press agents, the fact remains that she has already established herself in the favor of European opera audiences.

Suzanne Fisher, lyric soprano of the Metropolitan opera, is also a newcomer to Chicago. A native of West Virginia, she studied at the Cincinnati conservatory, the Juilliard School of Music in New York, and Fontainebleau. After appearances in Berlin and Paris she returned to New York to make her bow at the Metropolitan in the title rôle of "Madame Butterfly" in 1935. The following year she sang Sophie in "Der Rosenkavalier" at Cleveland under Dr. Rodzinski.

Grete Stueckgold has sung several times with the Chicago City Opera company, appearing in "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin" and "Der Rosenkavalier." In the last named opera she sang the rôle of Octavian, the rose bearer; in Friday night's "Rosenkavalier" excerpts she will be heard in the Princess' music, and Miss Sten will be the Octavian.

Eyvind Laholm, who has been singing Wagnerian rôles in Germany for more than a decade, hails originally from Moline, Ill. Since his return from Europe he has been heard here once, as Lohengrin in a Chicago City Opera company performance on Dec. 11, 1937. In New York last year he appeared with Kirsten Flagstad in an all-Wagner program by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra.

The gala program divides the evening between passages from Wagner's "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," and "Die Meistersinger," and a generous portion out of Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier." Mr. Laholm carries the chief burden of the Wagnerian half of the program. In the "Rosenkavalier" music the honors go to the three prima donnas.

Honor Composers

Ildebrando Pizzetti and Francesco Ciléa, composers, were recently appointed members of the Italian academy. The former's operatic works include "Fedra," "Débora e Jaéle," "Lo Straniero," "Fra Gherardo," "Orseolo," and "La Festa delle Panatenee." Only "Fra Gherardo" has been seen in this country—at the Metropolitan Opera house in 1929. He also has written countless symphonic, choral, and chamber works. Of these Chicago has heard the Concerto dell'Estate [Concert of Summer] for orchestra, played by both the Chicago and Illinois Symphony orchestras.

Ciléa, on the other hand, is primarily an operatic composer and no more. His best known works for the lyric stage are "L'Arlesiana" and "Adriana Lecouvreur." The latter was produced by the Metropolitan in 1907.

At present there are three other musicians amongst the Italian "immortals." They are Umberto Giordano, Pietro Mascagni, and Don Lorenzo Perosi.

Society's Needs Should Govern an Education

[Dr. Evans' booklet, "Higher Education," a guide to students in selecting a college or university, may be purchased for 10 cents at Chicago Tribune Public Service offices. By mail the cost is 15 cents.]

By the Rev. John Evans.

Discussion between conservatives and progressives, as to what should constitute the content of an education, will never cease so long as the argument on new curricular offerings is based on a premise of "chaos" versus "order." Conservatives, who uphold the order of "training the intellect," and progressives who are accused of chaos with their "fads and frills," both, according to Prof. Harry B. Gideonse of Columbia university, fail to take into account the due relation of education to society; consequently the verbal exchange between the two is largely superficial.

"The Present Chaos in Education," the title of Prof. Gideonse's address to the conference on the Problems of Higher Education, whose proceedings were recently published by the University of Illinois, maintains that the content of an education is determined by the social and economic background. Therefore, to evaluate the quality of any educational content there must first be appraised the needs of modern youth and the needs of modern society, because in all argument the terms must be definite and the premise sound.

"Before we can judge the modern school," he says, "we must consider notions of education as inevitably interwoven with the social setting. We must ask about the relation of the social setting to the problems of education at all levels. This will reveal the blind conventionalism and superficiality of a great deal of contemporary discussion."

Prof. Gideonse does not argue that there is perfect clarity in American education, nor does he claim that everything done in the field is essential. He admits that there is much opportunism, much muddy thinking, and a good deal of incompetence. But education and society are inextricably interwoven.

"It would be peculiar indeed," he continues, "if the schools were perfectly clear and definite in their vision of their task, in a society in which all else is flux and transition. The mere fact that the schools now range into other than the classical and academically approved fields does not impress me in the slightest as a sign of weakness. What matters in the larger field is not that the schools are doing things that go beyond the old academic program, but rather whether the reasons for doing these new things are sound, and whether what is being done is done well."

Merely to call schools "chaotic," Prof. Gideonse notes, does not solve any problems, because one man's "chaos" may be another's "order," and like the word "freedom" need defining.

"Freedom to me," he says, "means tolerance of variation from prevailing orthodoxy. Those who believe in a free society often do so because it is a society in which variation and innovation, new things and new thoughts are possible. This means that basically a free society is going to be a society in which there will be a diversity of teaching and a diversity of truth. It follows, therefore, that the standpoint of somebody who does not like diverse truths, such diversity will appear to be a 'chaos,' rather than the inevitable accompaniment of freedom.

"The survival of a free society," Prof. Gideonse concludes, "may be determined by the flexibility with which we think of the limits of formal education in a changing world."

Winnipeg Concert

Summer symphony concerts are being tried out for the first time this year in Winnipeg, Canada. The concerts will not be outdoors, however, but in the Walker theater. Geoffrey Waddington is conducting the local orchestra in the series, slated to last for ten weeks. Organizations and people who have made possible this project are the Canadian Broadcasting corporation—it is also airing the concerts—local musicians, and a selected committee of citizens headed by Alistair Stewart.

Good Morning!

Shirley Temple makes such an ingratiating little hero worshiper that Twentieth Century-Fox usually provide her with something mighty nice in the way of a stalwart male to support the clinging tendrils of her affection. This trip Randolph Scott, picturesque in the trappings of the Northwest Mounted Police—and a mustache!—rescues her from Indians and becomes the object of her adoration.

The naïve little story is staged in Canada in the days when hostile Indians were doing all in their power to interfere with the building of the Canadian Pacific railroad. . . . Inspector Angus Montague arriving on the scene of the destruction by Indians of a wagon train observes a barrel wobble, pussyfoots over to see what's inside, and discovers a terrified little girl whose name turns out to be Susannah.

He succeeds in quieting her and, calming her fears, takes her back to the post and, when he's out chasing Indians entrusts her to the care of his orderly, Pat O'Hannergan. . . . To make a long story short, it is Susannah who, after various ruckuses, is instrumental in "teaching the white and red man to live like brothers." We leave the little woman smoking a calumet [peace pipe to you] with some "brothers," but wearing an agonized expression that speaks of anything BUT peace in the vicinity of the tummy.

I have discovered that there are two schools of thought re Shirley: To one belong the folks who find her irritatingly Elsie Dinsmore-ish. To the other, those who wouldn't have her any other way. The former group will probably not care for "Susannah of the Mounties." The latter will love their Shirley as the brave and good little heroine. One thing even detractors must admit—while Miss Temple IS sweet — she's never saccharine. There's always an edge — a zip—to her goodness.

Randolph Scott is nice as her "mountie." Margaret Lockwood plays, pleasantly, the commandant's daughter with whom he falls in love. J. Farrell McDonald portrays the nice old orderly with his sure, fine touch and there's a cute little Indian boy, Martin Good Rider, whom you'll like. His scenes with Shirley are probably the most engaging ones in the picture. Other players satisfy.

As for the history—think nothing of it. It's just scattered about as background and isn't to be taken seriously.

See you tomorrow.

Venice Festival

The seventh International Festival of Contemporary Music—not to be confused with the International Society for Contemporary Music festival held in Warsaw, Poland, this year—will take place in Venice from Sept. 4 to 14.

Eleven Italian composers will have one or more of their compositions given their premières during the festival—Bruno Barilli, Luigi Dallapiccola, Leone Massimo, Renato Parodi, Mario Peragallo, Riccardo Pick-Mangiagalli, Lodovico Rocca, G. C. Sonzogno, Riccardo Zandonai, Adon Zecchi, and Gino Gorini. The latter was prize winner of the last national music review. Foreign composers will be represented on the concerts by some of their most recent works. Among them are Marcel Poot [Belgium], Taneli Kuusisto [Finland], Tony Aubin and Olivier Messiaën [France], Karl Höller [Germany], Alan Rawsthorne [Great Britain], Sándor Vares [Hungary], Boleslaw Woytowicz [Poland], Constantin Silvestri [Rumania], Igor Stravinsky [Russia], Manuel de Falla and Ernesto Halffter [Spain], and Willy Burckardt [Switzerland]. Those who will appear in person to conduct their own works are Stravinsky, De Falla, and Halffter.

As usual there will be various special events. The troupe of "Polish Ballets" recently seen at the New York World's Fair will appear. Directed by Arnold Szifman and Bronislava Nijinska, they will produce representative Polish works by composers ranging from Chopin to Szymanowski. Benedetto Marcello, an Italian composer of note during the 18th century, will have the second centenary of his death commemorated by the performance of one of his fifty psalms. A "retrospective" concert consisting of 20th century scores "of world significance" will be played by the Vienna Philharmonic orchestra directed by Hans Knappertsbusch.

Unfamiliar music by Wagner will be given in the salon of Palazzo Vendramin on the Grand canal where the German composer died. Another undesignated but equally historical Venetian palace will be the scene of chamber music concerts. Regular programs will be performed in the Teatro la Fenice. Two Goldoni comedies, "Il Campiello" and "Il Ventaglio," are to be mounted in one of the city's squares.

"The Devil to Pay."

Late July will witness a new production by the Canterbury Theater festival in London. Under its auspices Dorothy L. Sayers' "The Devil to Pay" will be staged. The author, best known for her excellent mystery tales, here presents her version of the Faust legend. This is the third work to be commissioned and offered by the festival, the others having been T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" and Miss Sayers' "The Zeal of Thy House."

Sunset Symphony

Early in July the National Symphony orchestra began a "sunset symphony" series at the water gate in Potomac park, Washington, D. C., under the direction of Hans Kindler, regular conductor of the ensemble. The list of guest conductors for the season includes Efrem Kurtz, Enro Rapee, Alexander Smallens, Charles O'Connell, Rudolph Ganz, and Reginald Stewart of Toronto.

400 Guests at Wedding of Gloria Gartz and Jack Vilas

By Judith Cass

One of the most charming weddings of the summer was held on July 7 at Jerseyhurst, the Lake Geneva, Wis., home of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Frederick Gartz Jr. of Chicago. The bride was their elder daughter, Gloria; the bridegroom, Logan A. (Jack) Vilas Jr.

The former Miss Gartz was the third generation in the family of the first Richard T. Crane to be married at Jerseyhurst. Four hundred guests, many from Chicago, others Lake Geneva neighbors and townspeople, were invited to the ceremony.

In back of the cameraman as he snapped the general view picture dozens of uninvited guests floated in rowboats, canoes, and motor boats, interested spectators all.

Some of the wedding guests remembered the first wedding at Jerseyhurst, when the bride's great-aunt, Miss Frances Crane, was married to Frank R. Lillie. That ceremony took place in July, 1895. Twenty-three years later Miss Josephine Crane, a cousin of the bride, was married to Harold C. Bradley.

This summer's bride, tall and dark, was a stunning picture in white satin. Every one could see and hear the bride and bridegroom repeat their vows after the Rev. E. A. Batchelder, rector of the Lake Geneva Episcopal church, for the ceremony took place on the veranda in plain view of the lawn, where the guests assembled.

On another part of the spacious lawn stood a dancing platform, where most of the guests spent the late afternoon and early evening. As the daylight faded illumination was provided by hundreds of Japanese lanterns and red balloons containing small electric bulbs. The sight from the lake, and even from across the lake, was beautiful.

Traveler Finds War Talk Peps Up Britishers

By Cousin Eve.

LONDON. London is more than ever exciting this year. Threats of war have bucked everything and everybody up, the London season is going sketchily on, and Americans are popular indeed. But not so numerous.

How one came here from Denmark is a story, short like Emerson's "short but simple 'flannels' of the poor." One came away from Copenhagen with the British Chamber of Commerce, on a train called the "Flying Englishman." We crossed the beautiful islands of Zealand, Funen, and Jutland with an hour or so of ferry, and at 6 embarked upon the North Sea in a not large gray boat. The North Sea is no pet of mine, and it looked surly that night and cold. The Danes have the thrifty habit of doubling passengers up in the cabins, and I told the ticket man I'd be frightfully annoyed if she put any one in with me. "But," said Lord Riverdale laughing [he stood by], "then it will be too late." The former Arthur Balfour was right. They did put some one in, and she asked at once if I were a good sailor.

"Perfectly terrible," said I truthfully. Whereupon the lady vanished, and was seen no more.

The North Sea has a lot of tricks up its sleeve. But this time didn't play them, so I was able to disembark at Harwich and proceed by train to London.

The country we passed seemed in a very fury of building and industrial production. It was nearly nine when I taxied up through Trafalgar square, and still bright daylight. Huge signs covered the stone pillars of old monuments and churches, saying variously, "Your Country Needs You," or "Enroll Now." Always the same warlike theme with many literary variations. In Piccadilly instead of beautiful window boxes of daisies, petunias, and bright geraniums of yesteryear, were other great signs along the entire frontage. They said that the property is valuable and was for sale. Park lane has had its façade lifted out of all remembrance, like some ageing belle who tries to change her face with surgery, and gets something instead unnatural and strange. The lovely old street along Hyde Park dear to Thackeray and other Victorian novelists, is a precipice of brick and steel. Hotels and apartment houses tower in place of the suave elegance of the old shining mansions of dukes and bankers. One's heart quails with the loneliness of it all, of Green park and Hyde Park, nearly flowerless, and stricken with warlike trenches from end to end. And this is July in London!

The world is moving fast these days. The old-fashioned inn that I like down Knightsbridge way, near the American embassy, has changed its spots and become Italian instead of British. Fashion now swoops into it, eats French cooking and seems content. Little red divans line the walls, the napery is bright blue, the waiters have toothy Italian smiles, the patrons find seasoning in their food and seem to like it. But now and again a hidebound Briton is heard ordering his plain boiled potato. Tall, beautiful girls sweep in with their hair waving on their shoulders like the 17th century, their high sprung noses and profiles something to rave about, their rainbow skirts rippling around them.

London still is London! Lord and Lady Ilchester have had a dinner and ball at Holland house for debutante Rosamond Cubitt. King George and Queen Elizabeth were there. Holland house is now one of the few historic houses left in London. The Great Pitt, who was Lord Chatham, lived here and Lady Rachel Stanhope, a niece, was his hostess. The gardens and park are magnificent and it took an hour to arrive so great was the crush of motors for the Ilchester party. The dinner was upstairs and when the king and queen descended the tapestried grand stairway to the dance at midnight, there was a solid mass of young girls, of the bejeweled and tiaraed women, and older men of Mayfair in attendance, but, owing to war service and training camp duty, notably few dancing men. George and Elizabeth were a wonderful picture as they came down, the king in white tie and tails, the lovely queen radiant in white tulle all shining gold spangles, a tall flashing crown of rubies and diamonds, and ruby and diamond necklace, and bracelets of magnificent stones.

Other great debut balls this week were the duke and duchess of Sutherland's party at Sutton place for a niece, Lady Elizabeth Leveson-Gower, and the duke and duchess of Marlborough's dance at Blenheim, which was the great party of the season. It was to introduce their eldest daughter, Lady Sarah Spencer-Churchill, and a thousand people were invited. Blenheim is a vast yellow stone palace by Vanbrugh and its façade was flood-lighted, as were the fabulous gardens, created by the last duke. Spotlights were thrown on individual oaks and larches in the park, and the Chinese rooms opening on it had a buffet and braziers in case the night turned cold.

The duke and duchess had a dinner for sixty before the ball. Royalty came in the persons of the duke and duchess of Kent, the latter lovely in pale yellow gauze with diamond stars in her hair. Yellow has vogue this year. The debutante wore a bouffant frock of yellow tulle flecked with gold stars and Rosamond Cubitt, too, wore yellow at her ball. Miss Spencer-Churchill, named after the first duchess, is a tall willowy brunette, with a long swanlike neck, recalling Mme. Balsam her granny, formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt. The duchess of Marlborough, who was Lady Alexandra Cadogan, still is slim and exquisite. She wore shadowy black lace over white, held at the shoulders by magnificent dark aquamarines set in diamonds. They are the stone of the hour in London. Among the beauties, the duchess of Buccleuch in silver tissue, Mme. Balsan in silver brocade, Lady Rosse with gorgeous emeralds, and Countess Spencer in gray tulle with the diamond E on her shoulder. She is lady in waiting to queen of England. They danced many waltzes and Lambethed toward the end and the dance programs had "Sarah" written across them. London still is London.

The American ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy this year had a Fourth of July garden party at 14 Princes Gate. This is the house given by J. Pierpont Morgan many years ago to the American people for their ambassadors. Four windows wide and four stories high, it has a wide graveled sweep in front and a stretch of garden behind with ample lawns.

The way of it was to go to the chancellery in Grosvenor square and present yourself for an admission card. This was done almost like going to the state department at Washington for a passport. After sitting in line a clerical young man gave every one the works. After asking for the passport in a firm voice he fixes you with his awe-inspiring eye. Finally he inquired if I was an American. After a few more personal questions which the interlocutor said he was obliged to ask I received a card that was invitation and admission, too. The hours were 4:30 to 6.

The Kennedys received the long file of guests in a large room on the first floor of the embassy. At hand were the usual footmen, bowls of red white and blue flowers and the American flag over the front door. Mrs. Kennedy is a pretty brunette, becomingly frocked in palest beige with a petunia sash and small hat. Several young daughters were assisting, down in the mêlée of the garden party which seen from the high terrace of the house was very mouvementé. There were hundreds of Americans there and yet they say there are no Americans this year in London. A long striped tent like the one used at Buckingham palace ran the entire length of the garden and chairs were scattered about small tables for the 1,500 guests.

The first persons I met were Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, now of Santa Barbara, and Princess Rosalei Selfridge Wiasemsky. Then the Paul Noyes saw me and Mrs. Kirk Cuthbert and the Mitchells of Greenwich. I had last seen them at Nassau in February. Anne Mitchell looking a delightful young Juno, was sailing about with Viscountess Selby, one of the modish beauties. Anne was arrayed in pale blue tailored silk with a thoroughly English pale blue contraption in her hair. She stands six feet two, has a baby face and black hair in a longish mop. Lady Selby I can't describe with adequate language. The whole effect is original, quite aquiline as to nose, lips Chinese red, eyes jade green, face pale, red hair long, smooth and curling under on the shoulders. There I've tried at it.

Lord Selby is the beau jeune homme of London, wonderful blue eyes, uniquely turned out. The two girls were going on to Count Metternich's they said, adding that he was the handsomest human being in all London. "You ought to know him," said Lady Selby. "I'd like to," said I. "You shall," they purred as they went away.

There was no music or band at this party, which was rather a relief after shouting at people all the time I was in Denmark. Capt. Roger Kirk, the new naval aid at the embassy and his delightful wife, were doing their bit with the guests and there, too, was "Buzzy" Hewes of Washington and Fanny Ward, the famous music hall favorite, who is older than she looks, or looks older than she is. Whichever it is, she's famous for it. John Kennedy, the ambassador's son, is a gallant lad, and Eunice Kennedy, this season's attractive bud, has a charming manner and is pretty.

There were quite a few British present. One American girl said she made the error of asking Admiral Lord Cork and Orrery if he were an American admiral, he being the top of the British navy! There also were lovely Milly Bromwell, now Lady Bailey, and her husband, Rear Admiral Sydney Bailey, one of England's most beloved sailors.

I lunched one day this week with the Baileys at the Carlton club, which is a political club, in magnificent quarters at No. 1 Pall Mall. It is an 18th century house with its state apartments done by Adam; a wonderful secluded library, a lounge and a dining room upstairs where members entertain their families and guests. Here and there with their heads close in rapt talk were members whispering secrets into each other's ears. And one couldn't help wondering whether it were all about Danzig, or some other imbroglio of the moment, or just conversation. Lady Bailey, who is tall, slim, and beautiful [born in Illinois] and first cousin of Adlai Stevenson, had been down Thames all the morning on a visit to Greenwich. The Baileys had lived there for some years in the magnificent palace of Charles II., and now with all this war excitement, Greenwich is the style again. King George went down on Sunday, not with a royal barge as went the Stuarts and Tudors, but by motor boat. The palaces at Greenwich, which are the most sublime architecture in all England, have been done over and a famous old hall has been reconditioned for the uses of sailors. The king, who is a naval man, met his old comrades in the service and inaugurated the hall by lunching there with naval aids and equerries. Lady Bailey had been in and out of boats for hours but looked as if she had come out of a Bond street band box, in blue with blue furs.

On my way to luncheon I had gone along Whitehall to the foreign office, which was simply buzzing with life. Owing to press of foreign affairs six men were working where two had been before. It's a vast old structure, and the young man who led me to the exit remarked that he would show me out by the foreign minister's own special back door. As Lord Halifax is the man of the hour in London, it was very amusing, not to say historical, to be using his own private entrance.

The great hotels of London are a part of the social structure. But the routine is set. One takes tea at the Ritz, and one is amused. One lunches at Claridge's, and one is entertained. One sups at the Berkeley and does a spot of dancing, and the whole bright world is there. Next season the order may be reversed. If anything could be better than lunching at Claridge's I don't know it. The food is marvelous. I think we had sole and raspberries, I forget what else.

We had coffee later in the lounge, and up came Princess Thurn and Taxis, who was going home to America to settle something about her taxes. And "Buzzy" Hewes, too; and, later, Anne Mitchell, who was floating about as modern girls float, half of her luncheon one place and the sweet course at Claridge's.

Word came that Neville Chamberlain, the prime minister, was speaking on Danzig in the house of commons, so I gave up the day's fashionable wedding, that of Diana Mills and Patrick Smuly at St. Margaret's, and the following reception, plus a cocktail party, and hot-footed by taxi to Downing street. There waited the prime minister's car in front of No. 10 as I dashed into the foreign office for the papers in the case. This was a ticket to the members' gallery. Crowds were waiting outside parliament, and there was the usual routine inside of sign and countersign, and climbing time-worn narrow stairs, until I sat in state on the hard wooden gallery seat. There was tense excitement.

Finally Chamberlain rose. He is a tall thin man, with a well turned head, black hair a little gray at the temples, and looking much younger than I imagined. His features are of the eagle, and his voice clear and resonant. He read calmly and dispassionately the British stand on Danzig, and you could have heard a pin drop in the house of commons as he finished. The gist of the statement was that, if the Poles believe they have grounds for war, Great Britain will sustain them. At the end one opined there would be no war over Danzig.

Today all England is quoting Frederick the Great's phrase on the disputed maritime town: "Who rules over the mouth of the Vistula and the city of Danzig is more master of Poland than the king who reigns there."

Aloha Lodge Is Old Drake Home on Lake Geneva

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS. Aloha lodge sounds as if it might be the name of an Hawaiian cottage or at least that its architecture might be strongly influenced by the Hawaiian style of building. On the contrary, Aloha lodge is one of the few homes around Lake Geneva that might be termed pure American in type, being in fact early American or colonial. It has six great white pillars reaching from the veranda floor to the second floor roof, a distance of nearly twenty-five feet.

Leaded in the glass of the unusually wide paneled door that enters the house from the carriage drive is the name, Aloha lodge, and the date of its building, "1900 A. D." It is said the "A. D." stands for three things: First, for "Anno Domini"; second, for Annie Drake, and third, for Annie Daughaday, the maiden name of Annie Drake, who is Mrs. Tracy C. Drake. While two of the three meanings of "A. D." were given in laughing affection by Mrs. Drake's sons, Francis and Carlos, the old saying that many a true word is spoken in jest comes to mind as one becomes familiar with the charming house and comes to realize that it still is dominated by the spirit of the woman for whom it was built.

Howard Shaw, the architect who designed several of the homes at Lake Geneva, also designed Aloha lodge for Mr. and Mrs. Drake. At the time it was built the Drakes had recently returned from a long stay in Hawaii, where they had come to know rather intimately the deposed queen of the islands, Liliuokalani, for whom they felt a deep sympathy. Their fondness for the queen and for Hawaii influenced them to the extent of naming the new summer estate Aloha lodge, and their lake steamer for the queen. This steamer later burned at the dock and was replaced by another steam yacht which was christened Aloha.

There is little that is not wholly American, however, at Aloha lodge, unless one excepts the antique English chairs and the English squire's round drum table that dates from 1759, the oriental rugs, or the beautiful hand blocked French cretonne in a large rose cluster pattern on deep cream ground. The cretonne covers chairs and davenport and forms the window drapes in the living room.

From the colonial exterior one would expect upon entering to find the traditional large central hall running the length of the house with drawing room, library, music, and dining rooms opening therefrom, as well as the stairway to the upper floors. But in the lodge no space has been wasted by halls and walls. One enters the wide door, adorned by a huge brass knocker, and comes directly into the large living room, twenty-four feet wide by forty-four feet long. Across the room from the carriage driveway door is another door, a long glass door that opens upon the wide veranda which runs the entire width of the house and looks upon the lake, hardly more than fifty feet from the water's edge.

At the extreme end of the living room is a large fireplace, also of the colonial type, with a white mantel. The woodwork throughout the house is pure white. The living room, combining as it does the features of library and music room, contains a rosewood grand piano, radio, phonograph and an unusually attractive and tuneful Swiss music box, as well as a charming arrangement of well filled open book shelves.

While Aloha lodge is now the summer home of Richard Grant Lydy of Chicago, when members of the Drake family are in the middle west they never fail to visit the house. It still contains most of the original furniture, rugs, etchings, bric-a-brac, etc. All is placed exactly as it was when the Drakes lived there, even to a lovely statuette of Mrs. Drake as a bride, done in Carrara marble.

The stairway, which opens directly from the living room, is unusually attractive because of its very simplicity of plain wide mahogany balustrade and slender white spindles. A group of windows with small panes overlooks the screened breakfast porch from the stairway. On its upper landing stands a mahogany grandfather's clock in such a position that it is reminiscent of the clock on the stairs in the old colonial Longfellow home at Cambridge, Mass.

A wide arched doorway connects with the dining room, a charming room, semicircular at one end, with white paneled walls and French windows. The windows open on to the veranda and look out upon the lake and a giant weeping willow tree, whose trailing branches sweep the water. There is another very tall clock of mahogany and satinwood in this room, an antique that announces phases of the moon and days of the month in addition to its regular duties. The house might be called the house of many clocks, as there are a number besides those mentioned. Another worthy of attention is an old-fashioned bronze and marble mantel clock, a family heirloom, that was chiming the hour in the Springfield, O., home of Judge George Grant Lydy when his son, Richard, the present owner of the lodge, was born.

Many of the young men and women around the lake at the present time recall the good times at the Drake summer home years ago when the older son of the house, Carlos, and Wilmarth Ickes, grandson of Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, the next door neighbor, gave tent shows on the adjoining lawns. The boys dressed in Indian or pirate costumes. They still speak of the pleasant children's parties that were given each year in August on the occasion of the birthday of the younger son, now the Rev. Francis Drake, when fifty or sixty youngsters gathered under the Japanese lanterns on the lawn at Aloha lodge. One of the annual events was the story telling of Georgene Faulkner, the story lady, who always arrived from Chicago to spend the day.

Diva to Sing "Butterfly" at Festival Lunch

By Betty Browning.

Edith Mason.

In the old French Opera house in New Orleans, with its shuttered boxes and memories of Mardi Gras balls, a 6 year old girl heard her first opera. Then, a year or two later, in the east, she heard Caruso and Farrar in "Madame Butterfly."

The little girl never forgot those two experiences. She grew up wanting to be an opera singer, especially wanting to sing "Butterfly."

That is why Edith Mason, that little girl, now a singer famous the world over, has decided to sing the aria from "Madame Butterfly" at the third annual Chicagoland Music Festival luncheon to be held under THE TRIBUNE'S auspices Friday noon, Aug. 18, in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

She is to sing another song no less beloved, also for a particular reason. Carrie Jacobs Bond, the composer, is coming from her home in Hollywood, Cal., to be the special guest at the luncheon. Miss Mason will sing Mrs. Bond's song, "I Love You Truly."

It was amusing to Miss Mason, fresh from a triumphant concert in Grant park the preceding night, to recall last week the girlhood days when she longed to study music and had to concentrate on geometry and geography instead. Like most American mothers, Miss Mason's mother wanted her daughter to have a well rounded education, and so young Edith studied at finishing schools, the Ogontz school and Miss Wright's, and became an expert swimmer, rider, and tennis player at camp in summer.

Her singing had to be sandwiched in between classes and good times. Roommates used to tell her to go and sing down by the gymnasium because that was the most remote spot at school, Miss Mason recalled with her flashing smile.

Her audience at the music festival luncheon, by the way, will find Miss Mason delightful to see as well as to hear, for she is small with delicately chiseled features and the deep blue eyes and curling dark hair of her English and Irish heritage.

Once out of school, recognition came swiftly to Edith Mason. Still in her teens, she made her debut unexpectedly with the Boston Opera company when the prima donna fell ill, and she, as understudy, was called on to sing Nedda in "Pagliacci." It was the only rôle she then knew.

Her mother took her to Paris, where she studied a year with Bertram, the Spanish maestro. Then she returned to New York and worked under Victor Maurel, the great baritone, for whom Leoncavallo had written the prologue to "Pagliacci," and for whom Verdi had written the rôle of Iago in "Otello." Soon the young girl made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera company.

"I escaped the struggle for recognition that so many singers must face," Miss Mason remarked. "Everything came easily for me." She told how her debut at La Scala Opera house in Milan came without warning through Toscanini's invitation while she was living there. An autographed photograph of Toscanini is on the piano in her living room overlooking the lake high above Lake Shore drive.

But Miss Mason later described the hard work back of her success. Not satisfied with mastering a score of rôles, she has mastered the languages in which they were written and can read, write, and speak French, German, Italian, and Spanish as well as English. She also knows Portuguese. She still studies voice several hours each day. For days before a concert she undergoes special training, gives up smoking, keeps to a 9 o'clock bedtime hour.

Her operatic career has taken her to almost every European country, to Mexico, and South America. Her most trying experience was singing in "Carmen" in a Mexico City bull ring before an audience of 40,000 Mexicans. It was a hot day and the audience resorted to frequent drinks of tequila.

As the potent national drink began to take effect most of the 40,000 decided they wanted a real bull fighter and bull instead of the "Toreador Song." But in spite of their calls and shouts the opera company kept bravely on, Miss Mason recollected.

Now that she is back again in the middle west, where she was born—Miss Mason likes to call herself "just plain midwestern"—she is trying her hand at housekeeping for the first time in her life.

The opera singer likes, too, to garden, and it's not rare flowers, but carrots and beans, that she is growing on a plot lent her by a friend in Lake Forest.

Social Season in France Hits Normal Tempo

By May Birkhead.

PARIS. To return to Paris after a few weeks in the homeland is to see, first of all, that it is difficult to realize the degree and kind of tension without being on this side. It is not so much that there is alarm, especially in France, for heads here seem very cool, but there is much wonder about how it all is going to turn out, and no one seems to see an easy solution.

While no great feeling of optimism reigns here, the social season, which is drawing toward its close in Paris, has been animated. One still can hear echoes of the Grande Nuit de Longchamp, with the floodlit midnight races capping the big round of festivities, and public and private entertainments carried on almost as if there were no shadow of international crisis.

The leading hotels have many guests, yet there are fewer reservations a long time in advance than in years past. Americans arrive, almost without notice, or signalizing their presence but a day or two ahead of their coming.

William C. Bullitt, American ambassador, who recently was in the United States, has been giving receptions at the embassy in the Avenue d'Iena, and at his summer residence at Chantilly, where Americans and French have gathered in hundreds.

The doings of the duke and duchess of Windsor have been much featured in recent weeks, partly because they furnish facile copy to the quilldrivers at a time when so many celebrities are little in evidence, and partly because of the extraordinary curiosity that their activities still occasion. At the moment there is renewed speculation as to whether they may not take up their residence in England in the autumn. Perhaps one guess is as good as another. The rumor now is that the duke will not insist on full royal status for his wife, in case their return to England can be arranged. In the meantime, they have reinstalled themselves at the Château de La Croë, at Cap d'Antibes, where they will be in the orbit of the Cannes summer season, which promises to be very active, not to say brilliant, what with social figures and stage and cinema stars from many countries in a setting where the summer heat always is tempered by the blue Mediterranean, and yachting, bathing, tennis, golf, and motoring, not to mention gaming and dining, impel to a continual round of entertainment.

Little Harbor Club Holds a Dinner-Dance

HARBOR SPRINGS, MICH. The lights of the Little Harbor club gleamed out into the night last Saturday for the first of the club's dinner-dances. The club orchestra, composed of seven young college men, is planning to play three nights weekly, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays.

As Saturday night generally is the most popular night for dinner parties, reservations were made well in advance. Among those making merry were Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lang, and Miss Nancy Otis and her house guest, Miss Cynthia Cleveland. Mrs. William Waller Jr. reserved a table for twelve of her young daughter Lucia's friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McIntyre and Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Wheeler and their friends shared a large table together. Mr. Wheeler's mother, Mrs. Robert C. Wheeler, entertained eighteen at another table.

The club has a most attractive place to dine. From the lounge three wide French doors open on a wide awninged terrace. Here one can sit at tables lighted by hurricane lamps and look out across the harbor. The view is picturesque; a gleaming circlet of street lamps shines around the harbor's edge and sailboat lamps bob up and down on the water's surface. Dancing is done in the lounge, which is flanked at either edge by a fireplace filled with blazing logs.

In Roaring Brook, adjoining Harbor Point, Mrs. Alden Rogers, the former Barbara Eldridge, is spending the month of July with her mother, Mrs. Harold Eldridge. This is the first summer in two years that Mrs. Eldridge has occupied her cottage. Near by Mr. and Mrs. Henry McIntyre and their young son, Robin, are spending a few weeks with Mr. McIntyre's mother. Around the 1st of August Mrs. McIntyre and Robin will move to Harbor Point to spend the rest of the summer with her mother, Mrs. Robert Wheeler.

Not far from Harbor Point is the town of Charlevoix, founded in 1843 and named for a French missionary and explorer, Pierre Francoix de Charlevoix. It has grown to be a remarkable resort. Situated right on the shore of Lake Michigan, and encompassing a good sized inland lake, Lake Charlevoix, it boasts of two resorts within itself. The largest of these is the Belvidere section. Directly across Lake Charlevoix from it is the Chicago club.

In Belvidere, at the Belvidere hotel, Mrs. Trigg Waller is spending a few weeks. Other guests are Mrs. C. A. Roth of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McMasters of Oak Park, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Alexander, and Mrs. Alexander Newton of Evanston.

The Chicago club is a group of beautiful homes surrounding a small clubhouse. Formed in 1880 by a stock company of influential Chicagoans, it has remained one of Chicago's most popular resorts.

An early newspaper description of the newly built clubhouse proudly told of water pipes running to each room, the water forced by a hand pump, and even dreamed of a windmill to replace the hand pump. The club also boasted a "gents' clubroom" and a fine culinary department.

Among the cottage owners spending the summer at the club are Mrs. Robert Stuart, Mrs. Soloman A. Smith, Mrs. A. Harris Whiting, and the John L. Kings. The A. B. Dicks have rented Mrs. C. Morse Ely's cottage. Near them the Dicks' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edison Dick, and their two daughters, are in the Edward D. Shumways' cottage for the month of July.

Other summer residents are Mrs. Soloman Smith's daughter, Mrs. Scott Bromwell, and her two children, Bunny and Scotty; the William B. McIlvaines, the Frederick H. Scotts of Hubbard Woods, the David B. McDougals of Geneva, Ill., and their three sons, David Jr., Bill, and Alex.

Unlike any of the other resorts in this locality, cottage owners in the Chicago club dispensed with the worries of grocery bills and cooking, and instead enjoy delicious meals at the clubhouse.

The club's yacht club is a center of activity. Several years ago the young members of the club purchased six small sailboats known as the Northern Michigan class one design. At the same time the members of the Little Traverse Yacht club, situated in Harbor Springs, purchased twelve of these boats. Once a year, as a rule, the L. T. Y. C., made up of resorters from the Point and Wequetonsing, holds a series of races with the Chicago club yacht club. Yachtsmen say that it is a real test of sailing ability to be able to sail in the currents and winds of an inland lake after the freeness of Lake Michigan.

The Harbor Point clubhouse held the first of its weekly buffet dinner-dances on Thursday. There was a larger and extremely danceable orchestra and a professional couple entertained during dinner. After dinner was served from long buffet tables, the dancers gave a short demonstration of familiar and new steps. Members of the audience were chosen to dance around the floor with one of the professional couple, and attractive prizes were offered to the best man and woman contender.

Little Care Aids in Laundering a Robe of Woolen

To launder a woolen robe, prepare a large quantity of lukewarm, sudsy water. Put the robe in and press the suds all through it. Repeat twice, then rinse the robe in clean, lukewarm water three times. Squeeze out what water you can with light pressure, then roll the robe in a bath towel. Leave it for an hour, then shake it out and lay it on a flat surface, in the shade, to dry.

Massachusetts Solons Face "Battle of Sexes"

Massachusetts' fight over "working wives" has threatened to develop into a "battle of sexes." The new twist came suddenly as a legislative committee prepared to hand down its report on bills designed to eliminate married women from state jobs.

The Norman Leffingwell Gosses [Jean Armour Ericson of Chicago] who were married at simple rites in the Church of the Angels on the evening of July 14, spent last week at the Gosses' Lake Arrowhead lodge and sailed this week for a month in Honolulu. In the autumn they will go to Paris to live. The bride wore a princess gown of ivory satin and an exquisite rose point veil which her mother brought from Paris and which was worn by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Armour Morris, at her own wedding. It was covered with a film of tulle which also formed a face veil and for her bouquet the bride carried white orchids and stephanotis.

The bridesmaids wore marquisette over taffeta and crinolines. A large reception was given in the old home of Mrs. Ericson's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. M. Cochrane Armour in Linda Vista avenue.

Off to the Pacific northwest, their itinerary including Lake Louise and Banff, are Mr. and Mrs. Diran Nahigian [Virginia Gertmenian of Pasadena] who will turn eastward soon to make their home in Evanston after Aug. 15. They were married July 8 in the gardens of the bride's sister, Mrs. Gregory Lawrence. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nahigian of Evanston, parents of the bridegroom, were here for the event. They left this week for Illinois after a sojourn at the Huntington hotel.

At home soon in Glendale, Cal., will be Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith Youngs [Ann Ellwood Lewis] who were married July 7 at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James Ellwood Lewis in East California street. Her father was the late Mr. Lewis of De Kalb, Ill.

The bride wore the wedding gown of her husband's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Hiram H. Parker of Belvidere, Ill., and an heirloom Spanish lace veil. Mr. Youngs is the son of Mrs. Alexander H. Keith of Glendale, and the late Capt. Homer Smith Youngs. The bride is a graduate of the Flintridge school for girls and of Briarcliff in New York.

Fair-inspired travelers who are taking in the Golden Gate International exposition at Treasure Island in San Francisco include Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and her daughter, Paulina, who are now at the El Encanto in Santa Barbara. Saugatuck Art Gallery Opens Oils Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett.

One of the pleasant art colonies near Chicago is at Saugatuck, Mich. The village is an attractive one. The winding road through it [we counted twenty-two turns on one trip] is flanked by lawns, sleepy houses set back among flowers and shrubs, glimpses of the river through huge, shady trees and the heart of the town is a comfortable affair of a handful of stores and one or two charming tearooms.

Few towns its size boast an art gallery but Saugatuck has one. It has also at least two art schools, one under the gifted leadership of Cora Bliss Taylor and one that is connected with the Art institute of Chicago. The Saugatuck Art association opened its first exhibition of oils early this month. The artists represented are chiefly residents of Saugatuck though several have close associations with Chicago. Among those who are very well known in Chicago is Carl Hoerman who has three canvases hanging, one a brilliant composition blazing with color called "In the Land of the Navajo." It shows brick red crags and a solitary horseman herding his sheep through a pass.

John Kreihbiel of the Art institute is represented by two paintings of Saugatuck, one the woods in winter, the stark trees glittering with frost while the contrasting picture gives us Saugatuck in summer, windswept, the woods darkly green with a narrow trail outlined through the trees.

Cora Bliss Taylor shows one of her effective still life arrangements, "Mexican Hat," colorful and filled with beige rather than reds. The reds are skilfully suggested in a Mexican shawl and a reed basket of Japanese lanterns. Another canvas by Mrs. Taylor shows Saugatuck in winter like a frosted jewel in the setting of the Kalamazoo river.

Among the other artists who contribute distinguished work to the exhibition are William T. Greason of Detroit, Christiana Hoerman, Alice Mason [a graceful study in anemones], and Thomas E. Tallmadge, an "Interior."

The Saugatuck Art association announces a poster contest, open to every one, for the Saugatuck Arts Fête and Ball, Aug. 21 to 25, inclusive. The lettering is to be underlined; the subject of the decoration is left to the artist's imagination. The prize is $15 and the posters should be in Saugatuck by Aug. 5. Address your posters to Saugatuck Art association, Saugatuck, Mich.

The summer exhibitions opened last Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute to continue through Oct. 29. Chief among them, from the point of view of the many friends and the wide public the artist reached, is the memorial exhibit of paintings by Pauline Palmer, who died abroad last summer while on a trip conducted by Dudley Crafts Watson. Her death left a gap in art circles that will never be filled. She was one of our fine painters, a sincere and able craftsman. Besides that she was a genuine person, friendly, jolly, charming and amusing. She was a clever and fluent talker and one of the places she is most missed is at the dinner table of art organizations where her ready wit and fund of appropriate stories did much to lighten the threat of the usual "speaker-of-the-evening."

A memorial exhibition of Pauline Palmer's paintings was held in the spring at the Chicago Galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. The Art institute memorial exhibit runs along the same lines, showing her ability at portraiture, landscape, and still life. It did not matter what the subject was upon which she set her heart, in nearly every case the result was a distinguished canvas.

Carl R. Krafft died last winter. The Art institute is holding, too, a memorial exhibit of his paintings. Mr. Krafft was noted for his landscapes, particularly his winter paintings. They are full of vigor and enthusiasm and forceful color. His holiday pictures of sleighing or skating; his pictures of long white hills down which winged figures seemed to fly; his green firs and pines, snow laden; the logging wagons bringing out their glorious spoil over roads that fairly crackle with cold under the click of the horses' iron shod hoofs; a hundred winter scenes dance into memory at Mr. Krafft's name.

The single living artist whom the Art institute is honoring this summer with a one man show is Lester O. Schwartz, who is recently home from a painting trip abroad as winner of the Edward L. Ryerson Traveling Fellowship for 1937. The Art institute comment upon his show is: "It indicates that he has developed a high level of accomplishment and that his career should be watched with interest."

Another exhibit is the fascinating group of prints by Odilon Redon, comprising the Stickney collection. The collection is unique. Redon was a mystic and his lithographs and prints, in fact everything he did, was full of sensitive and delightful imagery.

''CALENDULAS''

Dorothy A. Keyes is showing flowers and still life, and Jerome P. Uhl, portraits, in the summer exhibition at the Drake hotel sponsored by All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

Little Theater Big Thing in Beverly Region

BEVERLY, MASS. With the approach of August, activities in the north shore colonies are taking on new zest, making the season a happy one for Chicago and midwest sojourners along the picturesque stretch of New England sea coast.

The little theater programs now are in full swing from Marblehead to Rockport, and this season the movement has spread to Newburyport. The offerings this summer are more ambitious than ever.

Many Broadway stars have been seen in the summer play houses this season, as well as those who have been featured in Hollywood presentations. The North Shore Players at Marblehead are presenting next week Helen Claire and most of her New York company in "Kiss the Boys Good-by." At the Bass Rocks theater, where the Mercury theater group is playing, "Ghost Town" will be the offering. At the Gloucester School of the Theater and at Newburyport, as well as at other north shore playhouses, plans are being made for new productions in August.

August always is an interesting month in art circles. Exhibitions were held this week by the Gloucester Society of Artists, the Rockport Art association, and the Marblehead Arts association. Other exhibitions are scheduled for next month.

Polo at the Hamilton yesterday afternoon was an attraction for many of the Chicagoans on the shore. The Myopia team played the Pittsfield four from the Berkshires. The Myopia team is one of the best in New England, and many interesting matches are arranged for the coming weeks.

One of the pleasurable events of the week was the fête given in the lovely gardens of Mrs. William H. Moore at Rockmarge, Pride's Crossing, marking the opening of the Massachusetts branch of the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China. Mrs. Moore and President Karl T. Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, chairman of the branch, received the guests. Dr. Tsune-Chi-Yu, Chinese consul general at New York, gave an interesting talk on the problems for the relief of China.

Thomas Leiter has joined his mother, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, and his sister, Miss Nancy Leiter, at Edgewater house, the Leiter summer home at Beverly Farms. Mr. Leiter, who is a well known yachtsman, will be at the Farms for most of the summer.

The John C. Meechams of Lake Forest, Ill., are at their Gloucester home for the summer. They will be on the north shore until late September.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill of Washington opened their home, Avalon, in Pride's Crossing last Wednesday afternoon for a reception honoring William R. Castle, former undersecretary of state and president of the National Cathedral association, and the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, D.D., canon of Washington cathedral. Members of the Massachusetts committee of the National Cathedral association, of which Mrs. Allan Forbes is regent, assisted the Merrills in receiving. Among them were Mrs. Louis Curtis Jr., Mrs. Samuel Eliot, Mrs. George Peabody Gardner Jr., Mrs. Guido Perera, Mrs. George E. Warren, Mrs. Rudolph Weld, Mrs. William Bullard, Mrs. Shaun Kelly, and Mrs. Charles Warren of Washington and Magnolia, who represents the women's central committee.

Mr. Castle is an authority on foreign relations. Dr. Stokes is one of the best known educators and clergymen in the country.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Robinson [Florence Crane] are visiting Mrs. Robinson's mother, Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., of Chicago at Castle Hill, her Ipswich summer home. The Robinsons have returned from a cruise to Bermuda and the West Indies in the schooner Swift of Ipswich, which was built at the Robinson yards at Ipswich last year. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Crane and their daughter are to be with Mrs. Crane at Castle Hill for the month of August.

Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter of Chicago are at the Burrage estate in Sunset Hill at Beverly Cove for the long season on the north shore.

Miss Evelyn Lilly, daughter of Mrs. Frederic Clay Bartlett of Chicago and Beverly Cove, has returned from a visit to Newport. Miss Lilly is one of the favorites in the younger set on the north shore.

Miss Ada V. Dallas of Chicago has been at Hawthorne inn in Gloucester for a north shore visit. Mr. and Mrs. E. Y. Horder of Oak Park have been at the new Ocean House at Swampscott for a July sojourn.

Miss Clara Winthrop of Manchester colony has left for a trip to Africa. Miss Winthrop plans an extended tour and will go to many little visited places. She has made many trips to this country, and has delighted north shore friends with the stories of her adventures and with the pictures she has taken.

All of the north shore colonies will be represented at the Nautical ball to be given Friday evening, July 28, at the Magnolia casino by the Marblehead Arts association. Decorations and costumes will be in keeping with the theme of the ball, which will benefit the Hooper mansion in Marblehead. Mrs. Nelson Aldrich is chairman of the ball, and Miss Emily Davis heads the committee in charge.

With the Eastern Yacht cruise to Vineyard Haven over, yachting at Marblehead again is one of the attractions of the season. The Eastern and Corinthian clubs are holding weekly races, and plans are well under way for Race week in early August, when all of the clubs will cooperate. Miss Nancy Leiter of Chicago and Washington continues to be one of the consistent winners in the races.

Tuna fishing in Ipswich bay is luring many of the colonists. The sport has increased in popularity in the past few seasons. Fish weighing 600 pounds or more have been caught. For years north shore residents went to Florida for tuna fishing. Today many are coming from distant parts of the country, hoping to make a record catch off the north shore.

The Count and Countess Francesco Guardabassi are arriving at Old Fort, their Pride's Crossing home, next month for a late season stay on the north shore.

The John Clays of Chicago are at their Eastern Point home in Gloucester for their usual long stay on the north shore. The Clays are much interested in yachting. John Clay Jr. and John Clay III. were among the winners this week in the Eastern Point Yachting club races.

The Beach club at Magnolia is giving a supper party at the club Sunday evening. The Harvard Athletic association motion pictures of football games last season will be shown. A series of supper parties will be held through this coming month.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira N. Morris Jr. and their children of Paris, France, are visiting Mr. Morris' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris of Chicago, at Eagle Head, their summer home at Coolidge Point, Manchester. The Morris home is one of the finest on the north shore, and the mansion house commands a wonderful view of the sea and shore.

Movie Star in Door County Theatricals

EPHRAIM, WIS. Door county summer residents welcomed the return of the Peninsula players by attending their opening production last week in record numbers. Interest in the initial performance, "The Circle," by Somerset Maugham, was heightened by the appearance of Miss Jacqueline Wells of Hollywood in the leading rôle. Miss Wells arrived unexpectedly with her friend, Mrs. Rodion Rathbone, the former Caroline Fisher, daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Rathbone. She and her brother, Richard Wylie Fisher, opened the theater in the garden three years ago. Mrs. Rathbone hopes to remain all summer, but Miss Wells is on call at the Columbia studios and may be forced to return west at any time. Miss Janet Matter of Winnetka and Ephraim again is working with the Players' production staff.

The Peninsula Arts association has launched an active program for this season. The first business meeting of directors and members, held at the Ephraim village hall, was followed by an illustrated lecture on birds by Harold M. Bailey, a Miami, Fla., naturalist, who is vacationing in Ephraim with Mrs. Bailey and studying the bird life native here.

Miss Ann Stevens of Montclair, N. J., and Miss Martha Hachmeister of Ephraim have been placed in charge of an art and crafts program for children, similar to the one last season under the leadership of Miss Stevens. Miss Katherine Scherstrom of Evanston and Sister Bay, secretary of the association, is already formulating an extensive and well integrated children's program for the summer of 1940 which will include musical and dramatic activities in addition to arts and crafts.

Mrs. William J. Wilson of Western Springs, who spends each summer and fall with her family at their farm near Ephraim, is the new head of the Garden group recently organized within the association.

Among the events being planned for the near future to which the public will be invited is a lecture on pearls by Otto H. Fischer of Appleton, Wis.

The Peninsula Arts president, Mrs. W. H. Ryan of Appleton, is having a reception for the association members next Sunday afternoon at her Fish Creek estate, "The Junipers." The following week the members have been invited to attend a recital at the Arens Music colony at the Pines, near Sturgeon Bay.

A. H. Fensholt of Evanston, an exceptionally well informed amateur astronomer, is installing a telescope with a 7 foot tube and 10 inch reflector at his Ephraim summer place in order to enjoy his hobby to better advantage. Of particular interest will be the opportunity to see Mars, which on July 27 will be nearer the earth than it has been for 15 years. Mrs. Fensholt and their daughter, Miss Dorothy, are spending the entire season in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hoffman and their daughter, Emily, of Winnetka were guests recently of Mrs. H. J. Green of Rogers Park and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Green of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Most of the young summer residents along the shore road north of Sister Bay were present at Jackie Friedlund's 11th birthday party Wednesday at Shadow Lawn, his father's estate, where a buffet lunch served on the badminton courts was a feature of the occasion.

Miriam Eleanor Chesham Is Fiancee of Paul Borel

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Chesham of Oak Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Miriam Eleanor, to Paul Borel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Borel of Kansas City, Mo. Miss Chesham attended the Chicago Conservatory of Music, where she majored in voice. Mr. Borel was graduated from the Kansas University Engineering school, and received his master's degree from Harvard.

When Chicago Was Young:

Letters of early settler tell of Chicago.

By Herma Clark

One of the delights of conducting such a column as ours is receiving letters from readers who find items of interest in family archives. This week we are surrendering a good deal of our space to extracts from letters sent us by Oliver Everett of De Kalb, Ill., these being written to Mr. Everett's grandfather, Dr. Oliver Everett [first living at Cummington, Mass., and later at Dixon's Ferry, now called Dixon, Ill.]. The writer of the letters quoted was Rufus Everett of Princeton, Ill. Note the references to Chicago in 1835. The spelling in the old letters is preserved.

From Rufus Everett, at Princeton, Ill., to Dr. Oliver Everett, at Cummington, Mass., dated Aug. 23, 1835.

"Smith" [their brother, James Smith Everett] "got along here about the first of June. He had a very bad time in coming, owing to the heavy rains. Col. Bryant arrived here about the 20th of June and I beleive is tolerably pleased with the country. Illinois for farming, I think, stands unrivaled. Chicago is a very flourishing town. They have a pretty place for a town and with some expense a tolerable good harbor. The country immediately west of Chicago is rather low and wet for 8 or 10 miles and principally prairie. It is said that there were five hundred dwelling houses and stores put up there last season. When I was there last spring lots that were selling for $1,000 are now selling for $5,000 and $6,000."

From Rufus Everett at Princeton, Ill., to Dr. Oliver Everett, at Dixon's Ferry, dated Jan. 23, 1837.

"They had a grand housewarming at Smith's the other night. Nearly all the young people on the prairie were there. Poet Bill [William Cullen Bryant] was in uncommon good spirits."

"Princeton, Putnam County, February 20, 1837.

"Dear Brother:

"Speculation runs high as ever in these parts, although they have no very favorable news from Vandalia relative to the division of Putnam County. Lots in town have risen greatly since I came down. Cyrus [Bryant] has sold twenty acres of the east end of his place for $25 an acre, and ten acres from the other forty that he sold has since been sold for $30 an acre. A pretty high price for unimproved prairie. The people in this settlement have had a grand frolic lately. They held it at the Langworthys'. The Dominy preached and talked so much against social parties, sleigh-riding, etc., that it was thought best to get up a dance so that he might have some occasion, or at least some little excuse for a most unmerciful Sabbath Day whiping.

"To-day all hands went to the meeting expecting to take without mercy. But contrary to all expectations, he never said a word about it. I think the fellow knew they wanted a whiping and was determined not to gratify them. His being so contrary is quite a disappointment to many. They may get it yet. It is possible that he is only mustering his forces and ammunition to renew the attact with redoubled fury. The party was very respectable as to numbers and characters. There was something said at one of the meetings that very much offended Newman, one of the traders in this place. He is about setting up a grog-shop close to the meeting house. He has the frame ready to go up and says that he will have liquors there in a week. Arthur Bryant is teaching singing in this place. He has a pretty large school."

A charming letter from Mrs. Edwin B. Harts, Chicago, tells of the complex nature of a summer exodus to Mackinac in the eighties. It was a delightful trip of two days and two nights.

"Believe me," writes Mrs. Harts, "when I say that no trip to Europe took more thought and preparation. Family dog, horses, cow, feed, coachman, maids, all went along. When one mentions the cow, modern friends gasp: 'What! Not a cow?' Well, what was to be done with that useful animal? Store her, until our return."

"The L. L. McArthur family was another that did about the same things. They always went to Mackinac, though not quite so far back.

"I have not seen the old Mission Tabernacle [Morgan and Indiana streets] mentioned. Few are left who remember that, except Mrs. Martin Foss, mother of Mrs. Thomas E. Wilson. The old church still stands. Abraham Lincoln's two little boys attended this Sunday school and were in my father's class. The latter was Superintendent for twenty years."

Mrs. Harts also tells us that she has a picture of Lincoln sent her father by Mrs. Lincoln, in token of her gratitude for his goodness to her little boys, his Sunday school pupils, in the old Tabernacle Church.

A CHICAGO QUIZ.

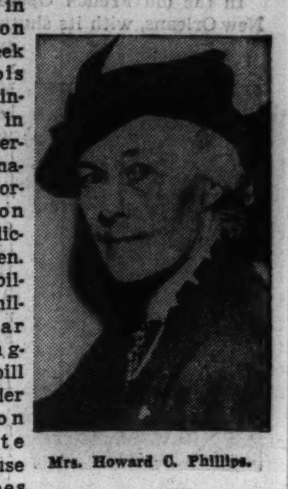
NewRepublican Club Petitions Against Waste

A petition to congress to stop wasteful government spending was placed in circulation last week by Illinois women interested in Pro America, new national organization of Republican women. The 2 billion 660 million dollar spending-lending bill now under discussion by senate and house committees was the immediate cause of the action. The petitions are being forwarded by air mail to congressmen in Washington, D. C.



Mrs. Howard C. Phillips.

"We believe that this country's depression, with its resulting hardship and unemployment, has been and is being unnecessarily prolonged and intensified by lack of public confidence in the economic policies of the administration," the petition reads.

"We are convinced that this lack of confidence is the direct and inevitable result of wasteful government spending and experimentation," the petition continues.

"We are convinced, furthermore, that such spending by federal, state, and local governments will ultimately impair our government's credit and will render it impossible for the government to give adequate relief either to the farmer or the unemployed.

"Therefore we do respectfully petition you to curtail governmental expenditures and to abandon pump priming programs and punitive systems of taxation, so that once more the confidence which engenders prosperity may be restored to the United States," the petition concludes.

The idea of the petition originated with the California chapter of Pro America, which on July 10 decided to launch a state-wide petition with one million signatures as its goal.

Mrs. Howard C. Phillips of Winnetka, a member of the board of the Women's Republican Club of New Trier, is among the Illinois women who are circulating the petition in this state. When Mrs. A. C. Mattei of San Francisco, Cal., national president of Pro America, visited Chicago recently Mrs. Phillips was made chairman of an informal committee to investigate the possibility of organizing Pro America in Illinois.

They Are Still Debating Over King Tut Curse

By Frederic Babcock.

LUXOR, EGYPT

King Tut died when he was only 18; so his place in world affairs at the time couldn't have been very important. He would have been forgotten long ago had not excavators entered his tomb some 3,400 years after his death. What they found there, and what happened to them afterward, resulted in one of the sensational stories of modern times. And it made Tut-ankh-Amen of Thebes one of the best advertised monarchs in history.

Today the traveler wishing to get at the bottom of the story can find, in the Museum of Egyptian Antiquities at Cairo, about everything he wants to see. Nearly all the vast treasure discovered in the boy king's tomb has been taken there. Only the mummy remains where it was unearthed. In this desolate valley, 400 miles up the Nile, there is little left of the splendor that must have surrounded a Pharaoh who could accumulate such a great store of wealth. Neither is there much new evidence to clear up the controversy over the curse alleged to have been pronounced by Tut on any one who might violate his resting place. A visit to Luxor brings one to the tomb and the mummy, but not to the secret lying behind them.

The story of the curse has been told many times. Everybody knows by this time that when the sarcophagus was opened in 1923 the intruders found an inscription which was translated to read: "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of Pharaoh." Everybody knows of the mysterious deaths that followed. But not everybody is agreed as to the relationship between the inscription and the deaths. Some experts insist that the whole thing is a myth—the product of mystics who can spin an intriguing yarn, but who are not overly bothered with the truth.

Yet the fact remains that within two months after the tomb had been entered sixteen years ago Lord Carnarvon, leader of the expedition, was bitten by an insect, and the bite, strangely enough, was fatal. Another member of the party succumbed to an unexplained malady. A third was drowned in the nearby Nile. There were twenty such deaths in all. Some of the victims were directly associated with the enterprise; the connection of others was rather remote.

The curse is supposed to have extended to those who did no more than look on the newly opened tomb. George Jay Gould, American millionaire, visited the excavations, caught cold, and died. Mrs. Evelyn Greely of Chicago came to Luxor, got a glimpse of what was going on, returned home, and committed suicide.

After each successive death the legend was revived. A French scientist, Dr. J. S. Madrus, was quoted as saying that eerie influences, exercised by the spirits of Pharaohs dead these thousands of years, were still at work in Egypt. Several of the victims were known to have expressed the fear that their violation of the tomb would bring fatalities. Dr. E. P. B. Weigall, one of the first to enter the crypt, said—some time before his death—"One of Egypt's dead queens still manifests remarkable powers."

Other members of the party have always scoffed at these fears. Lord Carnarvon was the financial backer of the expedition, but Howard Carter was the scientific brains. And Carter, up to his death—of natural causes—several years ago, maintained that there was nothing unusual in the series of tragedies following the opening of the burial vault. He said the curse was pure fiction and the stories about it not worthy of serious consideration.

Four years ago, after the death of James H. Breasted, the yarn cropped up once more. As head of the University of Chicago's Oriental institute, Dr. Breasted had been carrying on where the other scientists had left off. When an attempt was made to connect his passing with the Tut curse it was denounced by William F. Edgerton, associate professor of Egyptology at the institute. He pronounced the curse an "absurd superstition."

"When Dr. Breasted entered the tomb," said Dr. Edgerton, "his efforts were devoted to studying and recording the contents, and especially the seal impressions. According to the ancient Egyptian ideas, this work was wholly beneficial to the dead Pharaoh and would have been looked upon by the Egyptians as an act of piety toward Tut-ankh-Amen, since it tended to 'preserve his name.'

"Dr. Breasted had nothing to do with the events leading up to the discovery of the tomb. When he was present it was merely as an observer, called in by Lord Carnarvon and Mr. Carter in the interest of science. If he 'violated' the tomb, then thousands of tourists have violated it in recent years."

Tut died in 1350 B. C. Two hundred years later workers excavating a tomb for Rameses VI., just above that of the boy king, threw dirt and débris down the slope, completely covering the earlier burial place. The sarcophagus lay beneath the surface through the centuries—until Howard Carter came along. His studies convinced him that Tut's tomb would prove one of the finest of the many in the Valley of the Kings. He interested Lord Carnarvon in his idea and the two went to work. After nine years of excavations they struck gold—literally. They unearthed the great crypt and penetrated the outer chambers to the sacred room where lay the mummy and three coffins. One coffin was of pure gold.

Golden and jeweled relics of priceless value were taken from the sepulcher. Documents told of the lives and customs of the time, fourteen centuries before Christ, when Egypt was the dominant nation—and the Pharaohs therefore the dominant rulers—of the world.

The discovery became the talk of 1923, and of years afterward. It opened up a new field of excavations. Whatever of truth or falsity there may be in the legend of the curse, the defying of that curse resulted in a world-wide interest in things Egyptian. The scientists and excavators went to work with renewed energy—and they're still at it.

WHERE THE DEAD KING TUT WREAKED HIS VENGEANCE

The entrance to the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen, boy king of Thebes. When Egyptologists invaded the sepulchre after it had lain undisturbed for more than 3,000 years they found the inscription: "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of Pharaoh."

New Clubhouse at Watch Hill Opens Season

WATCH HILL, R. I.

The completion and opening of the new clubhouse of the Watch Hill Yacht club and the Beach club are being made the occasion of general celebrations in the summer colony. The Yacht club always has been the headquarters for the young people, and a very liberal subscription was placed at the disposal of Commodore Geoffrey Moore and his committee to carry out their slogan "not to let the young people down," after their clubhouse was destroyed by the hurricane.

The new clubhouse covers the same dock as the old, but is more commodious. Its upper observation deck, where the racing may be watched, is popular. Last Saturday the Yacht club celebrated with an open house and held a program of races in which seven other yacht clubs took part. A marine pageant followed, and an informal dance in the evening concluded the program.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme, formerly of Chicago, who helped to start the Yacht club. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lihme, Harold Lihme, and Hubbard Phelps were others there. George Nichols, son of Mrs. George R. Nichols of Chicago, took part in the parade of yachts as one of the crew of Wally Herrick's yacht, Wiegehts.

Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps of Chicago, who is Watch Hill's leading golfer and champion of the Misquamicut Golf club, has been playing in the invitation tournament at the Shennacossett Golf club of New London, and in the woman's four ball handicap at Misquamicut club this last week. Mrs. Phelps is expected to defend her title next week in the annual women's championship here.

The annual costume party of the Misquamicut Golf club will be held next Saturday night. Members are invited to "come as a song."

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, who have been spending July at the Hill, have left for Greenwich, Conn., to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. V. Turck of Wilmette have arrived at the Ocean House for their annual visit.

Peter Gratiot, who has been visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Alfred C. Martin, has left for Winnetka, and will return in August with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Lynn A. Gratiot.

Joseph T. Spang, of Brookline, Mass., has been the house guest of Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps, and participated in the golf at Misquamicut club.

Rose Festival to Begin on Aug. 30

Oregon sightseeing this summer will center around Portland and from there will branch out to national forests, national parks, trout and salmon streams, mountain tops, and ocean beaches.

The state's attractions include the Columbia River highway, Mount Hood and its new Timberline lodge, Crater Lake National park, Oregon caves, Bonneville dam, and the seal rocks along the Pacific coast.

Annual celebrations include the Portland Rose festival, Klamath Falls log rolleo, Salem Cherry festival, Mount Angel Flax festival, Lebanon Strawberry festival, and Astoria regetta. The Portland festival this year will be held Aug. 30 to Sept. 2.

More or Less Personal

Two new trains will leave Chicago next Friday for New York. The Pennsylvania's Trail Blazer is to steam out at 2:30 p. m., daylight saving time, and the New York Central's Pacemaker half an hour later. Both are all-coach trains of an advanced type.

A group of midwesterners, intent on seeing France, Germany, and England in the autumn, will sail on the Europa Sept. 9. C. F. Kobelt of Chicago will be in charge of the excursion.

Roy P. McNair last week joined the staff of the American President Lines' Chicago office. He has lived in China for eighteen years, has lectured on oriental affairs, and has spent several years aboard the President liners.

It was announced yesterday that Barbados had been added to the itinerary of the Rex cruise to Rio de Janeiro next winter. Other places to be visited are Curacao, La Gauayra, and Trinidad. The liner will sail Feb. 10 on a twenty-six day journey.

Harold Crary, vice president of the United Air Lines, will return late this week from Lima, Peru, where he has been attending an aerial conference. His flight embraces some 15,000 miles.

The Chicago and Southern Air Lines have opened an additional office at 37 South La Salle street.

As a part of the campaign to build up Chicago as a summer resort center, the Illinois Central has arranged a series of short vacation tours to nearby points. The Kankakee river, White Pines State park, and the Mississippi Palisades are a few of the objectives. The railroad is also running a series of tours through the Illinois countryside. Passengers are taken to Matteson, where they rent bicycles for trips into the country.

Chicago's steamship and travel agents, banded together under the name of the Bons Vivants, will have an old-fashioned basket picnic next Sunday at St. Paul park, west of Evanston.

The first of a series of two weeks' excursions to Colorado and Wyoming via Union Pacific stages will leave tomorrow morning. Passengers will arrive in Cheyenne in time for this week's Frontier Days celebration.

Gunboat Aquarium.

During the world war an old gunboat was sunk off the coast of Bermuda to block a channel against possible invasion. It now forms a huge natural aquarium, and visitors may view hundreds of fish through the holes in its protruding top deck.

Wisconsin's Zoo Open to Visitors for the Season

POYNETTE, Wis.—Wisconsin's 457 acre outdoor zoo and game and fur farm here is once more open to visitors, with the largest display of wild birds and animals in the farm's history. There are many wildlife babies, including bear, deer, porcupine, wolves, skunks [they're safe!], and an albino fawn.

Among additions to the wild life zoo are two wolverines [once common in Wisconsin], and a black wolf, both sent from Alaska. Other animals on display are raccoon, porcupines, foxes, badgers, opossums, fishes, beaver, marten, many native game birds, and several pair of original jungle fowl, parent stock of the world's domestic poultry.

To increase the educational facilities of the farm, especially for children, the state conservation department has laid out a tree exhibition section where it will be possible to see all of Wisconsin's native forest trees, both hardwoods and conifers.

The farm has picnic spots and regularly conducted tours. Poynette is twenty-five miles north of Madison.

No More Tips for Porters in Paris

PARIS.—Americans arriving here this summer need have no worries about the proper gratuity for porters. Tipping has been abolished in all Paris stations and replaced by a fixed scale of fees. One suitcase, for example, will be carried by a porter for 3 francs [about 9 cents]. Each additional suitcase will cost 2 francs [about 6 cents]. For registered luggage carried by truck, there is a charge of 5 francs a piece and of 2 francs for each additional piece.

British Tract in Virginia.

The British empire can lay technical claim to a large tract in Chesterfield county, Virginia, known as the "Bermuda Hundred." In 1615, when the Bermuda company received its official charter from King Charles I., the Virginia company sold its claims to the islands. Later it was found that there was less land in the islands than the Virginia company had been paid for, and in compensation the concern granted the Bermudians a tract which is still known as the "Bermuda Hundred."

Michigan Has About as Many Deer as Cows

It is estimated that Michigan's vast recreational area will entertain twelve million visitors this year.

The state has only a few fine zoos, but there is an exceptional opportunity to see native animal life in its natural environment. During the twilight hours the motorist often counts as many as ten deer feeding along the edge of the highway. This is not unusual when it is considered that Michigan has almost as many deer as it has cows. Approximately 800,000 of them roam the forestland—more than any other state in the nation. Headlights of cars also occasionally pick up the flashing eyes of wildcats, coyotes, and bears.

Michigan fish aren't penned up in aquariums, but can be seen in their native haunts. A trip down the Au Sable, Rifle, or Manistee rivers—or any large Michigan trout stream—will reveal to the canoeist many schools of fat German brown trout darting about in the water, or the pink sides of a rainbow, or the white edged fins of the brook trout. Inland lakes likewise are huge natural aquariums of fish life, particularly black bass, bluegill, pike, and pickerel. In the spawning season even six foot sturgeon may be spotted wallowing along the shores of such a lake as Mullet.

Ring necked pheasants, partridges, ducks, woodcock, and quail are not huddled in a coop for the glances of the curious. Instead, a quiet ramble in the Michigan woodlands reveals glimpses of bird life in their natural environment.

A continuous round of jubilees, carnivals, and fiestas dot the state's calendar. There's Chesaning's "Showboat," Gaylord's Water carnival, Traverse City's Cherry festival, Port Austin's Bass festival, Tawas City's Perch festival, and scores of others celebrating tulips, lumberjacks, music, agricultural products, smelt runs, winter sports, and the like.

The Voice of the Traveler

THE WORLD'S LARGEST BUILDING.

Urbana, Ill., July 17.—To the Travel Editor: If you are unable to give me the information I desire, will you please direct my letter to the department in THE TRIBUNE that can answer it?

What I wish to know is this: Which has the greater area of floor space—the Merchandise Mart in Chicago or the Empire State building in New York?

When I saw the picture of the Merchandise Mart in last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE, I made the remark that the building had more office space than any other in the United States, and my friends from Massachusetts and Connecticut immediately stated that one from their part of the country—namely, the Empire State—surpassed it. This battle goes on continually.

I hope you can help to prove the matter one way or another. If I'm not right, then some Chicagoan has been boosting his city a little too zealously.

RUTH E. SLABAUGH,
University of Illinois.

[Editor's Note: Miss Slabaugh's letter was referred to Al Chase, real estate editor of THE TRIBUNE. His reply was: "The Merchandise Mart has 4,000,000 square feet of floor space and is the largest building in the world. The Empire State building is the tallest, but has only 1,895,000 square feet of floor space. The Merchandise Mart is virtually all occupied. Our information from New York has it that from the 43d to the 87th floor the Empire State building is still unfinished and unrented."]

VICARIOUS TRAVEL.

Chicago, July 18.—To the Travel Editor: I can't resist telling you that THE TRIBUNE Travel section is one of the finest I have ever read. As I have always dreamed of being a vagabond with plenty of time and without any worries, and as my greatest desire is to tour the world, your pages are a part answer to my dreams. MELBA ROEHL.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Urbana, Ill., July 2.—To the Travel Editor: We are patients in a sanatorium and would appreciate hearing from those who are on their vacations and have time to send us a card. Our address: Outlook Sanatorium, R. R. 2, Urbana, Ill.

MAXINE SMITH,
JUNE BARHAM.

Normal, Ill., July 6.—To the Travel Editor: I have been a patient here for nearly a year. I'd like very much to have my name put on your shut-in list. Any mail I received from your readers would help so much in passing away the hours I must spend in bed. Address Fairview Sanatorium.

[MISS] PHYLLIS PEASE.

Normal, Ill., July 3.—To the Travel Editor: I read your column for "shut-ins" in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE and should like very much to have my name published there. I feel that mail from outsiders would surely shorten my stay here. My address: Fairview Sanatorium.

[MISS] LOWELLA EXTON.

Louisville, Ky., July 4.—To the Travel Editor: Please publish the name of a woman who has been a shut-in for nearly a year and probably won't ever walk normally again. Letters would mean so much to one who can't walk or take a vacation. Her name and address: Mrs. Charles Forgey, 736 South Fifth street, Louisville, Ky. A. G.

Chicago, July 3.—To the Travel Editor: Will you please place my name in the shut-in column? I am 18 years old and have been in bed for the last two years. I would enjoy very much to hear from travelers from all over. It would do much to relieve the monotony. My address: 211 East Kensington avenue. [MISS] BERMA DE SANTA.

Cork Tree for Ferdinand.

Munro Leaf, creator of "Ferdinand the Bull," has built a permanent residence in Bermuda. Bearing the name, "The Cork House," the property has a live cork tree, imported from Spain.

Paul Bunyan Fete to Begin July 27

LAONA, Wis.—Forest county's third annual Paul Bunyan Logging exposition will be held in Laona, an old lumbering town in the heart of the Nicolet forest big timber resign, July 27 to 30 inclusive. Laona, with one of the highest elevations in Wisconsin, is a rendezvous of hay fever sufferers.

The four-day fête will be filled with the demonstrations of lumberjacks—chopping, hewing, peeling, sawing, skidding with oxen; of rivermen birling, driving, and running logs; two world championship matches, sawing and chopping; a parade, and concerts by lumberjack bands. A Paul Bunyan mess hall will serve meals in regulation lumber camp style.

Triumphal Arch at Orange.

Travelers shouldn't miss the Roman remains at Orange, France. When Queen Victoria first saw the triumphal arch there, she exclaimed: "As soon as I get to Paris I shall go to the invalides and tell Napoleon that the triumphal arch in Orange is infinitly grander than the one he put up in Paris."

Foreign Navy to Invade Michigan!

GRAND HAVEN, Mich.—The third annual United States Coast Guard water fête will be held in Grand Haven on Aug. 3, 4, and 5 to commemorate the 149th anniversary of the founding of the service. It has been expanded this year to a three day festival, with a home coming day on Aug. 3.

A sham battle between land and water forces is planned as a dramatic spectacle at Grand Haven state park on Aug. 5. A supposedly foreign navy will appear off the coast and be repulsed by military forces, including infantry, machine guns, and howitzer companies.

Daytime parades, a Venetian Night water parade, dinners, dances for the Coast Guardsmen, competitive races, exhibitions by Coast Guardsmen, and swimming and diving events are also on the program.

Restricted Immigration.

Bermuda has retained its charm by rigidly restricting immigration and the establishment of certain types of "undesirable" businesses. Before a person can buy land there he must obtain permission of the government, and he cannot become a permanent resident until he has lived there ten years.

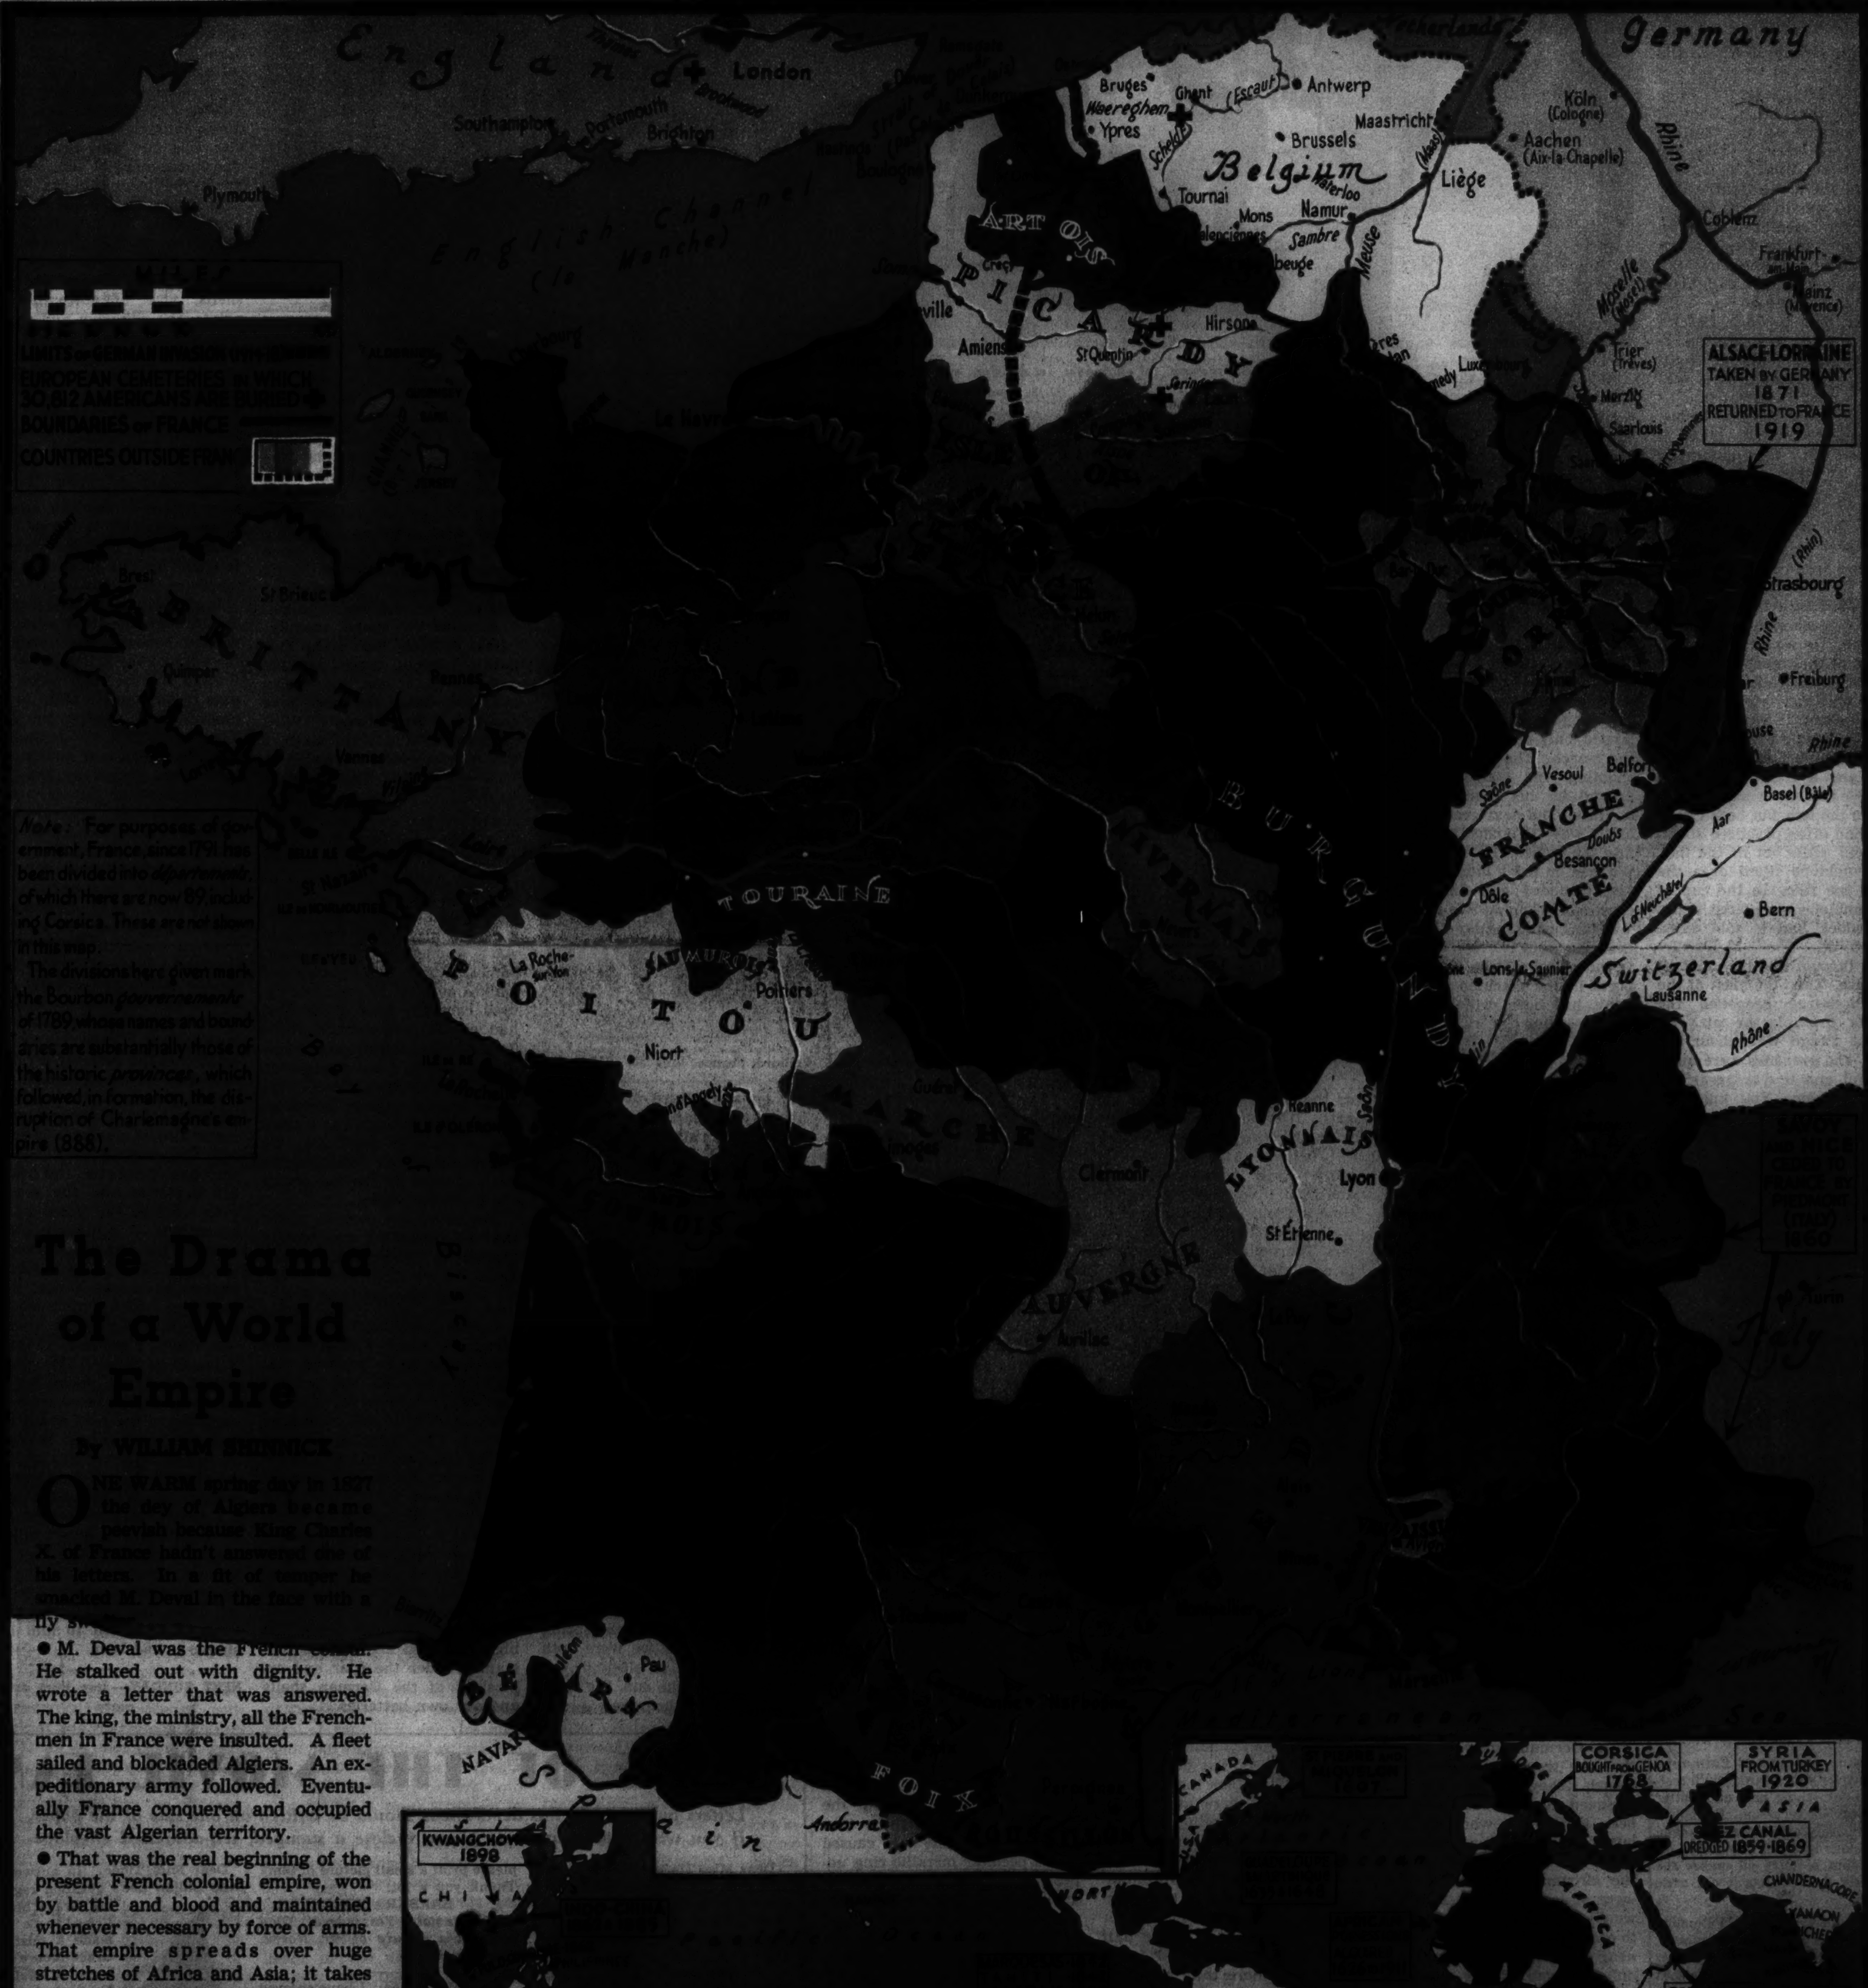
France Keeps What She Gets!



Note: For purposes of government, France, since 1791 has been divided into départements, of which there are now 89, including Corsica. These are not shown in this map.

The divisions here given mark the Bourbon gouvernements of 1789, whose names and boundaries are substantially those of the historic provinces, which followed, in formation, the disruption of Charlemagne's empire (888).

The Drama of a World Empire

By WILLIAM SHINNICK

ONE WARM spring day in 1827 the dey of Algiers became peevish because King Charles X. of France hadn't answered one of his letters. In a fit of temper he smacked M. Deval in the face with a fly swatter.

● M. Deval was the French consul. He stalked out with dignity. He wrote a letter that was answered. The king, the ministry, all the Frenchmen in France were insulted. A fleet sailed and blockaded Algiers. An expeditionary army followed. Eventually France conquered and occupied the vast Algerian territory.

● That was the real beginning of the present French colonial empire, won by battle and blood and maintained whenever necessary by force of arms. That empire spreads over huge stretches of Africa and Asia; it takes in a bit of South America and many strategic portions of Oceania. It contains 4,617,579 square miles and 70,000,000 inhabitants—hardly a pauper's share of the world for a nation of 42,000,000 with a European homeland of 212,569 square miles.

Cantigny—A Corner of the World War

Fly Casting with High Explosive

● This is the fourth instalment from the book "Cantigny, a Corner of the War," by Captain Evarts, 18th infantry, 1st division, A. E. F., and reprinted by courtesy of the author and Charles Scribner's Sons, the publishers.

By Capt. Jeremiah M. Evarts

(Copyright: 1938: By Captain Evarts.)

THE 28th infantry came into the line in front of Cantigny on the 26th of May. They were to take the town on the 28th. The 2d battalion of the 18th infantry (my battalion) was to act as support and we remained in the line. On the morning of the 27th the Germans pulled a daylight raid on the company of the 28th next north of my platoon.

I went over to Corp. Cesak's trench to watch the raid. Things seemed to be going all right with us. The raiding party was having a tough time of it.

Cesak and Geroux and I stood watching. They had taken a few shots with their automatic rifle, but the artillery had thrown up so much dust and smoke they could not go on. One of us noticed a movement on the hillside opposite us about 200 yards away. The movement proved to be a German sniper. He was in a little trench shaped like an L, each side about eight feet long. He would walk up to one end of the trench and shoot, then he would walk around the corner and down to the other end and shoot. It was like clockwork.

There was a box of rifle grenades and a tromblone in the bay. We had never used any of them in the line, but both Cesak and I had often practiced shooting them while out of the line. The tromblone fitted over the end of the rifle. In the cup of the tromblone you placed a grenade which had a hole bored through it. The rifle bullet passed through the hole and set off a fuse. Then the blast of the rifle discharge propelled the grenade through the air. Its extreme range was about 250 yards. The grenades were quite powerful and it was great fun to shoot them. You knelt on your left knee and rested the butt of the rifle on the ground. You held the barrel firmly pressed against your right leg and got the range by raising or lowering the muzzle.

Any one of the three of us could have drilled the sniper with a rifle bullet very easily, but it would be fun to try out the grenades. So we got all set and started. Cesak and I took turns shooting strings of three. Like all snipers the German was a good soldier and he was completely concentrated on his job. We fired several grenades and all went over him. A couple of machine gunners beyond him thought a one-pounder was after them and got up and ran. We commenced to get the range. It was more or less like trying to make an accurate fly cast with a very long line. Finally a grenade landed only a few feet beyond the trench. The sniper stopped shooting and started to look around for his enemy. It was too late. The next grenade was on its way. It landed and rolled into the trench. He went down. We kept on firing in case he was just wounded and finally succeeded in dropping two more in.

Later during the day I learned that Dickie Conover, a school friend of mine, who was a corporal in the machine gun company, had been drilled by that sniper during the raid.

II. A Relief

It was the platoon's last night in the iron trench in front of Cantigny. The 28th infantry had taken Cantigny on May 28. The platoon and the rest of the company had been in support during the operation and the resulting counterattacks. The afternoon of the 30th we had gone over to Cantigny and later we returned to the trench about 9 o'clock that night.

The 16th infantry was making the relief. As I recall it, the relief was to start at 11 or at midnight. My orders were to proceed to Villers Tournelle and thence along the road to Rocquencourt.

The relief for the front line had started. Part of it had crossed the trench. I remember Duncan Frazer coming along in command of one of the last units. We talked a couple of minutes and then he went over to what was left of Cantigny.

Two o'clock came. The night had been quiet. By half-past two there was still no sign of a relief for us and no orders. There must be something wrong. The rest of the company had gone out.

The Germans knew, of course, that the trench was a support trench. They also knew it was occupied, for their balloons had been in the sky when we had left the trench that afternoon to walk over to Cantigny. Under the circumstances the chances were at least 1,000 to 1 that it would be more than unhealthy to occupy the trench inside of an hour and a half. We knew that only too well. There was only one thing left to do. So James and I laid out a new position some fifty yards in front of our wire and traced it in on the map.

It was after 3 o'clock when we had finished. I sent Bigelow with a message to battalion headquarters that the new position would be occupied and the trench abandoned.

We prepared to move and occupy a string of shell holes which were the new position. A runner appeared. He carried a message that there was to be no relief but that I was to proceed to Rocquencourt as quickly as possible in accordance with the original relief orders.

Well, it certainly was sensible not to relieve that trench, but it was a hell of an hour to proceed from there to Rocquencourt.

The platoon fell in, in single file at five paces, and I ordered the men to double time. It wasn't easy to carry a pack and a rifle or an automatic rifle and double time when one had been lucky if one had eaten what was called a meal once each twenty-four hours for a week. The platoon cursed and swore as they double timed along the path. It was about 1,000 yards from the iron trench to Villers Tournelle—perhaps a little more. Even if one were tired and weak it was better to double time a thousand yards than to walk down the road from Villers Tournelle to Rocquencourt in daylight.

It was about a quarter of four when we came to a fork in the path. To the right it led to Villers Tournelle. The left path skirted the village and somewhere along that path was a branch which led across wet, open land to Rocquencourt. One night going into the line to reconnoitre I had come in by that path instead of the road from Rocquencourt to Villers Tournelle.

I looked behind me. The German balloons were visible in the sky. The general's orders were to take the road. I had never disobeyed them. But if we took the road how many would get to Rocquencourt? The road was much longer, for it formed two sides of a triangle, while the path was the base. The road was much more likely to be shelled while the balloons might not see us on the path if we hurried. If we took the path and were shelled there might be a court-martial. But it was quarter of four. The bombardment would soon commence.

I turned to the left and hunted for the path. It had been dark the only night I had ever been over it. Now in the half light of early morning I found there was more than one path leading into that long flat on the other side of which lay Rocquencourt. Well, we would have to take one and take a chance. We took one that branched off near a tree. . . . It was the right one—or at least it led to Rocquencourt.

It seemed to be miles across that flat. We moved fast but the going was none too good and every one was tired. About halfway across the bombardment commenced. The back area was shelled. The road from Villers Tournelle to Rocquencourt was getting its share. Would they see us on the path? Perhaps not, as the visibility was still low. But, my God, suppose they did? I hurried on as fast as possible.

We had almost reached Rocquencourt. I began to feel safe. Suddenly a staff officer appeared from nowhere out of the grass beside the path and questioned me.

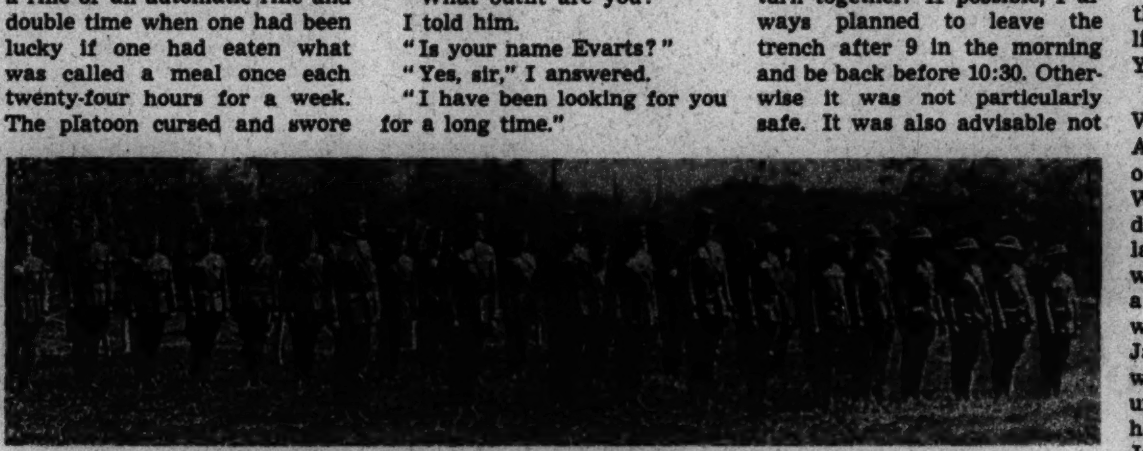
"What outfit are you?"

I told him.

"Is your name Evarts?"

"Yes, sir," I answered.

"I have been looking for you for a long time."



Review of battalion, 18th infantry, 1st division, for decorated men. Paillard, France, June 30, 1918.

"I only got my orders to clear out at about half-past three!"

"What are your orders?"

"And you disobeyed the orders?"

"Yes, sir. That is the reason why!"—and I pointed at the shells exploding along the road.

"Did you have any casualties?"

"No, sir."

"That's good, but I shall have to report to the general."

We went on to our billets and to sleep.

Well, I hadn't quite gotten away with it . . . but the platoon was out, and all alive!

(There was no court-martial. I received a reprimand. The platoon never saw the iron trench again—neither did any one else. An observer told me that it was blown off the face of the earth by heavy artillery between 4 and 5 o'clock that morning.)

III. Sergeant James of the Fourth Platoon

James and I knew each other thoroughly. We had been together only six weeks, but for two of those weeks we had lived in front of Cantigny in what the fourth platoon called the iron trench. (The name was caused by its peculiar metallic ring under artillery fire and because shell splinters ricocheted easily off its hard chalk sides.)

We had worked together and planned together for about fourteen days in that open trench. Fourteen years of ordinary life could not have been much longer. It was true that our daily life consisted largely of hunger, thirst, lice, wire, gas, machine guns, and particularly artillery fire. Nevertheless we understood each other as well as any two people ever did. He was the ranking sergeant of the platoon. He was brave and efficient. The men liked him and he led them well. He was proud of the platoon. In addition he was quiet, kind, and human.

Part of my duty was to report each morning at the captain's P. C. about 200 yards to the rear in the Bois de Cantigny. A path led from the right hand of the iron trench through the woods. There were no communication trenches. James would sometimes walk down the path with me as far as the support platoon where he would call on Sergt. Gaylor, a friend of his. I would go on and report—then pick him up and we would return together. If possible, I always planned to leave the trench after 9 in the morning and be back before 10:30. Otherwise it was not particularly safe. It was also advisable not to go and return at the same time each day. The Germans knew the path, of course, but they could not possibly see a person walking on it on account of the leaves and underbrush. Still an observer might see you get out of the trench.

I had made the journey every morning down the path for about two weeks. James, I suppose, had gone with me about five times. Nothing had ever happened. Usually on these walks we talked about putting up wire in the field in front of the iron trench. We were supposed to have at least five strands of tall wire and several strands of low wire. Each night we put up the wire and ordinarily by morning it was blown up. It was very exasperating. On this particular morning the previous night's wire had been destroyed. James had gone with me. I had made my report and we were on our way back to the trench. It was a warm spring day and I guess we were both anxious to get to sleep in our little holes in the sun. We were talking about the wire.

The path crossed a blind road and continued again through the woods. James was about six paces in front of me. He had crossed the blind road and was about to step in the path when I felt very queer. If I had been a dog all the hair on my back would have stood on end. Mine tried to. I never had the same sensation before or after during the war, although I often came just as close and closer to getting mine. I spoke sharply: "Halt, James! Don't go up that path!" James turned around and looked at me, his brown eyes surprised. He must have thought I was crazy. "Why, lieutenant! What's the matter? You do this every morning."

"I don't give a damn. Come! We'll get into this shell hole." About ten feet away was the lip of a huge nine inch shell hole. We lay down and had no sooner done so when a volley of 155s landed in the path. They were well spaced and each shell made a perfect hit. James' expression was wonderful. "All right, James, let's go." We got up and walked over to the path. We figured carefully how much time had elapsed between the time James halted and the explosions of the volley. I have forgotten how many seconds now. We took up our original positions, counted the seconds, and walked the distance to the holes. We figured that we would have been covered by the two inside shells of the volley.

Jim never got over it. After that he thought I was closely related to either God or the devil.

THE CROSSROADS

It was less than two weeks later. We were in reserve and were going to be relieved that night to rest. We had been in that sector twenty-three days, eighteen days in the front line. During the morning I had looked forward to the relief. During the afternoon I had begun to doubt. By 11 o'clock that night it would have been pleasant not to have been relieved. The bombardment commenced and it seemed as if all the artillery in the world was punishing both sides on that already punished four kilometer front. The night vibrated and flashed constantly under the roar and explosions of the German shells and our own batteries.

Villers Tournelle was directly behind us. We had to walk through it. I knew without seeing it that the road beyond was being shelled to hell and back again. There was a path which might not be so bad as the road, but how could we ever reach the path—for we had to walk through Villers Tournelle and the 210s falling there.

The night passed slowly. The grand crescendo of the bombardment increased—sometimes the air would carry the cries of the wounded men only to be blotted out again by the roar of shells. In a sense it was fascinating. But for God's sake we must walk through that darkness—and that idea was far from fascinating. One knew more or less how to live in the line, but in that darkness to be walked through there existed not only death but the unknown—the unknown batteries shelling one there, the different sound of some of those shells, the unknown danger points, the unknown and countless possibilities — all to be walked through and obviously not a night to walk through them.

But the relief was very late. Our counter battery work began to put out German guns and gunners.

The relief started. I lost my best friend among the officers of the regiment. Wounded men seemed to call from everywhere. It would be our turn soon. We must use our heads.

James was to lead the platoon out through the little village. I walked back of the trench to the edge of the little rise where I could see the road below me pass by the pond and up to the crossroads. I watched the 210s. Ten minutes before I thought there had been four guns firing. Now there were only two. The others must be out of action. One was firing at the crossroads—there were wounded men about to die there. The other was exploding about 150 feet away in the road on our side of the pond. They were exploding regularly but not quite simultaneously. It was a simple matter to tick the intervals off on the watch and estimate the distances. There was a good chance of getting the platoon by both places. Then maybe we could find the path—if we could only get by the crossroads.

Our relief arrived. James started out. The platoon had to make almost a semicircle to get into the road. I went back to the edge of the rise. The nearest 210 exploded and the seconds ticked off to the other at the crossroads. I could see James against the chalky surface of the road. The interval for the nearest shell was almost up. I hoped to God I hadn't let him go too far and that the interval was right. I shouted, "Platoon halt and lie down!" The column halted and lay down by the bank. The 210 roared over and exploded in the road about thirty feet beyond James. We waited two or three seconds and ran for the crossroads. The intervals were O. K. We found the path.

I went out with second platoon camion and didn't talk to James that night. The next day he came up to me and said, "By God, lieutenant, whenever you tell me to halt I shall lie down!" I never explained to him how simple it had been.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am 13 years of age and am able to judge good movies from bad ones. Seems to me that pictures like "A Man to Remember" should be publicized more. In our city it only ran second billing, but don't you think with a nice cast as it had that it should be noticed?

EDWARD NORRIS
'Discovered' by 13-year-old fan.

I saw "On Trial" the other day. In the cast I noticed a young man by the name of Edward Norris. He has what it takes! Let's see a lot more of him. And would you please print a small picture of him? Thank you a lot.

BARBARA ZOECKLER.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have enjoyed your column for such a long time, but have never had my ambitions stirred enough to contribute until I saw "Dodge City." I made up my mind it would be a flop. Instead I loved the picture.

Honestly, there is no word grand enough to express my opinion of Errol Flynn; he'll always be tops to me. The rest of the cast was well chosen and did excellent work, too. Sincerely yours. MERRY Y.

Editor's note: Glad you enjoyed the picture!

Dear Miss Tinée: In answering Miss Lillian Lee's question regarding Grace Moore I believe you made a mistake. Grace Moore was born in Jellico, Tenn., instead of Del Rio, and on Dec. 5, 1901, instead of 1903. I read your column every Sunday and find it interesting, and, believe it or not, this is the first error I ever discovered in your column.

GRACE MOORE
Her home town is Jellico, Tenn.

Many Film Stars Stepped—Literally—Into Fame

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood.

THE WRITERS of the ancient Greeks and Romans, who were more observant, perhaps, made a great to-do about the feet of their gods and heroes. It was Homer's original contention that Achilles, hero of the "Iliad," could only be brought down by a blow to one section of his body, the heel, and today, centuries later, the Achilles heel and the Achilles tendon are references in standard use. Mercury, messenger of the Roman gods, was winged-footed. In their emphasis upon the feet of their heroes the ancients proved that they knew their onions, and Hollywood bears them out.

Take, for instance, the careers which have been stepped out by the educated feet of Ginger Rogers, Sonja Henie, Fred Astaire, Zorina, and Eleanor Powell. The Greeks had a word for it, and this quintet of performers indicates that the word was directly related to swimming pools, Carthay Circle premières, and income tax payments.

You might think that a mechanical age would have minimized the importance of the feet, upon which the ancients placed such importance, but it is not so. The Chicago Tribune on my desk has stories on Johnstown, which won a Kentucky Derby on its feet; Foot Racer Glenn Cunningham, Dancer Nijinsky, and a dispatch from the east that Bill Robinson is scoring at the world's fair in "Hot Mikado."

Homer and Virgil, who knew about those things, would have written reams of copy about the size 5-B feet of Sonja Henie and the size 5½-B feet of Ginger Rogers. The foot sizes are B's, but the performances certainly are double A's, as you can discover at your neighborhood theaters. Miss Henie at the moment is manipulating her feet in "Second Fiddle"; Miss Rogers is doing a jitterbug dance in "Bachelor Mother."

These two youngsters came to Hollywood from points that are far removed geographically. Miss Rogers came out of the swirling heat waves of Texas, where she embarked on a stage career in consequence of winning a Charleston contest. Miss Henie came from the fiords of Norway in consequence of winning the Olympic figure skating championships so often that the Olympic officials had begun to consider barring Norway from competition.

Plus their common possession of inspired feet, the Misses Henie and Rogers had several other important qualities—ambition, the ability to concentrate, the ability to learn quickly that which was taught to them, and mothers of good taste and excellent judgment. Sonja's mother always is with her in Hollywood; Ginger's mother likewise always is at her daughter's side. Whether or not the daughters need the mothers at this stage of the game is problematical. Hollywood will tell you that Sonja Henie, for all of her feminine softness on the screen, has a grasp of business technique and organization that is startling. RKO will tell you that Ginger Rogers is the smartest judge of a script on that lot. There is very little that escapes her critical observation.

Pandro Berman, who picked Ginger Rogers to team with Fred Astaire in "Flying Down to Rio," gambled $1,000,000 on his judgment. Darryl Zanuck, who signed Miss Henie, gambled approximately the same amount.

Quite a few Hollywood stars have arrived in the movies on the strength of their pedal extremities, in addition to those I've named. Jeanette MacDonald started out as a dancer in Ned Wayburn's chorus line at the Capitol theater on Broadway. Alice Faye started on the same stage as a $30-a-week dancer. George Raft danced his way into pictures. So did Ricardo Cortez. Joan Crawford was picked for the movies when she was hoofing in the line of a Shubert musical. Barbara Stanwyck, like Ginger, was a Charleston dance contest winner in the east. Myrna Loy was a Fanchon and Marco chorine on the stage of the Grauman Chinese theater, and in the forecourt of that house, where her footprints are imbedded in concrete, Miss Loy scrawled: "To Sid Grauman—who gave me my first job."

● HERBERT MARSHALL was born in London, Engand, May 23, 1890, and was educated at St. Mary's college. His father, Percy Marshall, was a well known actor. Herbert worked as a clerk for a firm of accountants, but when he got a small rôle in "The Adventures of Lady Ursula" he made good and eventually became one of England's leading stage stars. In 1928 while appearing in a Broadway play he signed with Paramount. His first picture was "The Letter," opposite Jeanne Eagels. He's six feet tall and weighs about 160 pounds.

● FRANCES DEE was born in Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 26, 1907. When she was 7 years old the family moved to Chicago. She attended Hyde Park High school and the University of Chicago. During a summer vacation in California Miss Dee tried out for extra work. Her first film was "Follow Thru," starring Nancy Carroll and Buddy Rogers. Her big chance came with Maurice Chevalier in "Playboy of Paris." She's 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 108 pounds. In real life she's the wife of Actor Joel McCrea and has two children.

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Men and boys learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the seventh of the series.

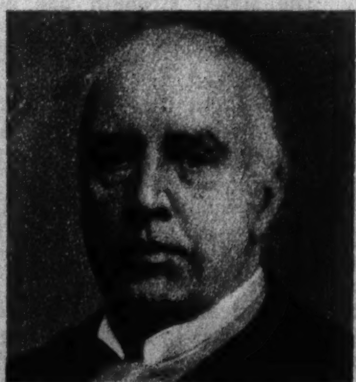
AT THE Republican national convention in Cincinnati in 1876 James G. Blaine was one of the principal candidates for the presidential nomination, but he was beaten by barely twenty-eight votes in the final ballot by Rutherford B. Hayes. The speech that placed Blaine's name before the delegates is one of the most famous in American political history. It was made by Robert G. Ingersoll, a master of rhetorical display and an outstanding orator of his day. His address on behalf of Blaine, which was delivered on June 15, follows in part:



ROBERT G. INGERSOLL

"Our country, crowned with the vast and marvelous achievements of its first century, asks for a man worthy of the past, and prophetic of her future; asks for a man who has the audacity of genius; asks for a man who is the grandest combination of heart, conscience, and brain beneath her flag—such a man is James G. Blaine.

"For the Republican host, led by this intrepid man, there can be no defeat.

"This is a grand year—a year filled with recollections of the revolution; filled with proud and tender memories of the past; with the sacred legends of liberty—a year in which the sons of freedom will drink from the fountains of enthusiasm; a year in which the people call for the man who has preserved in congress what our soldiers won upon the field; a year in which they call for the man who has torn from the throat of treason the tongue of slander—for the man who has snatched the mask of Democracy from the hideous face of rebellion; for the man who, like an intellectual athlete, has stood in the arena of debate and challenged all comers, and who is still a total stranger to defeat.

"Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen foreheads of the defamers of his country and the maligners of his honor. For the Republican party to desert this gallant leader now is as though an army should desert their general upon the field of battle.

"James G. Blaine is now and has been for years the bearer of the sacred standard of the Republican party. I call it sacred because no human being can stand beneath its folds without becoming and without remaining free.

"Gentlemen of the convention, in the name of the great republic, the only republic that ever existed upon this earth; in the name of all her defenders and of all her supporters; in the name of all her soldiers living; in the name of all her soldiers dead upon the field of battle, and in the name of those who perished in the skeleton clutch of famine at Andersonville and Libby, whose sufferings he so vividly remembers, Illinois—Illinois nominates for the next President of this country that prince of parliamentarians—that leader of leaders—James G. Blaine."

This speech was delivered by a man who probably used more rhetorical flourishes than any other speaker in our history—and got away with it. Notice, for example, the carefully worked out parallel structures in this speech. Notice the figure of the "plumed knight"—which is presented in one of the memorable passages of American oratory. Notice such loaded phrases as "torn from the throat of treason the tongue of slander."

Such speaking techniques are out of style now, and even in Ingersoll's day they woud probably have been effective only when spoken by a leader to sympathisers. Today audiences are more sophisticated, or at least speakers are afraid they are. Whichever is the case, the Ingersoll type of public speaking is at present as a matter of history.—Comment by Martin Maloney of Northwestern university school of speech.

W-G-N—Modern Radio Marvel

By LARRY WOLTERS

The radiator, or transmitting tower, from which emanate waves carrying W-G-N programs. White building is tuning house.

WE TAKE radio for granted. We sit in our living rooms and turn on a switch. We dial a station. If we like the program of the moment we listen. If we are displeased we turn it off. But we don't ask many questions about its magic.

If some one asks, "How does radio really work?" one can, of course, dismiss him lightly by explaining: "As I understand it, sound goes into the microphone, it's sent through the air, and then it comes out of the loud-speaker."

But it isn't as simple as that. No. But some day your curiosity may be piqued. It will be if you chance to drive by W-G-N's lofty new radiator some twenty miles northwestward from Chicago.

Let us say you are bowling along Rohlwing road (route 53) on a Sunday afternoon. Suddenly you behold a tower sweeping skyward. Up. Up. Up. Higher than Tribune Tower. As you draw nearer you realize that it is probably the highest thing you have ever seen. Soaring up 750 feet, this new transmitting tower is the tallest man-made structure in all Chicagoland.

Silhouetted against blue sky and fleecy clouds, it hangs there like a giant needle, suspended, perhaps, from the heavens by an invisible thread. On closer view you find that it actually appears to rest on the earth and that it is kept in position by two sets of guy cables that anchor it to the ground. A beautiful, graceful tower of steel.

As you drive on you may ask, "Why build such a tower?" The answer is progress. And progress in this instance means greater public service. W-G-N is committed, as are all broadcasting stations, to operate "in the public interest, convenience, and necessity." W-G-N meets this responsibility fully.

Since 1935 W-G-N has spent a million dollars to offer listeners the best station in America. Three-quarters of a million dollars went into its new studio quarters. During the last year W-G-N spent an additional quarter million dollars to increase the efficiency of its transmissions and to make its reception the best.

Already much evidence has been accumulated proving that W-G-N's objectives are being realized even more fully than had been expected and that they are meeting a wider public acceptance than ever before. Today no station has a finer signal or greater coverage.

If you happen to be a Chicagoan you may say that W-G-N's reception has been irreproachable. All you needed to do was to turn to 720 kilocycles and you got what you wanted. True enough.

But there were localities away from Chicago where reception conditions were not all that was desired. Listeners at a distance who sought programs bearing the characteristic stamp of W-G-N were sometimes disappointed.

Radio interference just when the bases are filled is an aggravation. These problems of unfavorable reception long challenged the ingenuity of the technical men of radio. Now they have found a partial solution in the vertical radiator.

The vertical radiator, or transmitting tower, has been found to be much superior to the old twin towers with antenna strung between them. Under the old system the wires drawn between the towers were responsible for the radiation, or dissemination, of the radio waves. The towers themselves in most cases served primarily to support the antenna and only secondarily had any effect on the transmission of program matter. Often special provisions were made to minimize the effect of the towers on the transmission.

The old antenna system used by W-G-N at its Elgin plant was of the "T" type, that is, it consisted of a vertical wire supported by a horizontal conducting member at the top. Its ends were insulated from and supported by two towers spaced 500 feet apart. Each tower was 250 feet high.

A few years ago it was discovered that an ideal antenna would take the form of a giant pole hanging from the sky. Such a position, it was found, would provide for the more effective dissemination of radio waves. But a giant "curtain rod" can't be hung from a cloud. And even if it could, how could one attach the wire carrying the potential speech and music from the studios to it for sending into the sky? So engineers did the next best thing.

They fashioned a tall tower and balanced it on end. This whole tower is electrified from this pin point to its tip. Radio waves fly out at every point and angle along its whole height. The tower itself has taken the place of the old style antenna.

The new W-G-N radiator, which rises 750 feet above ground, is of the vertical type. Its uniform cross section simulates the effect of a single wire or a cage of wires.

In building W-G-N's new transmitter plant many interests had to be considered, many obstacles surmounted, numerous problems solved. Several factors were involved in selecting the site. It is important, for instance, that the subsoil be suited for radio transmission. An ideal location would be a tidal flat where salt water could lap the base of the tower. It is imperative to avoid gravelly or sandy soil. Deposits of ore must be avoided. In this region tests show a good clay (truck garden) subsoil, which cleaves tightly, is the best. The site chosen answers to this specification.

Public safety, convenience, and pleasure had to be remembered. Old receivers and faulty installations in homes sometimes result in interference from nearby transmitters. Thus W-G-N sought a sparsely populated area. It found the most thinly populated area in the county northeast of Roselle. Fewer than 4,000 persons live within a radius of five miles.

Measures to protect the public safety: The radiator is built on a tract of land of 101 acres and at a point a quarter mile from the highway. Even if it were to fall—and that is not anticipated, since it is designed to withstand gales upward of 110 miles an hour—it could topple in any direction without striking the transmitter house or any other structure. The entire tract is adequately fenced to restrict trespassers who might be imperiled by high voltages.

The tower is almost five miles off regular air routes. It cannot be a hazard to air travelers. No radiators may be built exceeding 490 feet in height on or near regular flying lanes.

Radio towers on air routes must be topped by rotating beacons. When located off the regular flying courses flasher beacons are employed to serve as warnings to aircraft.

W-G-N's tower is surmounted by two 500-watt flashers producing alternate luminous periods of one second and darkness of one-half second. Lights of aviation red (a sort of orange red) are inclosed in prismatic globes. From the 650-level downward there are lights at 100-foot intervals. Since the lights have a life of about 2,000 hours, frequent climbs all the way to the top are required by a service man to make replacements.

The tower is painted with alternate bands of red and white to serve as warning in the daytime. Nothing in the public interest and safety has been forgotten.

Weighing 65 tons (130,000 pounds), the tower is supported by a single pivotal base of porcelain less than a foot in diameter. From this "pin point" base the shaft spreads out into an equilateral triangle ten feet on a side, and in this shape rises straight upward 750 feet.

The guy cables, also insulated from the tower, are so tightened that they exert a tremendous down pull on the insulator, which can support 900 tons.

These ground wires and tower together form what is called the radiation system. Its counterpart in the home on a smaller scale is the antenna, or aerial, and the ground to which the receiver is connected.

A W-G-N engineer gave this explanation of why a ground system is needed in conjunction with the antenna for good signals:

"To establish an electrical current in the tower a ground is needed.

"The current established in the tower is responsible for the signal. But the ground system is required for establishing the current. The ground system does no radiating; the tower does that."

The new type of radiating system is used because its form and dimensions have been found to produce greatly superior transmissions to those previously employed.

With the new type of antenna as a radiating element it is possible to produce a discrimination in favor of waves transmitted horizontally along the ground as compared to those sent angling skyward. This is important. This discrimination enables the station to increase and expand its "primary service area." (There is also a "secondary service area," which will be touched upon later.)

With the new antenna a concentration of radio energy in the space just above the earth's surface occurs, and a corresponding reduction of energy sent skyward results. This concentration is desired because it is this part of the radio wave which is used to serve territory within 300 to 400 miles of the station by daytime.

Beyond this distance the radio wave just above the ground (called ground wave by the radio engineering fraternity) becomes too weak and is no longer useful.

Anything that can be done to increase the strength of this signal will increase correspondingly the primary service area.

That the new radiating system has reached out farther is evident from reports of improved reception from every direction, particularly from Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, and, of course, Illinois.

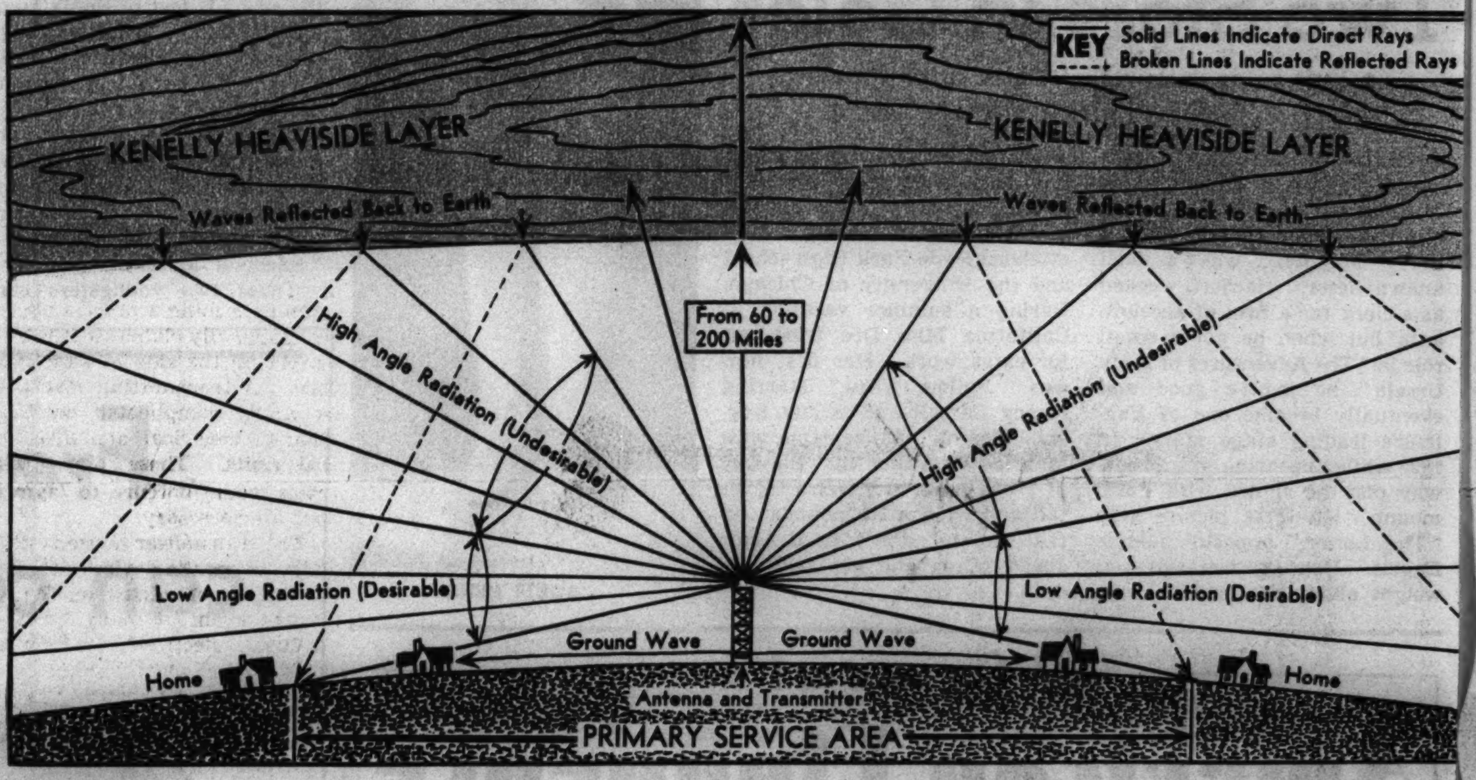

Diagram showing how radio waves are reflected by the Heaviside layer.

Strengthening of the ground wave has improved reception to points 400 miles or more away. The signal strength has been raised about 40 per cent and the primary service area substantially increased.

The night time transmissions also are improved by the new radiating system. To understand how, it is necessary to become acquainted with a phenomenon known to scientists as the Kennelly-Heaviside layer. This "layer" consists actually of many strata of gases one above the other up in the "ionosphere" which surrounds the earth like the stratosphere does. The Kennelly-Heaviside layer, named for its co-discoverers, varies in height from 60 to 200 miles.

Radio signals sent upward from the antenna at night are reflected back to earth at varying angles from these layers. A portion of the wave reflected back to earth is directly responsible for long-distance reception. This distant area lying beyond the primary service area is called the secondary service area.

In this area radio service is received almost entirely from the wave reflected from the upper atmosphere—from the sky wave—because the ground wave at this distance has been absorbed.

The distant reception is provided by that portion of the wave reflected back at low angles (see diagram for clarity). So this portion of the wave is desirable. But signals are radiated also from the antenna skyward at high, or steep, angles. These cause trouble. They come bouncing back to earth where the ground wave still has a useful value. (Radio waves bounc[e] back from the atmosphere muc[h] like a handball thrown agains[t] a wall. If thrown directly at th[e] wall the ball returns almost t[o] the spot from whence it wa[s] thrown. If thrown at angles [it] will return at varying distance[s]. The greater the angle the grea[t]er the distance.)

When a high-angle signal [is] reflected back to earth at a poi[nt] where the ground wave still ha[s] strength we have in effect a[t] this point two signals. The re[]flected sky wave at this poi[nt] will interfere with the groun[d] wave. This causes the undesi[r]able phenomenon known t[o] every listener as fading.

The fading effect may be co[m]pared to the reverberations o[r] echoes noted in a large, ba[re] auditorium. Reflections of [a] speaker's voice may make h[is] words unintelligible in certa[in] parts of the hall.

This radio interference will [be] most destructive at points whe[re] the two signals (ground a[nd] sky) are of nearly equal valu[e]. The affected area exists at t[he] outer boundary of the prima[ry] service area.

Clearly, then, at night an u[n]desirable condition exists. Th[is] must be minimized or rectifi[ed] if possible. That is exactly wh[at] the new W-G-N radiating syste[m] attempts to do—to push the fa[d]ing area outward from the tra[ns]mitting station.

By reducing the signal s[ent] skyward at high angles and [in]creasing the signal sent out [di]rectly above the earth at l[ow] angles the fading area is reduc[ed] and the area served by t[he] ground wave augmented.

The new radiating system h[as] demonstrated that it has acco[m]plished these results—expandi[ng] the primary service area, wh[ile] maintaining coast-to-coast rec[ep]tion (secondary service are[a]) with a minimum of fading ar[ea].

In the above discussion ter[ms] such as "along the groun[d]," "into the sky," "ground wav[e]" and "sky wave" have been us[ed]. However, these are descript[ive] only. It should be remember[ed] that radio waves, in comm[on] with other electromagne[tic] waves, including light, requ[ire] no material medium for tra[ns]mitting or carrying them.

They appear to travel throu[gh] empty space. The inability [to] understand the propagation [of] these waves without requirin[g a] material medium led scienti[sts] to postulate an "ether" or "[all] pervading medium." But [the] existence of such an "ether" [has] never been affirmed.

Much more than a new radi[at]ing tower is required to prov[ide] superior W-G-N service. Beh[ind] the tower is the new transmit[ter] house, where the radio p[ro]grams, or their electrical equ[iv]alents, are made ready for se[nd]ing out. Beyond the transm[it]ter house are power lines [] bringing the tremendous v[olt]ages required in a modern ra[dio] plant, the special teleph[one] wires that carry the progra[ms] from the studio at Tribu[ne] Square. And behind the mic[ro]phone are the performers the[m]selves.

To appreciate the rôle of

The Story of a Mighty Transmitting Station

A pianist, let us say, strikes a note—middle C—in W-G-N's big audience studio. Before the person in the last row has heard it radio will have carried the tone around the world. For radio travels with the speed of light—more than 186,000 miles a second. Sound waves travel just a little over 1,000 feet a second.

For radio, then, it is necessary to combine sound waves with radio waves. A sound wave sets air in motion. The pitch determines the number of vibrations. For middle C it is 256 vibrations a second. For higher notes the number of vibrations would be correspondingly greater.

These vibrations in the air are converted into electrical impulses by the microphone. When middle C is struck the microphone will vibrate 256 times a second. Behind its surface flows electric current. As the microphone responds to the middle C vibrations, so does the electric current.

The microphone converts sound waves into electrical frequencies in exact accordance with those set up by the sound waves.

These vibrations of electrical energy in this form will not carry through space. So they are conducted by telephone wires to the radio transmitter.

Here these electrical equivalents for sound are built up to tremendous intensities; they are "modulated," or superimposed on radio waves. Finally they are radiated from the transmitter system into space. In the receiving sets of the nation they are reconverted into sound.

All this takes place practically instantaneously. But it is a vastly complicated matter. There is the matter of obtaining a supply of electrical power and preparing it for broadcasting.

Two power lines carry to the W-G-N plant the electricity necessary to operate the many units that are needed. One line carries 33,000 volts from Waukegan to W-G-N's "north" substation. The other carries 12,600 from Maywood to a "south" substation. The first is the regular source of power, the second an alternate or emergency source. These substations are just off the road on the W-G-N site.

The substations contain transformers for reducing the voltages to 2,300 volts. In this state the power is carried by underground cable to the basement of the transmitter house. Here it is metered and distributed.

That portion of the power which is to be used in the transmitter proper must undergo considerable refinement before it is usable. Up to this point it is "raw" alternating current. Before it can be used it must be changed into "pure" or "unipotential" current. This refinement is made in a unit called a rectifier.

Then the rectified current is passed through a filter. Here final traces of "ripple" are removed. If this were not done the radio or carrier wave would produce an annoying hum in home receivers.

The current is now ready for use in modulation. Modulation, you remember, is the coupling of the signals, or sounds from the studio, with the radio wave or carrier. A carrier wave is just about what it says. Like a horse, it carries a "rider," the rider in this case being the middle C note that has been sent out to the transmitter from the studio. This "load" is brought from the studio through special telephone wires.

The signals from the studio encounter the modulator, which unites them with the radio waves, created by a crystal oscillator. The loaded carrier must operate in a given pathway. That is the station's frequency. W-G-N is assigned to 720 kilocycles. Each station must stay exactly on its pathway of frequency. In the transmitter house are instruments to check on its adherence to the channel on which it is licensed to operate.

A cannon cannot be fired without ammunition. That is true of radio waves, too. Before they are ready for projection they must be tremendously strengthened, or amplified. This takes place in the tubes of the transmitter. There are six stages of amplification. Four types of tubes are used. These vary in size. The largest cost $1,650 each.

A whole set of tubes costs around $7,000. A complete set of spares must be kept on hand at all times.

High power in radio transmitters is possible only because of water cooling in the tubes. The tubes are not very efficient. They waste power in the form of heat. Air-cooled tubes of more than 5,000 watts are impractical. But water-cooled tubes of 100,000-watt capacity are practical and in regular use. W-G-N uses two such tubes.

An elaborate water-cooling system is employed to keep the tubes cooled to a safe operating temperature. One hundred gallons of distilled water is pumped through the jackets of the tube system each minute. Some of the heated water is diverted through a ventilating system and provides regular heat for the building in the winter time.

In describing a process that is exceptionally elaborate it is easy to err on the side of simplification. A transmitting station is a vastly complicated combination of electrical and mechanical units. These play many rôles, some obscure to laymen, but all necessary.

The transmitter house is filled with automatic devices designed to keep a broadcast on the air in the event of many types of failure—electrical, mechanical, or human elements. In the event of the failure of a normal source of power supply a selector switch will employ an auxiliary or emergency line.

Complicated organisms require a nerve center to operate and control them. As may be expected, a modern transmitter has such a coördinating center. It is called the master control desk. In it are located a score or more controls. Many indicators are watched by an operator who sits in a comfortable chair.

Some of the things indicated or controled on its panel are:

Power line voltage and current.

Plate voltages on various transmitter units.

Current in the antenna.

Audio program level going into the transmitter.

Percentage of modulation.

Deviation from the assigned frequency.

Lights indicate the proper operation of numerous units in the complete transmitter. There are many other controls and indicators—baffling and mystifying to any one but a technical expert. To him they are filled with meaning. They give him control over mighty forces with his finger tips. This type of control makes for greater efficiency in operation, as well as for safety.

A radio station is never unattended. Even when it goes off the air it requires the presence of technicians to care for it.

After the radio cargo has been given its last boost in amplification it leaves the transmitter house, whence it is sent by a transmission line to a little cubicle at the base of the insulator called the tuning house. Here it is given one final touch before it is ready to go out on the air.

And then comes the final dramatic step of transmitting, or the flashing of the signals through space.

To capture this electric cargo you must know the roadway it is traveling. In this intance set your dial at 720 and the receiver will do the rest. In a flash middle C will be sounding in your ears. While it took many minutes to read this article, it required only the tiniest part of a second for this note to reach you. Such is the magic of radio.

Beach Ideal for Action Photos

MILLIONS of pictures are snapped on the beaches every year, but the average amateur has little to show for this tremendous consumption of film. While he is apt to blame his camera, the fact remains that under the truly ideal photographic conditions on a sunlit beach even the humblest of box cameras should produce perfect pictures.

Most beach pictures are spoiled by overexposure. Water and sand reflect the strong summer sunlight with the result that your film is burned to a dark tone and that prints from such films appear chalky white, lacking interesting detail. To avoid overexposure, you should increase your shutter speed and decrease the lens opening by closing the diaphragm. Furthermore, you should use the slower types of film, especially if your shutter does not permit high speeds.

One way to reduce the intensity of the light and at the same time gain a number of other advantages is to use a filter. The best filter for all-around amateur use is a medium yellow which cuts the light approximately in half. Beyond that it influences the balance of colors in your subject in such a way that clouds will stand out against the sky, clear separation will show between sky and water, water and sand, sand and the tone of human skin.

People go to the beach for play and exercise. Consequently action is the keynote of good beach pictures. You, too, should strive to capture interesting "candid" action in preference to posed portraits for which the beach is not the proper place. The faster the action the higher shutter speeds you will have to use and the more light you will need. If it is fast action you are after, such as diving or a lively ball game, you may have to open up your diaphragm all the way, simultaneously increasing your shutter speed.

However, no amount of light will help you stop the fastest types of action unless you have a fast shutter. Failing that, you will have to resort to little tricks. If you increase your distance from your subject chances are that you will stop the action at relatively slow shutter speeds. ...e of the best aerial pho- ...hs were not taken with ... cameras but with ordinary ...nd" cameras of the type ...by amateurs. The profes- sional photographers who made them did not even use special planes. They shot their pictures through the closed windows of regular transport planes.

All of which goes to show that any amateur can get similar pictures on a flight if he only follows a few simple rules. Naturally, cameras with fast lenses and shutters have a jump on less elaborate equipment. However, many excellent pictures can be taken at speeds as low as 1/25 second. All depends on what you are shooting. If you photograph the ground rushing past your plane at low altitudes, or bright clouds, you will naturally need high shutter speeds in the neighborhood of 1/200 to 1/500 second. For shooting darker sections of the landscape, lower speeds will suffice.

Vibration, caused by the motors, has ruined many an aerial shot. Therefore, never rest your camera against the window pane and never lean against the body of a plane while shooting.

By using filters you will get pictures that are rich in tonal values and separation. A good medium yellow filter will cut through much of the often present haze and will help you get dramatic, billowy clouds. If the light is poor, substitute a light yellow filter.

Anybody who can handle a camera on the ground can take good aerial photographs.

LENS NOTES

KEEP YOUR camera in the shade. If you expose it to the sun for any length of time, especially without a cap on your lens, light may leak in and fog the film. For the same reason you should always load and unload film in the shade, even if it comes in "daylight" packages.

AMONG THE simplest ways to prevent slipping of your tripod is this one: Fasten three equal lengths of string or wire to the three legs of the tripod and connect the free ends with each other. If the tripod legs have been set sufficiently apart, you will have a firm support for your camera.

YOU CAN steady your camera without a tripod for making snapshots at speeds slower than 1/25 second. Attach 6 feet of light chain to a short bolt which has been screwed into the tripod socket on your camera. Step on the chain and press the camera up. The taut chain will steady the camera in your hand and will permit exposures as slow as 1 second.

The Story of Sugar—Its Travels

● This is the first of two articles on the amazing chemistry of sugar and the important rôle that product has played in history and in human life.

By GREER WILLIAMS

THE USE of sugar is commonly believed to have originated in the orient, probably India, where natives extracted it from the juice of the cane at least 2,000 years before the discovery of America. How sugar came to this continent is a story of the conquest of land and sea.

The ancient Greeks and Romans had no sugar except honey, and this was a comparatively rare delicacy. Early man satisfied his craving for sweets by eating plants containing sugar.

From the east sugar cane cultures spread westward into Persia. When the Arabs swept over that country they discovered the cane and brought it into Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, and Egypt. The Arabs extended its culture westward along the Mediterranean sea and by the eighth century A. D. had introduced sugar cane into Spain along with bloody scimitars.

The demand grew far beyond the ability of the Mediterranean countries to supply it, and the Venetian sea traders were quick to profit. They brought sugar, spices, and silk to Europe from the near and far east. In the fourteenth century they had a virtual monopoly on the sugar business. Sugar was still available only to the rich, either as a tidbit or a medicine, and the Venetians profiteered by keeping it so.

Europeans resented the high price of sugar, and the Portuguese decided to break the Venetian monopoly through establishment of a sea commerce of their own. While searching without success for a new route to India they spread the culture of sugar to Madeira, the Azores, Canary, and other newly discovered islands along the northwest coast of Africa. By 1472 Venice gave way to Portugal as a sea power.

Then in 1492 Queen Isabella and King Ferdinand of Spain sent Christopher Columbus in search of a western route to India. One of the islands he discovered was Haiti, to which in 1493, on his second voyage, he carried sugar cane plants.

In a letter to the king and queen, Columbus, in passing, marveled "at the way a few small canes planted here have taken root." But, preoccupied with his search for gold, he was unaware of the significance of this agricultural innovation in the fertile American tropics. Others caught the idea, however, and by 1506, the year Columbus died, sugar refining was under way in Haiti, aided by the slave trade which he had introduced.

The sugar market continued to profit by slave labor for a great many years to come. When the British created sugar plantations in the Barbados in the seventeenth century the West Indies became the rival of the East Indies in supplying the European sugar market.

Sugar cane was introduced in the United States in 1751 when Jesuits brought the plant from Haiti to Louisiana. Antonio Mendiy in 1792 refined the first Louisiana cane sugar, and Etienne de Bore in 1794 produced it for the first time on a commercial scale. The plantations of these two men now form a part of the city of New Orleans.

In 1747 Andreas Marggraf, working in a Berlin laboratory, discovered in a white beet the same kind of sugar found in cane. Sugar beets had been eaten for their sweetness as early as the pyramid building of Cheops. In the 1780s another German, Karl Franz Achard, developed a method of making beet sugar in commercial quantities. The British became alarmed that their world sugar trade might be jeopardized.

Their war with Napoleon Bonaparte stimulated the development of beet sugar. When the English blockaded France the price of sugar rose to one dollar a pound. Napoleon ordered that sugar beets be made a national industry. Much was done in the establishment of the industry before the battle of Waterloo crushed the beet sugar trade and Napoleon, too.

For some years afterward beet sugar factories were unable to withstand the competition of sugar from the Indies. But protective laws and improved methods of extraction eventually put beet sugar on a paying basis in France and Germany.

James Pedder of the Beet Sugar Society of Philadelphia and Edward Church of Northampton, Mass., were the fathers of beet sugar culture in America. In the 1830s they studied European methods.

David Lee Child in 1838 established America's first beet farm and refinery in Northampton. His venture lasted only two seasons. He produced 1,300 pounds at the cost of 11 cents a pound, compared with 1 to 1⅛ for East Indian sugar.

The Mormons attempted to grow sugar beets and refine them in Utah in the 1850s, but were unsuccessful. The Gennett brothers, from Germany, established a factory at Chatsworth, Ill., in the 1860s, but after a few years moved their machinery on to Freeport, Ill., and then to Blackhawk, Wis. They failed commercially, however, as did fourteen beet sugar refineries between 1838 and 1879.

Then E. H. Dyer succeeded in holding his own, establishing in 1870 a refinery in Alvarado, Cal., which by 1879 was showing a profit. Eventually the government came to the rescue with a tarif on foreign sugar and by organizing beet culture research.

Stimulated by industrial progress in the refining of beet and cane sugar, which cheapened prices, the world consumption of sugar soared. In the United States, for instance, the annual per capita consumption rose from 9 to 85 pounds in the eighty years preceding the World war.

World sugar production 1913-'14 totaled 20,000,000 tons, about half cane and half beet.

As had happened time and again in history, the World war made sugar scarce and drove the price up. The American price rose from 5 or 6 cents a pound to 25 or 26 between 1914 and 1920. But sugar production in Germany and France was particularly hard hit. The world output of beet sugar was reduced by half from 1914 to 1919.

The demand inspired the sugar islands, such as Cuba, to increase their output until during the post-war decade overproduction buried the industry in depression. The violent fluctuations of the world market have caused sugar to be called the "prince and pauper" industry, since it has made and then broken many an investor.

The United States' traditional policy has been to protect domestic beet and cane sugar producers with tariffs against foreign imports. Under the present administration, however, quotas are assigned to all areas supplying the American market. These give Hawaii, Porto Rico, the Philippine Islands, and the Virgin Islands benefits equaling those obtained by domestic producers, and permit Cuba alone to supply as much sugar as produced in the United States.

The United States consumes nearly 25 per cent of the world supply of sugar and produces about 5 per cent of it. In the 1937-'38 sugar season the world produced 36,000,000 tons of sugar—23,904,502 cane and 12,095,562 beet. Of the total 1,886,000 was American, 510,000 tons being cane sugar from Louisiana and Florida and 1,376,000 tons beet sugar from a dozen states. Colorado, California, Montana, Nebraska, Wyoming, Idaho, Michigan, and Utah are the leaders.

Meanwhile United States territories—Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Virgin Islands—produced 2,019,360 tons, all cane. Cuba, which pays a small duty, and the Philippines, whose imports remain tarif-free until the country becomes independent, produced 3,360,000 and 1,103,200 tons respectively. Their combined total is 4,463,200, about two-thirds of which was imported by the United States.

India is the leading cane sugar producer of the world, totaling 7,355,000 tons in 1937-'38, practically all of which was consumed domestically in the form of gur, a low-grade variety. Cuba ranks second, and Java third with 1,568,000 tons.

Soviet Russia leads the world in production of beet sugar, totaling 2,800,000 tons. Germany is second with 2,330,000 and the United States third.

In addition to cane and beet sugar the United States in 1937 produced 208,825 tons of corn sugar (glucose), 516,734 tons of corn sirup, 156,900 tons of cane molasses, 101,340 tons of sugar cane sirup, 47,660 tons of sorgo sirup, 10,219 tons of maple sirup, and 499 tons of maple sugar. The department of agriculture's 1938 agricultural statistics, which provided these figures, did not include honey production, which is scattered. Texas is the principal producer of sorghum and Vermont and New York state of maple sirup. Iowa heads the corn-producing states.

The United States' total annual production of sugar and sugar products approximates 3,000,000 tons, while its consumption approaches 9,000,000. Only the Australians rank above Americans as sugar consumers. Here are some pre-war and present-day comparisons of annual sugar consumption:

Nation	Pounds per capita Pre-war	Present-day
Australia	..	129
United States	85	112
England	95	91
Sweden	..	80
France	43	49
Germany	49	48
Mexico	..	28
Japan	..	20
Italy	11	19
Russia	24	14
China	..	5

The average for the world is about 31 pounds per capita.

Log of Sea Flight

By WAYNE THOMIS

BROADWAY to the Avenue des Champs Elysées—New York to Paris in 47½ hours. Fifteen of us did it. It wasn't a stunt. What we did will be commonplace tomorrow, for we were merely passengers aboard the Atlantic Clipper, a 42-ton four-motored flying hotel. We were officially special observers, previewing the Atlantic route, the facilities and the airplanes that Pan American Airways has opened to the general public. Our flight began at Port Washington, L. I., and included landing at Horta, Azores; Lisbon, Portugal, and Marseilles, France.

June 17—Port Washington.

2:30 p. m.—We file aboard, carrying our typewriters and cameras. The stewards—Joseph Raviol and René Mezenen—meet us at the door. They say: "Spread out through the rear compartments. You cannot enter the bow compartment. It is just for the takeoff. To balance the plane."

2:34—The mooring lines have been released. We are off for Europe. The Clipper sits deep in the water with her heavy load. Aboard are thirty persons—twelve crew and eighteen newspaper men and women and Pan American Airways representatives. Also we have 3,480 gallons of fuel in the wing and sponson tanks. It weighs 20,880 pounds alone, almost as much as the airplanes used on domestic air lines. Our motors tick over slowly as we slide away from the dock and head down Manhasset bay toward the open channel of Long Island sound. Around us are motor cruisers and sailboats, and Capt. Wallace D. Culbertson maneuvers us slowly through them.

2:55—We are in the air with a jerk after a run of 42 seconds. I understood why the takeoff was so abrupt when, almost immediately after we left the water, we flashed over a twin-masted sailing yacht. Hours later I mentioned the takeoff to the skipper, and he growled: "Yeah, I had to pull her off the water. There was a whole fleet of yachts in our path. They don't know enough to get out of our way, and there's no chance to keep the channel clear. They have as much right on the sound as we do."

3 p. m.—We're still skimming along 100 feet above the water. Our nose is high in the air in a near stall and our speed is slow. The motors are howling. These big boats, taking off with full load, fly in what seems almost a stall.

3:40 p. m.—There has just been another adjustment of the engines. We're at 8,000 feet, having climbed at an average of 200 feet a minute for forty minutes. We'll stay at this altitude all the way to Horta, 2,397 miles away on a great circle course, unless a change in flight plan becomes necessary. The Clipper's nose still is high in the air because the plane is carrying such a heavy load. As the load is lightened—the motors burn 1,200 pounds of gasoline an hour during the early part of the flight—the crew will trim the plane to a level flight position.

3:50—I'm sitting in cabin No. 3—third back from the bow compartment—picking away at my typewriter. We're settling down now, having explored the passenger deck from the stem—where there are 1,200 pounds of radio transmitters and receivers for broadcasts that are scheduled for later—to the stern, where the so-called bridal suite is situated. The bridal suite is a private compartment for two, with dressing table, berths, and other appointments of a Pullman compartment.

The second deck or flight deck contains the pilots' cockpit, the navigator's and radio operators' stations, the flight engineer's post, and the skipper's desk.

4:30—My first dispatch has been filed with the plane's radio operators. The plane's operators can handle only a few hundred words an hour, because they are busy for forty minutes out of each sixty in sending and receiving weather reports, position reports, and taking bearings on ships or shore stations.

Our cruising height is above the general cloud level, and the surface of the sea has been hidden most of the time.

6 p. m.—Skipper Culbertson descended from the bridge to chat with his passengers. He ordered the women to dress for dinner, telling them that they are the first women to fly the Atlantic and therefore must set the pace for others who follow. He promised to allow them to dine at his table if they obeyed.

7:30 p. m.—Dinner. White damask, china dishes, crystal glasses, and a special sort of light-weight silverware. The stewards move deftly from table to table serving a five-course dinner. Olives and celery, consommé, sirloin of beef, rissole potato and new peas, French pastry, demi-tasse and mints. Captain Culbertson shares a table with three of the women, who are dazzling in white, gold, and blue gowns. Steward Raviol comes around pouring champagne—Pommery and Geno—just as the sun touches the horizon.

8:30—It's been dark for thirty-five minutes. We've run beneath a high cloud layer, so that there are clouds below us, hiding the sea, and clouds above. The navigator doesn't like it. He's unable to get any star sights to aid the radio in navigating the ship. He dropped into a seat to explain: "The first couple of hours out from Port Washington we took bearings on commercial broadcast stations WEEI at Boston, WEAF at Bellmore, L. I., and at WPG, Atlantic City, N. J. We used the southeast leg of the Boston radio range station (a Civil Aeronautics authority station, chiefly for domestic land plane use) to give us a ground speed check."

Capt. William A. Winston, first officer on the flight, strolls by. The captain is a veteran of the Pacific and South American divisions and is to become the skipper of the new Dixie Clipper, latest of the Boeing boats, on his next trans-Atlantic trip.

Inside the Clipper there is no indication of speed—hardly any of motion. Occasionally there is a smooth and gentle roll—much like that of a boat in a long, easy swell. Outside stars are hidden, and to me—looking out the window—it seems as though we are standing still in a vast and pitch-black window.

10 p. m.—The navigator has just taken sights on Jupiter, caught through a hole in the upper layer of clouds, that now is breaking up.

The two groups of broadcasting experts—an announcer and an engineer from each of two systems—are hard at work. The crew, the stewards, and most of the correspondents have been called to microphones to talk to New York from the ship. Several of us still are writing and the rest are turning in to berths that have been made up since the trip began.

11:12—The last hour has passed swiftly in chatting with Captain Culbertson—most of us are calling him "Cubby," his name with every one ashore. The crew, however, following sea formality, speak of him as "captain" to his face and "the skipper" when he is not present.

NEXT SUNDAY—The Beacon in Midocean.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

Setter Long an Ally of Hunters

A Great Dane that has won many show honors both in Europe and America. The dog's name is Ch. Tiger Hexengold of Bras Tam, and he's owned by F. W. Evanger of Wheeling, Ill.

THE FIRST person who systematically trained setters for field work is supposed to have been Dudley Duke of Northumberland, England, in the year 1335. This note is from Youatt's famous old book on dogs (published in 1857), and it gives us a pretty good idea of how long the beautiful, gentle English setter has been used as an ally and companion of sportsmen in the field. Popular as a show dog because of its handsome coat, style, and all-around beauty, the setter also is a great favorite of the sportsman. Because it makes an excellent companion dog, many are kept as pets in the home, too.

There isn't much doubt that our modern setter had its origin in the older spaniels. The spaniels from which the setter was developed probably came from Spain. The early dog fanciers wanted a "setting dog" of pretty good size. So by experimenting with several breeds, including the land spaniels, they finally developed the first setters. The most interesting document that we have seen on the early training of the setter or "sitting spaniel" for hunting purposes is one that Youatt prints in his book. It tells how a yeoman of England bound himself "fully and effectually to teach a spanile named Quand to sitt partridges, pheasants, and other game as well and exactly as the best sitting dogges usually set the same."

The yeoman asked the huge sum of 10 shillings for his work, which would be approximately $2.50 today.

Although this training contract is dated 1685 and is the first of its kind that we ever have seen, there is every reason to believe that the first "setting spaniel" or setter was trained at least several hundred years before 1685.

Laverack and Llewellin are two names that mean much in the history of the setter. Edward Laverack bred some marvelous specimens of English setters in the early part of the nineteenth century. (Two of these came to America in 1874.)

Many dog fanciers still are puzzled about the name Llewellin. They believe that a Llewellin is an entirely different breed as compared to the English setter. Actually it's a blood line of English setters. R. L. Purcell Llewellin purchased two of Mr. Laverack's best setters at the time that the Laverack strain was the talk of the dog world. The dogs that Mr. Llewellin purchased were crossed with some entirely new blood which was obtained in northern England. The result of these crosses was very successful. The dogs that Mr. Llewellin produced had the qualities that made them outstanding in the field, and they swept everything before them, particularly in field trials. The reputation of these setters bred in Llewellin's kennels soon spread to America and many of them were purchased by sportsmen for field work.

American sportsmen naturally admired this man who had developed such a marvelous type of hunting dog, so it was only logical that they should call every dog imported from his kennel a Llewellin. Then all stock bred from these dogs also was given the name, which eventually became well established in the dog world.

France Keeps What She Gets!

The Story of World Empire

(Acme photo.)

French were "a gay people, fond of dancing and light wines." As a major premise the statement was misleading. The French are a tough race; dramatic, but militant and acquisitive.

Their first great dramatic spree was the French revolution, brought on because a spendthrift government couldn't avoid deficits. They came out of it fighting all Europe, and willingly.

Napoleon understood the French. He stood before a starving army of 37,000 at the start of his brilliant career and informed them that victory, supplies, wealth lay across the mountains in Italy. When victory was achieved he looted Italy of her art treasures and forced on Austria a treaty that guaranteed to France the territories the revolutionary armies had won.

When, by good fortune and the force of genius, he seized power, Napoleon formed a new aristocracy. Its members were men of ability, and he guaranteed their loyalty to himself by making them rich. He took the lands of his enemies and set kings over them. Bonapartes occupied the thrones of Holland, of Spain, of Westphalia. Murat the innkeeper's son became king of Sicily. Much of Italy itself was attached to the Napoleonic empire and governed directly by prefects sent out from Paris.

Never since the days of Charlemagne had there been such an empire as Napoleon governed in 1810. It was too great, too cumbersome. The man at the top was inadequate. He wasted his resources in men and money striving to conquer the far-spreading steppes of Russia. Fortune deserted him, and he was on Elba in 1814. A year later the hundred days and Waterloo ushered him to St. Helena. Napoleon was gone for good.

The great empire shrank until it was no larger than it had been in the days of the unlucky Louis XVI. Once again the lesson had been rubbed in—conquered lands must be retained by force.

At the close of the Napoleonic wars France had little in the way of colonies. Her only African possession was the tiny trading post of Senegal. North Africa was ruled by the Barbary pirates. She did have a discoverer's claim on Madagascar, but had made no movement to occupy and pacify that island, larger by itself than the homeland. Canada had been seized by the British long before, and St. Pierre and Miquelon were the tiny slices she held in North America. In the West Indies she owned Martinique and Guadeloupe.

Five cities that make up French India had been occupied only a few years. France was occupied by internal troubles and exhausted by the Napoleonic ventures. The Bourbon king who had been restored, Louis XVIII., was weak and barely able to cope with the dissatisfaction of his subjects. Charles was no better.

But France rose courageously when the dey swatted M. Deval.

Algeria was a difficult assignment. Frenchmen fought for years under the broiling African sun to impose their will on the natives. The job was far from complete when King Charles was deposed in 1830 and succeeded by Louis Philippe.

This Louis Philippe was the son of the duke of Orleans who had helped stir up the revolution and had voted for the beheading of Louis XVI. (the duke also was guillotined). He promised to rule constitutionally after the mobs which had driven Charles out agreed to let him have the throne.

Drab as he was, the new king could not relinquish the African adventure without loss of honor. The situation was serious. The French held the coast towns, but an able leader, Abd-el-Kader, had preached a holy war against the invaders.

In the end 115,000 soldiers were sent out under General Bugeaud to conquer the Algerians. The final surrender did not occur until 1847. It was too late to add much prestige to the reign of the citizen king, as he called himself. The next year the Parisians were again on the barricades battling the Orleans soldiery and the king had to abdicate and flee to England. He lacked the touch of drama that the French demand. He carried an umbrella!

Three kings in thirty-three years had added only Algeria to the possessions of France. That country was, of course, a great prize. It was close to home and capable of producing great agricultural wealth—a million and a quarter square miles in which 7,000,000 persons, including 500,000 French, now live.

The second republic, which followed Louis Philippe, had a short and precarious existence. France didn't quite know what she wanted, and a new Bonaparte, clever, unprincipled, and inordinately ambitious, appeared on the scene.

Prince Louis Napoleon was the name. He was the son of Louis, the brother whom the great Napoleon had seated on the throne of Holland. His mother was Hortense de Beauharnais, daughter of Josephine, the first Napoleonic consort. He was 40 when the second republic was proclaimed.

For years he had been an exile in Germany, Switzerland, and England. "Napoleonic liberty," he insisted, was what the French needed. He even found writings of the bigger Napoleon to prove that there had been liberty under the old empire.

Prince Louis Napoleon became a real nuisance in 1836 when at Strasbourg he tried to incite the garrison to revolt against Louis Philippe. The attempt failed, and he was arrested and sent to America. He returned to England and went on with his plots.

When he led a comical expedition across the channel in 1840 he was locked up in the fortress of Ham, where he remained until his escape six years later. The Napoleonic legends were reviving and a romantic seemed to the French a needed contrast to the stuffiness of the last king. Louis Napoleon ran for president of France and received three-fourths of all the votes.

Less than three years later he threw off the democratic mask and proclaimed himself the Emperor Napoleon III. He surrounded himself with an unprincipled body of advisers. One was his half-brother, the Duc de Morny, illegitimate son of Hortense and an army officer. Another was St. Arnaud, a general who had won a reputation for bravery in Algerian campaigns. Military power prevented Napoleon's expulsion.

This usurper, who was faintly ridiculous even to his subjects (they called him Moustachu, a comment on his whiskers), remained for twenty years the most important figure in European politics. He stuck his nose into every quarrel. He negotiated and plotted officiously. He made several little wars, and one fairly large one in the Crimea, from which he escaped creditably. By aiding Cavour in the unifying of Italy he obtained Nice and Savoy for France.

On the old Napoleonic model he established a court, magnificent but not quite real. Its habitués were men and women with backgrounds of family service with Napoleon I. Legitimate European royalty recognized it, but shied away from it in a social sense. The emperor was refused a princess allied to a throne for a bride. Eventually he married Eugénie de Montijo, a tall, red-haired lady of the minor Spanish nobility.

She dressed spectacularly. She set the modes for Europe in the days of the huge hoop skirts. The French dubbed her Queen Crinoline. Together she and the emperor governed more royally than real royalty could have done it. They even felt that they had assured a dynasty to France when their one son, the prince imperial, nicknamed Lou-Lou, was born.

In the beginning Napoleon III. was successful in his foreign ventures. His armies aided in quelling a revolt against Turkey in Syria. The Suez canal was started by De Lesseps under his patronage. His soldiers engaged in an informal war with China in 1860 and on the way home took over and occupied Cochin-China, first of the great Asiatic dependencies of France.

NAPOLEON

But an ambitious attempt to give Mexico the status of a French possession ended dismally. The little Napoleon decided to seat a puppet emperor on the Mexican throne and persuaded the Archduke Maximilian of Austria to take the place. Then he sent an army with Maximilian and his "empress," Carlotta, to Vera Cruz. The British and Spanish governments had collaborated at first, but withdrew when they understood Napoleon's real aim. The original idea was they were only to collect debts from the Mexicans.

If the United States hadn't been busy with the Civil war the bold plan would have been squelched at once. As it was the French conquered a part of Mexico and set Maximilian in Chapultepec. But Juarez and his army kept up their resistance.

When the Civil war was over the United States sternly recalled the Monroe doctrine to Napoleon's attention. He recalled his troops. With them went Carlotta; Maximilian remained to hold on to his imperial dignity.

In Paris poor Carlotta, knowing what his fate would be, tried to get Napoleon to keep his pledges. He would not or could not. The Mexican empress went on to Rome to beg the pope for aid. He was kindly but could promise nothing, and Carlotta went quite mad in the Vatican. She never recovered. Maximilian was captured and executed in Queretaro.

Napoleon's popularity waned after that. His physical and mental powers became enfeebled with age and he fell more and more under the domination of the empress. She judged incorrectly that the empire, if it was to endure much longer, had to make a spectacular success. She guessed incorrectly that the French could go to war with Prussia and win.

Bismarck, the chancellor of Prussia, had much better information. He knew that his government had built up a magnificent army. He knew, too, that Eugénie was a tyro in politics and the French army was ill equipped for modern warfare. The empress wanted to whip Germany and save her throne; Bismarck wanted to humble France to make his country, with the rest of the German lands incorporated, the first power on the continent.

A dispute arose over the succession of the crown of Spain. Prussia had a candidate, and so had France. Artfully Bismarck arranged things so that the fading Napoleon, listening to Queen Crinoline's advice, declared war in July, 1870.

The campaigns that followed were swift. In early September the emperor, with more than 100,000 men, surrendered at Sedan. Napoleon was sent into Germany as a prisoner, and the empress strove to carry on a regency for her 14-year-old son. France would have none of this and deposed Napoleon.

German successes continued. Paris fell after a long and terrible siege. King William of Prussia, in the palace of Versailles, imposed a harsh peace. The provinces of Lorraine and Alsace, with a population of 1,500,000, were taken from France and incorporated in Germany, and the French were compelled to pay an indemnity of a billion dollars.

So the second empire ended. Napoleon went to England, where he died a few years later. Lou-Lou was killed while fighting with the British against the savage Zulus in 1879. The Empress Eugénie, like a historic ghost, lived on until 1920.

The French were only defeated in 1870; they were not destroyed. The indemnity was paid in an unbelievably short time and the Germans removed their army of occupation. But the war was not forgotten. It can be said that French national consciousness for nearly half a century was dominated by the belief that the defeat of Napoleon III. must be avenged.

The third republic was born of strife. With the Germans still in the country, in 1871, there was a civil war. Reds revolted against the national assembly and fortified parts of Paris. They were attacked and after sharp battles defeated by the assembly's armies. Before they gave in the Reds executed many prisoners, including the archbishop of Paris, and burned the Tuileries, the library of the Louvre, and other buildings.

After that the new government functioned with a fair degree of success. It had many problems. Not the least of them was the necessity of combating plots to bring back a monarchy, with Bourbons, Orleanists, and Bonapartists impartially offering themselves as candidates.

But France was never again to endure despotic rulers. Once more she had learned that a nation's land must be protected by her own armed power. One of the first acts of the government was to establish universal military conscription, the system under which the admirable

Keep Cool!—and How to Do It

A Few Simple Routines Make Summer Pleasant

By LOUISE BARGELT

MIND THE HEAT? Here are some summer-sense tips for scorching days and blistering nights. Simple and inexpensive ways.

To keep cool you must fight off both the heat which your body is constantly producing and the heat of the air around you.

The first rule to follow is to keep a wholesome respect for that fine heat control apparatus which Dame Nature has given us. Pay attention to what you eat and drink and wear—and how you act and even how you think. Also give your room or your apartment or your house a few first aids to keep out the sun and to keep the air stirring.

Do what work you have to do, but don't get excited about it. Don't get excited about anything! Don't worry or fret or get into hot arguments when the weather is hot. You are more keyed up than usual when the temperature is high, trying to hold on to your pep and muster up the needed energy to go on with your daily tasks. Your nerves are apt to be jumpier than usual, so treat them kindly. Sidestep subjects that lead to bickering, for bickering does make you hot.

When it comes to what to wear when the temperature soars and soars, there are experts who can tell you the heat-resisting powers of every color under the sun. The coolest, most heat-resisting color is white. Next come khaki, light blue, gray, yellow, brown, and dark blue. Black may be snappy, but when the temperature gets to over 90 degrees hunt up some light clothes till the weather cools. Black absorbs the sun's rays—and how!

There are many ways a home can be kept cool without great expense.

Porous materials speed up evaporation, and loose-fitting, heat-deflecting garments keep off the sun, which the exposed skin will absorb greedily if it gets a chance. And if you are at all sensitive to heat, don't discard your hat too rashly. It may save you from a sunstroke. If you want to toss aside anything, put away your tight belts and garters for a cooler spell.

See that you have some provision in your bathroom for a shower or spray, for tub bathing and shower bathing are body coolers.

Don't go too far to the left on that much-discussed topic of the eatless system. You will likely starve along for a couple of days, thinking you are keeping yourself much cooler, and then the third day overeat and feel the heat worse than ever. Just keep to the lighter foods, eating less of starches and sweets and heavy meats.

Cultivate the habit of moderation in hot weather. It is always a worth-while habit, but in summer it is doubly so! Drink plenty of cool water and cool, heat-resisting drinks. (Some people insist, and have insisted the world over for years, that there is nothing more cooling than hot drinks in hot weather. In India Britishers claim that there's nothing better than hot tea to draw blood from the surface of the skin.)

Don't forget, either, that you should do your sun-tanning in the late afternoon or the early morning, when the sun's rays are on a slant and can't beat down on you so directly. If you are blond don't be too disappointed if you find it hard to acquire the tone of an Indian god or goddess. You may not have as much melanin in your skin as a brunette. (And if you have too much you'll freckle!)

There is no reason now—excepting from the viewpoint of the budget—why every one can't have June weather in his house or apartment all summer long. Highly perfected individual units and systems for air cooling and dehumidification and washing and circulation are with us. But if we aren't in a position to afford these units right now, here are a few methods to make our indoors cooler—simple methods, but they'll help.

Look first to your window glass, which lets in all the heat it can get (unless, of course, it is one of the new insulating types). So close your windows early in the day and draw the shades and keep your Venetian blinds or shutters closed. Keep them closed as much as you can and then fling them wide open as the sun goes down.

Check up and discover how much radiant heat awnings will eliminate. They cut it off sharply. Venetian blinds are helpful in softening the sun's glare and will deflect its rays.

Don't forget the boon that electric fans prove when the temperature leaves us gasping. They are potent aids in increasing the evaporation of body moisture. Don't overlook the comfort a small exhaust fan in the kitchen will be when it keeps the air stirring.

If you live in a house of your own, consider attic ventilation, night cooling via the attic fan route. You can also make your home much less open to the blistering heat by insulating your walls and roof and attic floor.

Wherever you may insulate your house you'll find this insulation a barrier to outdoor heat. Then later, when you want to install complete summer air conditioning, and winter air conditioning, too, you'll find you have taken one worth-while step toward an air-conditioned home.

As for mechanical units, ventilating and refrigerating units and systems, these are an entire subject in themselves. There are a number of fine methods for summer cooling. You can cool one room or two, or your entire house.

There are ventilating units you can install in a window and pull in that cooler night air of outdoors. Or you can put an electric fan in a window and let it draw in outside air and put it into motion.

Easy as Pineapple Pie

This pineapple pie is made from canned crushed fruit, flavored with lemon.

"Hot dogs" can look as pretty as this when they're stuffed with mashed potatoes or cheese and baked in the oven.

By MARY MEADE

PINEAPPLE pie, with or without meringue or whipped cream to dress it up, wins the hearts and appetites of all who look upon it. There must be half a dozen good variations of pineapple pie—sometimes it's baked in a double crust with a creamlike filling, sometimes it's made with pineapple juice and gelatin into a fluffy chiffon affair, and other times it appears single-crusted and open-faced, as does this concoction of crushed pineapple.

To make it, get out an eight-inch pie pan and line it with pastry. Then follow this recipe:

PINEAPPLE PIE
(Eight inches)

1 eight-inch unbaked pastry shell
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Mix together sugar, cornstarch, and salt. Pour pineapple from can into pastry shell. Spread evenly and sprinkle with sugar mixture, then lemon juice and rind. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 20 minutes. Reduce heat to 375 degrees and continue baking 20 minutes longer. Garnish with whipped cream just before serving if desired, or cover with meringue and return to oven to brown.

The other food photograph illustrates how easy it is to dress up the humble frankfurter. These "wienies" were split, stuffed with mashed potatoes, and baked until they were hot and the potatoes had tinged with golden brown. Frankfurters may be stuffed with mashed sweet potato or acorn squash, with cheese, or with a rice filling, too. They don't usually require more than ten minutes of cooking by any method.

France's World Empire

army that stood off its enemies in the World war was built.

In a short time France had a large body of well trained soldiers. There was, however, no immediate opportunity to restore prestige on the continent. Germany was still too strong to be antagonized. Easily the French turned to new colonial adventures and made huge additions of lands beyond the seas.

Tunisia came first. In 1881 France advanced the claim that Tunisians were raiding her Algerian borders. The French columns moved and conquered. The bey of Tunis was compelled to sign a treaty that made his country a protectorate of France.

It has since held that status. Only recently steps were taken to make Tunis a colony. Italy, only a hundred miles away from this north African state, has never approved. She has been particularly annoyed by the French dictum that the children born in Tunis of Italian parents are French citizens.

With little delay the French went on absorbing lands. Much blood, much treasure was expended in overcoming and making protectorates of Tonkin and Annam in 1884. They rounded off French Indo-China, which with its 20,000,000 inhabitants still bows to the French will.

In the decade before 1900 France completed the subjugation of western Africa and of her present Congo holdings. Madagascar was made into a colony. The oceanic isles, including beautiful Tahiti and New Caledonia, had long since been pacified.

Most of the acquisitions were made without serious opposition on the part of Eupropean powers. This was not true of Morocco. About 1904 France, Spain, and Great Britain were all laying claim to parts of its mountainous terrain. The British suddenly renounced their demands in favor of France. The entente cordiale, the British-French alliance that still exists, was born. Then Germany stuck in a claim. Kaiser Wilhelm swaggered. He said the rival demands should be laid before a European conference. This was done, but the French position was upheld in general and the Germans had no satisfaction.

In 1911 the "Agidir incident" almost tipped the scales in favor of war. Germany sent a warship to a Moroccan port, officially to protect her nationals. There was more than a suspicion that the real object was to compel the start of a war.

England, however, made plain that she stood firmly with France, and the kaiser backed down, possibly because German war preparations were not sufficiently advanced for a struggle with two such redoubtable opponents. The war was delayed three years. France kept nearly all of Morocco, a troublesome territory that has produced a sizable war or two since 1911.

French territorial expansion was virtually completed by the Versailles peace treaty. The lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine were given back. Syria was handed over as a league of nations mandate. So were the former German possessions, Togoland and the Cameroons in Africa.

The map shows what France has. History teaches that she will keep all of it if she can.

Which Odor in Bath Soap is Lucky for You?

Before you use any soap to combat body odor, smell the soap! Then instinctively, you will choose a soap with the fragrance men love!

SUCCESS in love turns on such unexpected things! Just when you feel victory is yours, your luck deserts you—something happens to transform your confidence into confusion.

But, such disillusionments should only be temporary. Too bad, most women take them deeply to heart, when the trouble can be so easily avoided.
